Dragging his phone out of his pocket, Axel tried to focus on the screen... but the image just became a smeared mess. Fighting back nausea, he closed his eyes and held it out. "Tony, call Soren," Axel said slowly, his voice strained and sickly. "Ask him what the hell's taking so long."

As Tony moved towards his car with Emilena and Axel, he noticed Axel nearly trip, and he grunted, looking back to him, and widened his eyes. "Dammit... you OK?" he asked, realizing swiftly there was something wrong with how he was moving... he wasn't moving the way he normally did, even barring his usual clumsiness. And Buller had poisoned them? What was that crafty canine up to? Playing games with them no doubt.

Shoving Emilena into the backseat, he tried to prop her up as much as he could before Axel leaned heavily against the car looking like... oh no... the poison! It had to be the poison! Axel confirmed this shortly after, and Tony shook his head, feeling helpless as he tried to think of what he could do. As Axel fumbled for his phone, the rat seemed to be having problems looking at the screen. Dammit! Dammit!

"Um..." as Axel held the phone out for him, Tony nodded rapidly. "R-r-right! Right!" he agreed. "You get in the car! I'll swing around the front and pick everyone up!" he ordered, running around the massive front of the big Model J as he dialed Soren's number in the phone. "Come on... come on!" he urged quietly, practically throwing himself in behind the wheel of his still idling car. Setting the phone down briefly, he pushed in the clutch and brake, released the parking brake, and shifted into first gear to get the car rolling. As it started to move, he immediately shifted into neutral, then second, and turned around the back of the building picking up the phone again. "Soren?" he asked, hoping he was there.

Awe continued following the nurse from a discrete distance. Though coming around the corner he made an immediate u-turn. He looked back down the hall and saw what he presumed the door to Olivieri's room and the police detective in charge of taking him in in front of it. Awe cursed to himself in German and walked away, it wasn't worth getting arrested he'd be able to get the crime boss another day. He started making his way back to the group.

Thats good to hear" Marota said softly ' Drugs are starting to take effect, I'm going to fall asleep in a couple minutes. Make sure everyone gets the antidote in them. Better make sure you take one yourself , so you dont collapse. I wager you're feeling the same effects of numbing feet I was. Its only going to get worse the longer you wait. Emilena and Axel are starting to feel the efects now, I'd wager, if they lose consciousness, they'll slip into a coma within a couple hours. Then, without immediate application of the antidote they'll die. Find, them, get them into treatment, then find a place where you can pass out for 10-15 minutes.

Soren moved to catch himself on the doorway as his feet gave out. "Yeah. I'm not sure I have much time left. I'll go find them."

His legs were starting to feel like pillars of concrete but he knew that if he didn't hurry, he'd be dead in a few hours.

The Human hoped that the three would be enough to remove the achylsalt from their systems. Anne, Marita and Marie already had IV lines in place and the stronger antidotes administered. All he had was the three autoinjectors.

Soren immediately ducked out one of the stairwells and quickly headed down the stairs. Thanks to the effort driving up his heart rate, the achylsalts were circulating faster through his body.

Several times, he nearly tumbled down the stairs as his legs gave out but he managed to stumble out into the alleyway. He looked around and saw that it was empty. His fingers trembled as he grabbed his phone from his pocket. He swore as he realized that he missed a call from Axel.

He quickly called the number back. "Axel," he said. "I've got it. I'm in the alleyway in front of the--" Soren grunted as he tumbled to the ground. His legs refused to obey him forcing him to crawl for the dropped cell phone. He picked it back up and tried to see through the haze that began to cloud his vision. "In front of a pharmacy."

The Human didn't bother to hang up as he withdrew one of the autoinjectors and yanked off of the safety cap. Luckily, it had instructions on the side of the device. He pressed it firmly against his thigh and pushed the button at the top. Soren's lower body so numb that he didn't feel the large needle go into his thigh. Almost immediately, he could feel some sensation going back into his legs but drowsiness washed over him.

As Soren picked up, he must've naturally thought he was talking to Axel. "It's Tony." the ferret responded, but waited to listen to him. He was outside... in the alleyway they'd just left... goddammit!

Putting the phone on speaker and placing it on the seat next to him, Tony pushed the accelerator down and rapidly whipped the big Duesenberg around in a 180° turn and back the way they'd just come, the parking lot fortunately being big enough for such a maneuver. Easily pushing it up a little to race the big motor car back to the alley, he pulled up with a screech as he braked hard, seeing Soren upon the ground. Bringing the car to a halt by completely pushing in the clutch, he shifted back into neutral, then set the hand brake once more by pulling the lever back, listening to it click multiple times as it went into place.

Throwing the door open, he dashed out to Soren. "Soren!" He called. "Soren! Jesus!" Dropping to his knees, he began searching for the antidotes. "You OK?" he asked, paws groping for anything that felt like an injector or vial or something... and as he found two, he pulled them out, then tried to drag the human forward towards the car. "I brought transportation... the others?" he asked, grunting as he slid him along, releasing him after a few feet. "I'm going to help the others! I'll be back!" He told him, racing over to the car to yank the back door open.

"Here!" He handed an injector to Axel, and looked down at the nude Emilena. Well... the legs were usually good places to jab... he wasn't sure where... just somewhere along the thigh. Looking for a vein as best he could, he pushed the injector against her, then shoved the button down, hoping this worked. Tossing the "pen" into the backseat, he exhaled, looking around at Soren, then back to Emilena. "Please work... please work..." he whispered, unsure really how fast this was supposed to happen. Maybe she wouldn't regain consciousness for several hours... he just wasn't sure, as he wasn't a doctor.

Emilena let out a small gasp and her muscles relaxed. She couldn't roll over or move, but it was clear the antidote had done something. "Huh. Uhh, didne whom...unh." Her words were slurred and she drooled with every word. She barely glanced a glance at Tony. "You thins..." she murmured before exhaustion overtook her once again and she slipped into a relaxed stupor.

(OOC: Unless Tony or Awe have things to do, should we have a short timeskip soon to where everyone's waking up?)

Biting the inside of his cheek to desperately retain some awareness of his surroundings, Axel flailed with his hands and snatched the injector from Tony's grip. His vision was swimming so he couldn't make out the instructions on the side of the device... but he'd had some experience with injecting substances in the not-too-distant past to know the thigh was a safe bet.

At least you learned one thing in your shitty life, Axel thought somewhat hysterically as he unceremoniously tugged the left side of his jeans down and stabbed the needle into his leg. Pushing the button, he sighed as a cool sensation started to work its way down his leg, and with it some degree of feeling.

With a grunt, he flopped back in the car seat. The injector fell from his fingers and landed with a clunk at his feet. "Jesus, you guys cut it... cut it petty short..." Axel swallowed. His tongue suddenly felt like a lump of lead in his mouth. His head grew fuzzy, eyelids impossible to keep open. "Than-" Axel started to say. Then he collapsed, int unconsciousness and across Emilena.

As Tony watched the antidotes start to take effect, he hoped to god or whatever existed that this worked... it seemed to make them pass out, but upon studying one of the tubes, he could see that marked drowsiness was a side effect so... perhaps... that was all. The ironic thing was, the hospital was right there... far better equipped to handle this than him, but they were trying to escape so... while he felt this wasn't the entire party, he wasn't sure what to do. They all had phones... they could stay in contact.

As some random person approached him whom he didn't recognize, Tony eyed him. "Hell if I know. Who are you anyway?" He asked, moving over to Soren's form and starting to drag him to the car. "If you're coming along, you can sit in the front. Plenty of room up there. I'm going to head to a hotel I think. Let them recuperate... it'll be close enough to the hospital that we can return here if we need to to pick more up." He explained. Opening the Duesenberg's back door, he placed Soren cleanly on the floor. He wasn't too worried about that, as the floor was carpeted and plush and would actually be quite comfortable.

Heading around to the front, he slid behind the wheel, released the parking brake, and shifted into gear as he brought the big automobile around in a semi-circle so he could head back the way he'd come and out of this hospital parking lot. There was a hotel close by, and as he pulled out of the lot and into the street, he watched the lights play off the red and black hood, flashing by in linear motions as he drove along in silence, keeping one paw resting high up on the wheel as he watched cars move by in the opposite lane. All were boring old electrics... sleek, angular, and all the same. No real excitement or thrill there...

Turning into the hotel lot a short time later, he headed down a ramp into the parking garage, and slid into a spot, killing the engine and looking behind him. "Now... we wait..." he commented, not even going to make the attempt to move everyone himself. Exhaling, he waited patiently, tapping his claws on the wheel before reaching over to the glove compartment, pulling out a book, and beginning to read as he settled back in the seat.

"The name's Awe. I offered my services to your friends to get the medication they needed," Awe replied after he had gotten into the front seat. "Awe, eh? Sorry if I was a little blunt earlier... I didn't recognize you, and I've been through a lot with these guys." he explained, hooking a claw to the trio in the backseat. "My name is Tony, Tony Stracci." Awe would see he was a ferret of fairly typical build, a bit on the lanky side, with nothing too remarkable about his appearance save for his clothing seemed a bit out of 1920s Hollywood. He sported a vest, gray shirt underneath, slacks and a flat cap. He fit right in with the decor of the classic automobile they were sitting in. And of course, anyone worth their grain of salt would recognize the name Stracci as a former mob boss empire mostly turned legitimate in recent years.

"Ah, yes I've heard of you," Awe replied. "The mob boss turned legitimate." Awe chuckled a little. Awe was sure that Tony knew Marcus Olivieri was in the hospital they had just broken out of. "Well honestly it was more my old man was really the glue holding our empire together and I guess I just... couldn't fully follow in his footsteps afterwards. Power wasn't all for me... and I wanted to try... making more of a legitimate run out of it." he explained, scratching the back of his head. "I guess I kind of... accidentally met these guys... ended up helping them out... and we've been buddies ever since." he concluded, giving Awe a nod.

"It's always nice to have a friend or two around when you need them," Awe said. "I mainly wanted to go freelance that's why I quit my corporate job. I felt I could just do more outside of a corporate atmosphere." Awe kept his eyes open scanning around the parking garage with his eyes.

"Certainly is... and while I've kind of been out of the fight for a bit..." he nodded, looking into the back seat briefly. "It's good to be back. Heh... so... former corporate employee, eh?" he asked, grinning now. "I don't blame you on leaving... so you're like a... what?" The ferret noticed him looking about the garage, doing a casual scan as well. "Man with a certain set of skills?" he asked, grinning as he didn't go into much detail beyond that.

"Heh well..." the ferret grinned. "I had somewhat inferred that from your statements but..." he whistled. "Werner Industries, eh? I'm familiar with them... let's just say... did some gun running of their products for my father awhile back... and I always wondered about that too... if you could just switch off, being an assassin and all." he commented thoughtfully. "I'd have problems separating my personal life from the professional, but it sounds like you've found a way."

A short time later, Emilena groaned softly as she felt consciousness returning. “Erf…” she muttered. “Man, those achylsalts hit hard...and fast.” She tried to sit up, but realized Axel’s body was still draped over her. “Did the others make it out?”

“The others are fine,” Tony answered dismissively. “You’re the only one who even passed out. Probably because of your underdeveloped immune system.”

“My what?”

“You’re a child. An eight-year old baby pretending to be an adult. The others know it. I know it. You’re not fooling anyone.”

Emilena caught something in his tone. “Tony? Are you...mad at me?”

Tony sighed. “Why the hell would Tony be mad at you?” He turned around, and with a flash of panic Emilena realized he was really Lily. “We’re the ones with unfinished business.”

“Lily!” Emilena tried to scramble out of the car, but Axel’s body was pinning her down.

Lily stared daggers as she climbed into the Model J’s backseat. “I sent you a message. I gave you a location. I need you. But you failed me. You’ve let me down, like you always do.”

“I’m...working on it!” Emilena recoiled as Lily moved her hand towards her. “Wait, don’t kill me!”

“I’m not killing you.” Lily laid a hand on Axel, and his body started shriveling. Before Emilena’s horrified gaze, the rat rapidly aged into a leathery withered corpse. “We had a deal. His life, for the location of the Purifier HQ. You failed at that too.”

“Stop!” Emilena couldn’t tear her eyes away. “Lily, change him back! I just need more time!”

"Too late. His soul is mine.” Lily brushed her hand lovingly against Emilena’s cheek. “Maybe you’ll try harder for your own,” she whispered mockingly, and her voice grew to fill the car. “Find me. NOW. Or you’re next.”

Emilena woke up with a strangled gasp. “Augh!” Head spinning, she tried to sit up and smacked her head against the doorside handle. “Augh!” she repeated, this time clutching her head in pain. “Christ…”

"Heh..." Tony smirked to Awe at the revelation. "Now that doesn't sound half bad! I mean I kind of was like that in my younger days... bit more reckless... always pissing my dad off..." he grinned, opening his mouth to continue, when suddenly, a noise from the back seat caused him to jerk upright and whip his head around as Emilena proceeded to strike her own head on the door handle.

"Jeez!" the ferret exclaimed. "You all right? You're safe... in the back of my car... we're underground at the moment." he informed her, hoping she wouldn't panic or anything like that, as there were a few others heading to their cars in the garage, all of whom he kept a close eye on. "You uh... OK?" he asked, jamming a toothpick in his mouth as he began twirling it a bit in the corner.

Emilena's dream-awakening had not fully prepared her for how dizzy she'd feel upon actually waking up. Her tongue felt like chalk and cold flashes left her skin feeling clammy. "Ughhh..." she groaned, burying her face in her hands. "I'm...fine." She shivered and elected to stay under Axel just for his warmth. "Considering I should be dead. Thanks, sincerely." She looked at the two in the front of the car. "To both of you. Tony for administering this stuff and Awe for being the only reason we managed to get it in the first place."

She wiped cold sweat out of her eyes. "That being said, I wouldn't say no to, maybe a sweater..."

Title: Re: Blanking the Slate

The sound of voices reached Axel. Dim, far away. Urgh... who's talking? It's late, just let me sleep! He groaned as he became aware of a deep, painful throbbing in his head, like a fist knuckling the inside of his skull. Had it been another late night? Too much to drink again? He didn't remember drinking... Not that that means much, I guess.

Axel grunted as something moved under him, a warm body. "Lily, what's -" His cheek brushed fur, and he stopped. Fur? Creaking open his eyes, Axel looked blearily around himself, blinking as he saw Tony sitting up front. Had they gone out together? But then...

Recollection hit him like a tonne of bricks. Eyes wide, Axel looked up to see who he was lying on, and he froze, mouth hanging open dumbly, when he saw it was Emilena.

"Yargh!" He jerked up, his back slamming against the door in his haste to sit up. "Christ, I'm sorry!" Axel winced as the sudden movement sent a jolt of pain shooting through his brain. "Argh, my head..." Taking a second to collect himself, he opened his eyes. "So we made it out? Thanks for getting us out of there Tony, saved our asses..." Axel paused when he noticed the other figure sitting up front.

"Oh... you're here too." He blinked at Awe, one hand still rubbing his temple. "So you came through for us... I, ah, guess I owe you thanks too. If we didn't get those antidotes, that could've been ugly."

Axel glanced across at Emilena, frowning as it only just dawned on him that she had nothing to wear. He hesitated, then unzipped his hoodie, offering it to her. "You can borrow this, if you want. Sorry about the, ah, stains..." As he held it out, Axel looked about. "Wait, where're the others? We've gotta go, if anyone finds out we were here..."

As rat and vulpine came awake, the ferret offered them a small smile, and a nod. "Think nothing of it... when I heard you guys were in trouble... even if it might've been a trap... I decided what the hell? Get my ass down here and bail you out." He watched as Axel provided his sweater to the naked Emilena... which was good, as his dual-cowl phaeton wasn't exactly the most... private car you could be driving about in, even with the windows up.

"The others?" Tony wrinkled his snout up here. "Uh... I would assume back at the hospital. We're really only missing the hounds." he stated, referring to Marita, Rose, and Marie. "I figured the hospital was as safe a place as any for them... and since I figured we needed to get you three off the streets... I took the decision to drive a few blocks away to this hotel, which I knew had a large underground parking garage... perfect to just sit here unassumingly and wait for you guys to wake up." he explained. Pulling the toothpick out of his mouth, he tossed it aside.

"Anyway, we can head back over there if you want... it's only a few blocks away." he offered, resting his right arm on the back of the front seat so he could look at everyone involved.

Soren muttered something as he slowly began to stir. He weakly pushed the door open and emptied what little was in his stomach out onto the pavement. He rubbed his head. "Fuck me," he muttered. "Anyone got some aspirin? Feels like my brain got reformatted."

He wiped his mouth with the back of his hand and spat a few times to get the taste of bile from his mouth. "Ugh, let's hope the others are doing better."

Anne was indeed doing better as the stage of poisoning wasn't as severe as the others. That and she had an IV line that was giving her plenty of fluids. She pressed the button for the nurse. Hopefully she could simply be discharged and they won't be asking too many questions about how she got poisoned.

Marita and marie stirred in their hospital rooms, both slowly feeling the after effects of the drugs used to clean out their systems' Marita sat up in her bed and sent a text to anne and soren " Up in bed. Feeling worlds better. will be needing a pickup. Marie will be getting out a couple minutes after me Will be waiting near the hospital enterance- MArita ' Marita sent the text, then grabbed a small mirror that lay on a tray near her and looked into it. Her arms had returned to their normal color, amd size, and Marita felt her normal energy return- the poison had drained her of much of her vitality and spunk.

Emilena slipped Axel's hoodie on gratefully, but wrinkled her nose at the prospect of returning to the hospital. "Honestly, can we just call them an Uber or something? We have no way of knowing if they didn't blow their cover. The place could be crawling with cops."

Then Soren's phone received the text and they learned the girls were fine. "Objection withdrawn, I guess," Emilena shrugged. "Let's grab them and figure out what to do next. Were we still planning to follow Buller's tip to the Durwent District? We don't really have any other leads."

Nodding, Tony winced as Soren's vomit just missed the running board... just. "Ugh... well... at least you're... getting better." He added, wrinkling his snout up at the stench, looking to all three of them. "I have a medical kit in the trunk... might have some aspirin in there." he commented. "Hold on..." Getting out, he moved to the back of the massive car, and undid the clasps on the trunk, throwing up the lid and hmmming as he pulled out the kit and began rooting around inside of it. "Aha!" he exclaimed, yanking out a bottle and replacing the kit, then shutting the trunk before he walked back around towards the front.

"Here you are!" He tossed the aspirin container towards Soren. "Let's get going then. We'll swing back around, pick them up and you said... Durwent District? What's down there?" he asked, sliding back behind the wheel and pulling out the starter button, listening to the straight-eight come back to life with a grumble. No need to choke the engine or advance the spark, as it was a warm start. Pushing it back in, he looked behind him, then shifted into reverse, released the parking brake, and backed the big Duesenberg out into the lane. Shifting down into first, he began rolling, then up shifted into neutral and then second almost immediately.

"So uh... Buller... tipped me off you guys were down here... and he wants us to head to the Durwent District? What are we looking for next?" he asked, spiraling up the ramp and back out into the open air. Pulling out to the main street, he waited before turning left and into traffic, heading back the way he'd come about 30 minutes before. The wind blew his fur back a bit, causing the ferret to smile as he enjoyed the openness of the dual-cowl phaeton. Hospital was only a few blocks away, and it took them less than 5 minutes to cover that distance.

Making another left turn into the hospital parking lot, he cruised down the slight dip and looked for visitor parking, pulling smoothly into a spot and shifting into neutral to leave the engine idling, setting the parking brake once again with multiple clicks as he pulled the lever back. "OK well... someone text or call them and let them know we're out front. Hard to miss red and black Duesenberg Model J." he smirked, tapping a claw on the top of his door. "Durwent... that's uh..." looking up, the ferret thought. "30 minutes or so from here... not too far." he said softly, mostly to himself as he began plotting out their route. "Oh!" he turned around to the three in the back. "There's two jump seats you can unfold back there for them. Should be able to get everyone inside... though one may have to sit on the floor in the back in between the jump seats. Still... should be OK." he nodded.

"I can't remember if you met her, but there was this pink-furred teenager tagging along with us before," Emilena replied, extending her hand to Soren as if requesting some aspirin. "Two weeks ago we sent her and Rose to infiltrate a bar where a person of interest was frequenting. Rose blew their cover and things went to hell. Nobody knows what happened to Rose, but the purifiers had a tracker on Flora and our target has brought her to the Durwent District, at the spot on this map," she handed Tony the tourist pamphlet where Buller had circled a warehouse.

She felt a cold shiver trickle down her spine, remembering Lily's warning. But she repressed it. They'd wasted enough time at the hospital, and Lily might have just been a dream anyway. "The target is connected to whatever group has been framing us and the Purifiers in the papers, and sadly that's all we know about them. We're thinking a visit to pickup Flora might fix that."

Emilena leaned over the backseat and setup the jump seats Tony had mentioned. "You'll have to share these with Anne," she replied over her shoulder. "Where is she, anyway?"

shes still inside i'd wager, probably getting released" Marita said " so the good news , is we've escaped the worst that poison could have done to us, and we have a lead on where Flora is. I have no idea where Rose is, maybe Flora knows where she is, maybe not. Cant hurt to ask. The bad news, however is we are basically out of money. I think we're down to a few thousand creds."

Anne had opted to discharge herself from the hospital despite, the doctors insisting that she stay for overnight observation. In the end, they made her sign a disclaimer saying that she was doing so against medical advice and Darwin's Hope wouldn't be liable if she died or anything along those lines happened.

A nurse helped her into a wheelchair and a young Dhole slowly wheeled her to the elevator. The young Canine was trying to chat with her but the Shetland Pony's splayed out ears indicated that she wasn't interested.

Soon, she was stationed in the airy reception area of the front of the hospital. Despite the open atrium with the sunlight streaming in, the only attempt at decoration were some potted plants in the corner.

The mare tuned out the volunteer attempting to make small talk and decided to occupy herself by listening to all the phone conversations that buzzed around. While she was listening, she heard the company Brennan Synthetics being mentioned quite often.

Soren chewed up and swallowed the aspirin as there was no water available. The bitter taste of the bills evoked a long stream of profanities as he swallowed repeatedly in an attempt to get the taste out of his mouth.

Smirking as Marita came out, he nodded. "Well hello yourselves! And yep! Two jump seats in the back." he hooked a claw to the backseat as Emilena got them set up (perfect, as seven passengers was ideal for this car). Reaching around, he took the pamphlet from the vulpine and began looking it over, nodding. "Right... not too far then. I think I remember her... yes. Flora... right?" he asked in reference to the "pink furred teenager." Shifting into reverse, Tony released the parking brake and began pulling out, deciding that the wait was over, as they'd been idling a good 20 minutes, and he didn't want to draw further attention to them than was necessary.

Backing out of the spot, he put the car in first and began heading for the exit of the hospital. "So basically... Flora and Rose vanished... Flora we know at least her location... and our target is holding her... being linked to this group that's responsible for framing us and the Purifiers... got it." he nodded, turning right and heading back the way he'd come, but this time blowing by the hotel as they headed for the Durwent District. He rode along easily in second, sticking to the speed limit for now, not needing to shift the big Duesenberg into high gear.

"So money wise... I can assist with that." he told Marita. "Even if the hospital burned up your funds, wouldn't mind helping you guys out. Hey uh..." he looked into the rear view mirror, trying to catch Emilena's gaze. "Shouldn't we uh... maybe get you some clothes?" he suggested, passing one exit after another as they made their way closer to the Durwent District.

"I would appreciate that..." Emilena tugged Axel's hoodie to keep it as low as possible. "I'll pay you back. Someday."

Ten minutes later they'd pulled into the parking lot of a 24-hour supermarket. "I hope they have my size in black," she told Tony, stepping gingerly out of the car. It was very early morning, the sun wasn't even up yet, so there weren't many other cars in the lot.

Still, Axel's hoodie barely covered her pelvic region, and she needed to do something about the dried blood on her legs. "Before we go inside, I need a quick wash," she muttered to Tony under her breath. Slinking to the back alley, she found a spigot and turned it on to create a flow of frigid water. "Cover me, woulda?" She handed him Axel's hoodie and began washing herself off as quickly as possible.

Nodding, Tony took the next exit, and drove a few blocks to the supermarket, pulling in and shut the engine off as he stepped out with her. "Not sure you exactly need to pay me back." he told her, shaking his head. "Still... it's the thought that counts." he admitted, stepping off the running board and beside his car as he shut the door.

Nodding to her again, he accompanied her to the back alley, noting that indeed she did need a bit of a clean up. As he took the hoodie from her, he turned around, holding the hoodie behind his back and clasping his paws back there as well as he rose and fell a bit on his foot paws, pushing up onto the balls before letting himself sink back to flat feet. "Mind if we talk briefly inside the store?" he asked, looking left and right in slow, sweeping gazes, but not turning around. "Just wanted to get your take on a few things while you pick something out."

"Yeah, of course." Emilena shivered violently in the drafty alleyway air as she turned the spigot off. "Y-you've been out of all this for a few months, I'm sure you could use some catchup. I bet that was one confusing hell of a reintroduction at that hospital."

She had to fight to keep her teeth from chattering. Luckily, the draft caused her fur to dry relatively fast, and she was able to take her hoodie back and limp into the supermarket.

"Good... and yes." he felt her take the hoodie, and began walking into the store without turning around, letting her draw even first before looking over to her. "So first off..." he began. "I need to know if there's anyone in the group you don't trust... I assume this isn't the case but... thought I'd know, just in case. Second... do you have some sort of... exit strategy against the Purifiers? I know at the moment our causes are kind of united and singular, but I mean... I assume at some point... you'll either strike back at them or just... quietly leave. So I was wondering about that." he explained, not making much eye contact as he was trying to avoid any curious onlookers picking up on them.

"Third... what exactly has been going on lately?" he asked simply, knowing she'd understand what he meant.

"We don't have an endgame, as far as I know," Emilena admitted, leading the way to the clothing aisle. "We honestly just tried it. Two months ago we all split up and went our separate ways, off the grid. Buller rounded us up without another thought. And I haven't had time to devise a new plan since we were racing the clock surviving his poison."

"As for trust...honestly, with the Purifiers gone, the rest of us have been here for the long haul." Emilena grumbled when she couldn't find a turtleneck in her size. "The Lanthae survivors. Awe's the only newcomer, but he had a perfect opportunity to do nothing and watch us die in that hospital..." She looked approvingly at a black long-sleeved shirt. "Of course, that leaves Lily. Which leads into your third question."

She found a pair of black sweatpants and slipped them on without another thought. "The others don't know about this. Well, Axel does but he's too strung out to care. Lily's been...haunting the group, for lack of a better word." Emilena sighed. "She's retained some psionic powers from the Lanthae incident. She can heal or kill someone just by touching them, and she can regenerate from any injury. And I mean any. One time she threw herself into a wood chipper and I watched her reconstruct herself from the pulp."

Emilena shuddered. "I had to strike all these deals with her to stop her from killing everyone. I don't think she sees people as people anymore. I thought I had her under control, but now she's just disappeared. Without a trace. And that...that terrifies me," she confessed. "I can't control her if I can't talk to her. And she's too erratic to control herself. She could show up any minute and do literally anything, there's no telling what her goals are right now." She glanced at the self-checkout stands. She was ready to go, but if Tony wanted anything for himself, this was the time to get it.

Maybe she shouldn't be telling Tony all this...but at this point she didn't care. He was the only one of them with a shot at fleeing the scene and living a peaceful life away from all this. He deserved to know the whole situation he was getting involved in.

Nodding, he pursed his lips. "Hm... perhaps we should devise something." he told her quietly. "Best to have some sort of exit strategy. Buller... he was that aggressive... what was he? A doberman?" he asked now, taking something off the shelf. Why not? This might be the only opportunity to get some food after all.

"All right... all trustworthy... that's good... I just wanted to make sure... just in case." he commented, moving to the self check out and scanning everything, then paying for it. But as Lily was mentioned, he paused, and then outright narrowed his eyes. "Uh... that doesn't sound like she kept 'some' of her powers..." he commented, moving for the exit. "That sounds like... she became a fucking god." He commented. "Perhaps it's best we avoid her... she sounds totally uncontrollable, and extremely dangerous... wrap up the mission, then hunt her down if you want." he suggested, exiting out into the cold morning air. "I just think something like that could severely compromise us or... kill us." he commented.

"And Axel is strung out?" he inquired, raising a brow as he once more got behind the wheel, and started up the Duesey. He didn't mind that the rat was now in earshot. He didn't realize his old pal was... strung out. Backing out of the spot, he got the Duesenberg rolling again as they began to head back down the road. Only about 10 minutes to go now... and they'd be there. The headlights cut through the predawn gloom, and the instrument panel lights gave out a gentle glow so that Tony could see everything on the stately metallic panel, bathing his face in a yellowish light as he drove along.

The ink-filled capsules attached to the pants and shirt beeped and detached when the clothes were scanned through the self-checkout.

Before they reached the car, Emilena lowered her voice and explained one last thing about Lily. "We don't need to find her. Lily sent me a message while I was in the hospital," she whispered. "She wants me to visit her in our old hideout. But it's on the complete opposite side of the city, hours out of our way, and we don't have that time at the moment." She gulped. "And, frankly, it's something I should do alone since she's probably going to kill me."

With one last forced smile, she climbed back into the Duesenberg, swapped Axel's hoodie for her new longsleeved black shirt and returned it to its rightful owner. "So," she asked the group, "when we reach Flora's safehouse, who's coming in with me and who's keeping the getaway car warm?"

As Emilena shared that last bit of info, Tony stared dead ahead as they moved down the highway, that anxiety in the pit of his stomach rising. She would go to find Lily... to be killed? But then... that... would just mean Lily would continue to exist... and potentially destroy everything... what kind of a solution was that?

It left him feeling unsettled as he moved onto the exit and towards the Durwent District. "I'll go." he said. "There isn't anyone in this city that would know how to even drive this car if they tried to steal it so... I think we're good. I don't mind leaving it alone." He commented. "I can show whomever stays behind how to start it as well... since it'll be a hot start... won't be complicated." he assured them.

Moving the little knob on the steering wheel downwards to switch off the headlights as the car approached the warehouse, the sun was just starting to rise. Tony also turned off the dash lights, and steeled himself as he bumped the Model J along the uneven road and pulled up to the correct one. "OK... here we go." he said, not switching the car off just yet as he waited to determine who was going in, moving the massive shift lever down into neutral and setting the parking brake.

(Durwent District)

While warehouses stretched in every direction from the block the Model J was currently parked in front of, this particular street contained what few luxury houses sat in the dead center of the industrial section. Due to being surrounded on all sides by factories, they were dotted with the heaviest air purifiers on the market, and the unmistakable architecture of the ultra-rich permeated the structures.

These houses were only affordable (or even desireable) by owners or high-ranking employees of the Durwent factories. Getting in or out would not be easy, as these residents were almost certainly protected by the best security systems money can buy.

"It's a lonely life out here, I won't lie. Usually Emile and I won't see anyone but the other farmers for months…"

Flora groaned sleepily as a documentary on the television began infiltrating her dreamless slumber. She hadn't been wholly aware she'd fallen asleep after her afternoon romp with Bianca (https://docs.google.com/document/d/1d9V0zeKk-G3mqRbmXH2Yx4eHS8nYanCx8iU6WeuCJlQ/edit), but now that she looked over she saw that it was almost 4am, and her partner was no longer in the bed next to her.

"So are you saying your polyamory is normal for people out here in the Lanthae Wastelands?" the reporter on the TV asked, pressing his microphone towards a pair of dirt-streaked vulpine farmers.

"It takes an unusual sort to even want to live out in these deserts," chuckled the husband. "No internet, no entertainment, no contact with the civilized world...you get to know your few neighbors REALLY well."

Flora clicked the TV off. "Bianca?" she called out, tentatively climbing out of bed. "You...still here?"

Axel stared at the properties across the street as the Model J slowed to a halt. He blinked, coming to the same conclusion as Emilena - there was no way whoever designed these houses didn't account for any intruders.

"Don't count me in for a fight like this guy," he said, waving a hand in Awe's direction. "But they'll have security systems coming out the ass over there. I should be able to see where they are, help get around them. And I could do with the fresh air."

Biuanca came in the room, her eyes bleary ' Hi Flora, got called out for a late night craving by one of the guards. Cheap git, gave me just 3 creds more than the food cost. " She sighed. " ah well, I got him his food, and hes happy. You've been sleeping for hours. Out like a light. And I had my evening chores to take care of. " She said, taking a seat in front of the large screen TV.

(OOC: I posted a character sheet for Kintoki in the discussion thread)

Emilena nodded and glanced at Soren, the last car occupant to decide on his post. "Looks like we're breaking into a residential house, not a warehouse. This might be a good thing for us. Once we've found the right house, I think the first thing we should do is cause a power out. Few people would notice this late at night, and we'd have a few minutes to enter the building while the systems switch to the backup power supply. Soren and Awe, you're the professionals in this matter, what do you think?"

——————————

Flora smiled and gave Bianca a quick kiss while she walked by. "So you just gonna live here now?" She asked, even while walking to the kitchen to make herself some food. "I mean, you know I'd love that, but I don't want you to get in trouble with your bosses."

She clicked the light on in the kitchen. She hadn’t done the dishes in a few days due to hanging out with Bianca, and she certainly didn’t feel like doing them now, so she opened the windows and pushed the curtains aside to get some airflow. She turned on the stove and started boiling a pot of water for ramen, not even noticing the old-fashioned car sitting a short ways down the street.

Kintoki was sleeping in his bedroom-slash-security observation room.

Anne was slumped against the seat and currently asleep.

Soren was pondering over what Emilena said. "That'd work but we have to keep in mind that there may be a battery back up system that can instantly switch over to keep things going until the generator kicks in." He rubbed his chin. "I saw we take out all three of these at once. And then we get going." He then noticed the faint golden bands of the sun peeking through the dark, glassy towers of the industrial buildings. "But we have hurry. Those guys might be starting work soon and then we'll be in real deep shit."

"An simultaneous attack on both the backup and main could cripple them," Awe noted. "Do we have a map of the area of the area and locations of the generators?"

"We don't even know which house is the right one, so that's the first step." Emilena unbuckled her seatbelt and climbed out of the car. "Everyone split up and start checking houses. Look for a building that doesn't have a sticker advertising the security company, since I doubt Brennan would trust a third party with their security. Might be other clues too."

She headed west down the street, eyeing the closest house. This one had a lot of used lawn equipment and looked to be halfway through finishing a garden renovation, so she doubted it was the safehouse. She continued onto the next one.

Unfortunately, the house with Flora visible from the kitchen window was eastward down the street...

well i've bneen told to keep an eye on you, so you'll see quite a bit of me ' i wont be ' living' with you per se, but i'll be a regular presence.' Bianca said going over to the window and loking out as shree scanned upward and down the street she noticed a number of people walking around, loking at the houses ' Flora! get away from the window! there's.. weird-looking people coming up the street! could be thugs, Purifiers, Gods-know-what!' close the windows! pull up the shutters! Now!' she hissed ' closing the window and shuttering it., then heading into the kitchen.

Shutting off the Duesenberg, Tony exited, and began walking down the street after locking the car. He went east, while Emilena was going west it seemed. He wasn't immediately sure if others were following him just yet. As he strolled along, looking nonchalantly at the houses, he saw Flora through the kitchen window of one, and suddenly, before he could react much, one of the windows was shuttered up and closed off to him.

"Hey!" the ferret whispered loudly back to Emilena, hoping she hadn't gone too far as he half turned his head to see her. Snapping his claws twice, he subtly pointed to the home, not raising his arm from his side to do so, but thrusting it forward just slightly to point in its direction before resting it at his side again. He then kept walking, not wanting to break stride lest he arouse suspicion.

With a bang, the door to the back room swung open and Kintoki stomped into the kitchen, causing Flora to squeal in surprise. "Where are the Purifiers?" he snarled. He was already wearing his heavy metallic exoskeleton, but his youthful face diminished the fear he hoped to provoke.

"There aren't any, Jesus!" Flora exclaimed, spilling boiling water on the stove and causing a hiss of steam. "Bianca's just paranoid, it's probably the neighbors!"

Kintoki saw the Great Dane and blinked in confusion. "...Who are you?"

"Oh please, she's been here all day. As if you weren't on your cameras watching us have sex a few hours ago," Flora rolled her eyes.

"I did nothing of the sort!" Kintoki protested, flushing red. "Is that why you're naked in the kitchen at four in the morning?"

"I woke up for a midnight snack! Is that illegal?" Flora snarled.

“Yes! I have to report everything you do to Coxon.” Kintoki suddenly noticed the wide open window. “Speaking of which, you can’t leave windows open like this! This is a safehouse, not a hotel!”

“But it’s stuffy in here,” Flora protested.

He quickly shut and locked the window, then drew the curtains shut. “Too bad. Now go back to bed and don’t make any noise until I’ve confirmed the perimeter is secure.”

“OK, but don’t shoot Bianca, she’s allowed to be here!” Flora called after him as he marched to the front room. Grumbling, she re-opened the curtains and took a look for herself at the intruders. The only one she could make out was an unfamiliar ferret minding his own business. “Secure the perimeter, godsakes, what is this, a war zone?”

Then a very familiar vixen approached from further down the sidewalk. She stopped in front of the house, and she and Flora locked eyes.

Flora felt a cold flash wash over her. “Errr, maybe I'll put my clothes on, just to be safe,” she stammered, darting to the bedroom as fast as possible.

Outside, Emilena quickly gave Tony an affirmative nod and rushed back to the car. “We've IDed the right house,” she jabbed her thumb surreptitiously. “Let's move it. Awe, Soren, Marita, if you got any tricks now's the time.”

So you've seen Flora?' Marita said coming up to them, she had been looking on the other side of the street. She looked at the house, noticing a pair of security cameras over the front door. ' hmm ' twin camera, which doubtlessly feed into a main control room, and i would imagine the interior rooms all have cameras. this doesn't look like the hardest security system i've gotten into. first off, blinding these outside cameras alone would alert security, so whoever is watching would get forewarning. There are two options. we do a domino, where we progressively blind and overload the system, which would, also kill all power in the house. then theres the tidal wave option, where everything is shut down at once. we would have, maybe 10-15 mijinutes to get flora out, by my calculation, before power would return sand security would send out a trigger warning. . less than that with the domino, maybe 3-5 minutes"

Soren turned to Anne. "Can you help us with eavesdropping?"

The mare's ears swiveled back and forth as her tail swished. She shook her head. "Transmissions are encrypted. I have an older model implant so I can't break them. You're on your own for this. All I can do is detect signals and electromagnetic fields. I won't be able to listen in to the contents."

"Good enough." Soren licked his lips as he tried to still his pounding heart. He looked at the door. The door was flanked by two security cameras and he suspected that the door was probably reinforced. He then turned to Anne. "We'll take out the back up battery."

Anne nodded. "Sounds fine to me. Unfortunately, I don't think we have any weapons."

"Hopefully some gardener left some tools lying around or something. We'll make do." Soren then nodded. "Let's do it."

"Soren's right," Emilena revealed a trowl and handed Soren a pair of shears she'd swiped from next door. "Next house to the west was working on his lawn, these were the most concealable options but anyone who wants to rummage, they're still over there."

She glanced at Awe. "This is your forte, just let us know what to do and we'll get to work."

Kintoki walked into the bedroom, where Flora was just fixing her newly-donned shirt. "I don't see any evidence of intruders," he reported.

"I'm shocked, shocked I tell you." Flora rolled her eyes. "Can you stop blocking the TV?"

Kintoki folded his arms. "Well, aren't we in a good mood. You know that if your girlfriend causes any more false alarms, I'm going to expel her from the premises?"

"You could try. What, are you going to go buy groceries? Walk around Target dressed like the Iron Giant?" Flora scoffed. "You wanna threaten Bianca, go do it to her face. She's on your payroll, not mine."

Kintoki grumbled as he walked into the kitchen. "What exactly is going on that caused your outburst?" he asked Bianca. He glanced out the window. There was indeed a car parked further down the road (Duesenberg Model J, if he recalled his old silent movies correctly) but it was too dark to make out the occupants. And considering its anachronistic and well-kept appearance, he assumed it was simply one of their wealthy neighbors returning from a vintage car show.

As Tony wandered nonchalantly back down the street, crossing over to the other side to avoid suspicion, he approached his Duesenberg with his paws thrust in his pockets. "I've got a Glock 19 on me." he said softly as he padded on up. "I did bring a laser rifle as well if anyone wants to use it." he looked around him. "It's in the trunk..." Walking around to the back of the car, he popped the latches and opened up the literal trunk attached to the back of the Model J on the luggage rack, revealing some spare clothes, the med kit from before, and the laser rifle in the bottom, just poking out from underneath the clothes.

Glancing to the house, he looked back down again. "Just act like we're coming back from a long trip." he said quietly, pretending to root through the trunk as he actually moved some of the clothes out of the way. "They're looking over here but not in what I'd say is a suspicious fashion." he commented, not looking back up. "I wouldn't mind taking part in the assault... covering anyone who needs it... helping protect the withdrawal."

Kintoki's face softened. "I'm sorry, Bianca, you're right. I shouldn't let Flora get under my skin like that." He handed her a 100c chip. "Get me one of those alcoholic energy drinks they sell at the gas station. I don't need any food."

He glanced out the window again. Besides the neighbor's fancy car, he couldn't see anything out of the ordinary. "If you saw creeps peeking through the windows, we need to heighten security. You should take this as well." He handed her a lightweight silver pistol with a snub barrel. "This brand fires cartridge-free bullets with self-contained propellants. Thirteen shots, no recoil whatsoever, perfect for untrained users. If anyone bothers you, come back inside immediately and warn me."

He pressed a button on his arm. "Also, let one of my Tactical Defense Roombas escort you to the car." A compartment opened up and three small black discs came rolling out from under the sink cabinet. "I'll have two patrolling the outside and one in Flora's room. They're armed with heat-sensitive optical scanners and can fire 200 armor-piercing rounds a minute."

One of the TDRs buzzed obediently to the front door and waited for Bianca. Another left out the petflap on the backdoor and began its route around the house. The last one rolled into Flora's room, who looked at it curiously.

Emilena quickly passed Axel the trowel and grabbed the laser rifle. "Positions, people. Awe, we'll be waiting for your signal."

She crawled to the hedges separating the safe house from their neighbor and crouched behind them, out of sight. Checking to make sure the laser rifle was loaded and cocked, she kept her eyes on Awe, ready to open fire to defend him if he experienced any trouble.

"Got it." Awe approached the outside power source and placed a small charge on it. He took cover and gave a three two one countdown on his fingers before pressing the button. The security cameras went offline. Awe rushed to the door taking position next to it and signaled the group shooting out the lights above the door with a silenced pistol. "now all we need is the power to go off for the building."

Bianca's roomba whirred as it escorted Bianca down the front porch.

Inside, the lights died on cue. Kintoki cursed and set his arm cannon to charge up. "Flora!" he shouted. "Come to me, quickly!"

"Give me a gun!" Flora pleaded, as she saw Kintoki sprint into her room. "Something to defend myself!"

He shook his head. "Can't, Bianca has it." Fiddling with the Roomba, he sent it rolling out if the room. "Let's hope they don't get this far," he muttered. "This house has more than a few tricks up its sleeve..."

"Who? Are you sure this isn't just a regular powerout?" Flora asked anxiously, brandishing her bedside lamp.

Outside, Emilena darted across the neighbor's side of the hedge and started vaulting over to enter the backyard. She didnt get far when she heard something robotic priming itself, and several rounds of machine gun ammo sent her scrambling back where she was. The automatic fire ended the second she'd left the safe house premises. What the hell was that? She peeked over the hedge. Whatever spotted her, it was either too dark or too small to see.

Tony moved to cover Emilena on the right, closer towards the front of the house, but he stayed more towards the middle, then drifted left towards the back as he watched Emilena head over the hedge of the neighbor's yard. As he moved to the right angle of the back corner of the house in order to cover her in the background, he heard the same powering up whine.

As he scanned the predawn darkness, the barest hints of light splitting the sky, he narrowed his eyes when gunfire erupted, driving Emilena back over the hedge, and it soon ceased shortly after. As Tony looked to the ground, having noticed the trajectory of the bullets as they buzzed the hedge, he saw a... was that a Roomba? A small vacuum puck on the ground? There looked to be an opening for a gun barrel, and he raised his brows, then took quick aim and fired off two rounds at it from his Glock, the bullets glancing off the armored surface with whirs.

Quickly ducking back behind the hedge, he panted. "Robotic drone guard! Looks like a Roomba!" He whispered to the vulpine. "Armored shell, but the laser may be able to take it out!" he told her.

Soren and Anne had taken out the battery backup by the time Awe planted the charges. It was a simple task with Anne and Soren ripping out the wires that connected the rest of the house to the battery shed and its . He hadn't taken the weapon Emilena offered him as he couldn't separate the pruners to turn them into a crude dagger. Instead, he opted for a large rock that he picked up next to the battery housing.

The lights suddenly going out inside the house indicated that Marita's virus had done its work and knocked out the power.

In addition to the robotic guards, two guards, a Human and a Komondor exited and swept over the backyard. The large canine sniffed the air and scowled. "Intruders," he said. His voice had a thick, Hungarian accent, hinting at his homeland.

The Human flipped down his eyepiece and scanned the spacious backyard. There, he saw two hot spots that stood out against the cooler grass. "There!" he said, pointing at a clump of bushes near the backup batteries. He raised his pistol and fired before the Komondor shoved his hand down. "No! Shoot backup power and big fire happens! We get in close!"

The two then ran towards the battery shed.

Soren bit his lip and softly cursed as one of the bullets scraped his arm. "Go!" he growled at Anne.

Anne nodded and they both padded behind the power shed. "Now what?"

Soren held up his rock. "Let's give them something to really worry about!" He gently opened the door and saw the batteries connected to the power grid. The control panel inside was indicating that the wires were broken. He then smashed open one of the batteries, its plastic casing yielding to the rock. Soon, the air was filled with a distinct sweet metallic odor as the clear electrolyte leaked out from the crack. He saw it begin to smolder as it started reacting with the air.

"Hurry!" Anne replied as she heard the footsteps of the approaching guards.

Soren said nothing as he ran after Anne. Hopefully, the fire that was going to erupt would get the guards' attention.

Bianca walked down the street with the roomba in front of her , she had missed the commotion by literally seconds and had no idea of the goings on behind her. The roomba had acciompanied he before on previous food runs, as a security measure, in this sort of neighborhood, no one was stupid enough to walk out of their house without some security and the sight of roombas leading or trailing people was common. Emilena gritted her teeth. With Tony's help, she targeted the ground and fired her laser rifle. It missed completely, but the light helped her draw a bead on her target and the next shot blasted the Roomba into a charred husk. Vaulting over the hedge a second time, she smashed her rifle butt against a window and cursed when it proved to be shatterproof. "Bastards. Can you get me some light?" she muttered, fishing a bobby pin out of her pocket and trying to pick the lock. She heard Soren having adventures in the front yard, but she trusted him to keep himself alive.

Nobody had heard from Awe in a while, she wondered if he'd infiltrated the building. But with stealth thoroughly compromised, there was little reason not to try and break in as soon as possible.

Kintoki clicked a flashlight attachment on the upper receiver of his rifle. "Bastards think I can't take them?" he muttered aloud, trying to psyche himself up and sound macho in front of Flora. "Those Purifier thugs are gonna have another thing coming!"

"Oh please," Flora rolled her eyes dismissively. "I've seen these particular Purifiers murder an entire convenience store full of cops. In seconds from now, they'll be on you like flies on honey."

"Shut up!" Kintoki snapped, hitting his radio. "Kranz, Áder! Status report!" he barked. "Do you see anything?" He swung the flashlight beam wildly around the hallway leading out of Flora's room.

"You don't want your last words to be that dumb question, right? Say something poignant, before its too late." Flora smiled, knowing she was agitating him and hoping it helped Emilena's team gain the upper hand.

Bianca's Roomba detected bodies in the Model J and chirped angrily. It readied its machine gun but waited to see evidence of hostile actions. Decades of AI research had managed to create surprisingly versatile defense drones that could detect most ranged weapons and knew to air on the side of caution. However, if Bianca shouted the code word ('Rochambeau') it would treat any nearby humans as hostile threats.

Awe by this point had infiltrated the building and was clearing it room by room. He hadn't run into any significant resistance so far but he had a feeling that he would soon. He soon came across a guard and crept up behind hind before covering his mouth and jamming his silenced pistol to the guard's head. "You're holding a woman here you're going to take me to her or I'll be the last thing you ever hear."

The guard however decided to play dumb. "What woman?"

"Wrong answer." Awe replied shooting the guard in the foot who let out a muffled scream but due to the tightness of awes hand was barely audible. "Care to try again?"

"She's on the second floor." The guard moaned.

"There, was that so hard?" Awe replied before pistol whipping the guard who fell over unconscious. "She's on the second floor guys." Awe signaled the rest of the group.

Bianca’s roomba chirped and gave up on the Model J, following her past it and down the sidewalk.

Emilena similarly gave up on trying to pick the lock and instead melted the hinges off with the laser rifle. “Keep an eye out for movement,” she warned as she and Tony entered the house, “but make sure it’s not Awe before you—“

She broke off as they came across the body of the guard Awe had knocked out. “Oh sweet, dibs on his gun.” Returning Tony’s laser rifle, she frisked the body and nodded approvingly at his silenced Glock. “Holy crap, this pistol has select fire,” she remarked, turning the selector. “Next bitch I see gets to help me test the full-auto.”

“Not another word, Flora, you hear me?” Kintoki warned, pointing his rifle at her to prove he was serious. “Boss says he needs you alive, but but he didn’t specify anything about your kneecaps.”

He then regarded the door, relishing the stunned silence his threat had earned from his ward. “Whoever’s out there!” he called out, anticipating his foes were approaching. “Maybe we can talk this out? I think we might be able to help each other, settle this like gentlemen...”

Awe was creeping up on the room from the ceiling. Where he saw guard he knocked them out taking the rifle off of one. He approached a room with a single guard out side. Awe dropped down silently grabbing the guard and covering his mouth. "Nod your head is the woman you're holding in this room?" Awe asked. The guard nervously acknowledged awe's question. Awe put the guard in a sleeper hold and silently set him on the ground before getting a flashbang out. Awe checked to see if the door was unlocked from the side so he wouldn't be in the firing line.

As Emilena fragged the Roomba, Tony moved to follow her in, and as they encountered the unconscious guard, Tony was handed the laser rifle back, and gladly took it, putting his Glock away, as he figured it was too small caliber for this operation. Good back up but right now... he needed firepower.

As he covered their backs, moving up to the second floor, he fired off a burst of red light that cut a surprised guard in half who moved around the corner to pop him, having utterly failed to do so as he was now in two pieces, a look of utter anguish and shock on his features as he collapsed cleanly in two. That squishy sound they made when they hit the floor... still drove Tony's stomach in knots.

Backing up the stairs, they arrived outside the door where Flora was being held, Awe joining them out front. Sighing as he heard Kintoki yell from inside, Tony took a knee, aimed the rifle high, and shook his head. Giving one glance to Emilena, he whispered to the vulpine "Fuck talking it out; I could fire one blast through there and likely take his head off." Though the ferret wasn't exactly sure where Flora was, and didn't want to accidentally hit her.

Emilena was covering their rear; she saw movement coming up the stairs and attempted to scare it with a short burst of suppressing fire, but she wasn't expecting her pistol's insane cyclic rate; it burnt through her entire magazine within a split second. Cussing quietly, she switched it back to single-fire for next time. But this meant she couldn't participate in any firefights Tony and Awe started against Kintoki.

"I can guess why you're here," Kintoki called through the door. While talking, he tapped his helmet and it began scanning their heat signatures. His sensors take a while to penetrate these thick safehouse walls, but in sixty seconds he'd know exactly where his conversation partners were standing, which would give him the advantage if they pushed through the door. "You see this girl as a loose end, and are here to silence her. Well, she's under my protection and I can't let you hurt her. Also, we've had her for months, she's already told us everything of value. You should just walk away, you have nothing to gain from taking this innocent young woman's life!"

Post by: Pterano on November 02, 2018, 07:34:03 AM

As Kintoki spoke, Tony began lining up a shot against where the voice was coming from, trying to triangulate it and keep him talking, but not for too long. The laser beam could easily cut through the door and decapitate him, but he'd need to get the height correct. He'd keep this incredibly brief, so that they wouldn't be wasting time so that the other could get the bearings of their opponent.

"We're not here to kill her! We're here to retrieve her!" Tony called back, keeping his rifle leveled. "Enough of your men have died today! Let's prevent any more senseless bloodshed! She was a part of our group you might say awhile back, and we're here to simply take her back with us. What'll it be?" he asked, keeping his intentions vague; if he gave the speaker a timeframe, that'd just tip him off to when they prepared to storm the room, so Tony held up two claws and then formed a zero with his paw, mouthing the words "seconds" to Awe, to indicate they'd go in in 20 seconds if this guy didn't answer.

The guard attempted to scale the staircase again, so Emilena took advantage of the lights being off and vaulted downward, hitting him in the face with both boots. She didn't see that there were two of them until they were all tumbling down the staircase in a dogpile.

She was seeing stars by the third time her head smashed into a stair, but her element of surprise still helped her recover faster than her targets when they all finally hit the floor. Pinning the one directly underneath her, she dug her teeth into his crotch and ripped out a chunk of flesh, then pounced the other one. He swung a knife and left a large gash in her cheek, and she retaliated by raking her claws through his neck. As he clutched his throat, she wrestled the knife away from him and finished him off, then stabbed his equally-incapacitated partner to death.

Panting in terror, she tried to extricate her from the bodies and slipped on the blood. Hitting her head on the ground a fourth time, she blinked dizzily and gave up on standing right away. She just needed a second to...get her bearings...

"Is there any way you could prove to me that you have her best interests at heart?" Kintoki asked, stalling for time. "I care deeply about her safety, and--"

He broke off suddenly as Flora swung her bedside lamp in a wide arc and smashed him directly in the face, breaking his nose and sending his helmet flying off with a loud THUD. "How's that for innocent, you prick?" she snarled as he hit the ground in a daze. "Gonna shoot me in the kneecaps now!?"

Rapidly changing plans, Kintoki decided his best chance of surviving was to pretend he'd been knocked unconscious.

Just before Kintoki was knocked unconscious, Kranz had reported that the backup battery bank was on fire. Áder was busy trying to put out the fire. He had called for some additional guards to help extinguish the creeping, bluish flame. Thankfully, the battery shed was concrete so there wasn't much risk of the fire spreading. But even so, they wanted to minimize the damage. To make matters worse, the ionic liquid electrolyte was an excellent solvent and dissolved firefighting foams. Water was the most effective but for obvious reasons, it was not a good choice around live electrical equipment. That left sand and dirt, which was currently being heaped on the fire.

Soren and Anne entered through the open back door. Thankfully, the little bits of sunlight filtering in from the windows let him see how ornate the kitchen was. It was a classic Old World style kitchen with wood and granite making up the majority of the counters. The dining table that served as the centerpiece was a sleek glass and chrome construct that oozed modernity. "Shit," Soren muttered. "This guy's loaded."

"Yeah," Anne said, her ears swiveled around as she tried to pick up any sounds. Her ears suddenly pricked up as she heard footsteps. "Soren! Get a weapon!"

The Human quickly snatched a large filet knife from the knife block and kept it by his side.

As the room was stormed after the scuffle within, Tony moved in, scanning around with his rifle at the ready before lowering it, and then looked to Flora. "Hey... you ready to get out of here?" he asked, grinning, keeping his rifle only slightly lowered, but still at a ready position. "We're here to retrieve you. Emilena's behind me, Soren and Anne are somewhere downstairs... this is Awe... our newest member. I think I met you awhile back; Tony. Tony Stracci." he offered his name, still looking about just in case, but confident Emilena could protect their backs.

Flora relaxed when she saw Tony; she remembered him from outside the strip club, plus he knew the names of her old teammates. "Flora Hapsburg. Though I guess you probably already know who I am." She dropped the lamp. "Yeah, let's fucking bail," she muttered, glancing one final time at Kintoki, who unbeknownst to her was still emulating a coma patient as well as he could.

Emilena had just staggered to her feet when Flora reached the bottom of the stairs and cursed in surprise at how much blood the vixen was covered in. "It's okay!" Emilena assured, leaning against the wall for support. "Most of it is theirs. Just...come on." Shaking her head to clear her vision, she limped back towards the backdoor to leave the same way she and Tony had entered.

"Yep... kind of remember you." The ferret nodded, allowing her to pass by him before backing out of the room, rifle still at the ready in case some freak was hiding in the closet or something (he'd seen enough horror movies to know, plus, he now had to watch everyone's back as the positions had been reversed). Backpedaling out of the room, he began to head down the stairs, keeping a close eye on everything in case someone decided to come barreling out one of those doors to his left or right.

As they reached the ground floor, Tony glanced briefly behind him. "You OK?" he asked Emilena, noticing the gratuitous amount of blood she was covered in, and hoped most or all of that was not her own. As he heard stomping footsteps to his left, Tony swiveled the rifle and fired, his energy beam lancing through a surprised guard as he froze on the spot, dropping his gun with a clatter before he too fell to the ground. Checking the charge on his rifle, Tony sighed as he was relieved to see it still held 70% battery life, the green bar emitting a healthy glow and bathing his face in a slight aura.

"Clear back here! Let's go!" he called to the front, ready to make a dash for the Duesenberg as soon as they were outside.

Emilena ducked outside, and Flora quickly followed, but the Roomba didn't even enter the room. "We're okay," Flora breathed as its robotic whirring faded down the hallway. "Sorry, false alarm. Guess it's headed for the kitchen."

Emilena nodded. "Awe, tell Marita to recall everyone. Let's blow this joint." Flora helped her climb awkwardly over the hedge. Neither of them knew the Roomba was headed for the room where Soren and Anne was...

"I don't mind! Nobody else is using my house but me!" Tony radioed back, barreling out the back of the house and leaping over the fence, performing a clumsy roll as he sprang back up to his foot paws and began charging across the intervening lawn and into the street, running diagonally across the pavement, listening to his shoes slap-slap-slap the asphalt as he moved.

Reaching the Duesenberg, he threw the driver's side door open, piled in, and pulled out the starter knob, listening to the straight-eight turn over and roar into life as he gave the throttle a little gas to get the engine going. As he looked around, he did a quick head count, and slapped the wheel. "Shit!" he uttered. "Are Soren and Anne all right? Anybody see them?" he asked, whipping out his Glock as he scanned the street in front of the house. He kept the car idling, not releasing the parking brake or shifting into gear yet, as they didn't quite have everyone.

The noise was a butler who had gotten up early to prepare the kitchen for a dinner party. As he entered the kitchen, Soren leapt out from behind the pantry door and held his knife to the man's throat. The man started to scream, but Soren gently drew the knife across his neck, leaving a thin red line.

"W...what do you want?" the man stammered out.

"Nothing. You never saw us." He then turned to Anne. The Shetland Pony mare grabbed the man and shoved him into the pantry. She forced the door shut and tied the knobs together with an apron hanging from it.

It was then that the squat "Roomba" guard rolled into the kitchen. "Run!" Anne exclaimed. It came not a moment too soon as several plates exploded as it fired at the duo. Soren swept his arm and knocked over a glass jar of flour, hoping it would obscure their escape somewhat. He wasted no time in following Anne out the back door.

"Damn, looks like they got the fire under control," Soren said as a bullet from the guards who were previously fighting the fire nicked his cheek. He sprinted towards the front yard where he knew the rest of the crew were located.

Anne sent a message out to Marita and the others.

The flour did the job; the Roomba's sensors were blocked, its treads got clogged and it swiveled back and forth blindly as its targets escaped.

Back at the Model J, Flora couldn't help but whistle in appreciation when they reached the ride. "Damn, you traveled in style," she complimented as someone inside opened the door to let them in. Emilena grunted as Flora ungraciously shoved her rear end through the car door to make room for herself. "There's Soren, let's book it!" she shouted, covering her head as the Hungarian guard and his buddy fired at the car. "This old car was built with protection around the engine right? I don't wanna explode..."

Kintoki staggered to his feet, clutching his broken nose. Stomping to the bathroom, he assessed the damage in the mirror and whimpered as he saw his nose bent out of shape. Taking a deep breath, he tweaked it back into place with a painful wince. Washing his face off and grabbing a towel to stem the bleeding, he retrieved his helmet from the bedroom floor and paced quickly down the stairs to see whether his men were able to stop the rescue party from getting away.

Hi Flora " Marie said from the back seat " Glad you seem to be ok. Having to serve as a decoy isnt fun, but better than having to break into a heavily guarded house. Not my strong suit. I ended up grabbing a pair of garden shears as a weapon. Just in case Poison Ivy decides to drop by, or something " marie shrugged.

As Soren and Anne moved out of the house, Tony covered them, firing to their sides with his Glock as the two guards opened up behind them. "Yep! Modified it! Most of my cars are bulletproof... had them rebuilt to withstand problems like this one!" the ferret exclaimed, squeezing off another round as he dropped the guard standing next to the Hungarian, the fellow spinning about like a top before hitting the ground.

As human and pony filed into the vehicle, Tony smiled at Flora's compliment. "Yep! Only way to travel! Best of the best of the 1930s! OK... let's get the hell out of here!" he threw the car into gear, released the brake and off they went, Tony almost immediately shifting into second so he could floor it. Moving the big lever first into neutral, then second, the car was off and roaring along, the ferret firing off a few more rounds from his Glock at the Hungarian as he took off down the street. "We aren't sticking around here! Marita I believe suggested we head back to my place to regroup... provided that's OK with everyone else." he spoke up, wincing as a couple of bullets glanced off the Duesenberg's side but otherwise did no damage.

"Heh... love these modifications." he muttered, shaking his head and whipping the big car around the corner and down onto another street that led out of the development, and eventually, back toward the highway. "I'm surprised they had such a force at that place!" he commented, shaking his head again and gripping the wheel. "Was like a goddamned fortress." He glanced in the rearview mirror just to make sure they weren't being followed, but didn't see anything initially. Beginning to relax a little, he focused more on the drive, as driving tended to settle his nerves. "Everyone all right back there?" he asked, turning left and heading onto an on ramp for the freeway. Circling on the ramp about 180°, the big car was soon zooming down the highway at good speed, Tony keeping it around 75 mph for now, though the car could easily do more than that.

Flora wasn't sure why she should be in the backseat, but acquiescently climbed over the middle seats, apologizing to Axel. "Ummm...hi," she said to Marita and Marie awkwardly, the ones currently filling both jump seats. She hadn't seen these two since the incident at the bar, and for reasons she didn't know she had a much more favorable view of them. "Uhhh...sorry for how I treated you two before," she said quietly, keeping their conversation quiet enough for just the three of them. "I'm...glad to see you both. Where's Rose?"

Emilena lay her head tiredly against the window, exhaling with relief as the guards gave up attempting to shoot the wheels out. "That could have gone worse..." she muttered.

"Intruders gone, sir," the accented voice of Mátyás Áder, the Hungarian guard, came filtered through Kintoki's radio. "With hostage. No casualties on their side, far as I can see."

Kintoki took a deep breath. "You did good," he reported back, expanding his channel to radio every guard, living or dead. "All units, report to the surveillance room in the basement. Do not pursue suspects, I repeat, do NOT pursue."

He killed the radio and opened his computer. Checking the security system, he noted that the Purifier team's hacker had downloaded the data packet just as planned. Operation was a success, he reported to Coxon on their private instant-messaging system. They've got Flora and the location of Brennan HQ. He hesitated, then added: They have a red Duesenberg Model J and a couple of unexpected teammates. I'll be writing up and sending you itemized descriptions as soon as I've interviewed and sorted out the surviving guards. Good luck, sir.

Kintoki heard the safehouse door slam shut above him, and a low humming indicated the yard's self-cleaning system was disposing of any outside evidence of the firefights that just occurred. Kintoki knew he'd have to speak to the neighbors and compensate them for any damage to their houses and lawnwork, but he had a more immediate matter to attend to. His remaining guards (and families of the deceased) were entitled to enough money to retire overnight, the agreed-upon compensation for engaging in firefights with targets they weren't allowed to harm. He had a lot of paperwork ahead of him...

Awe took the time to make a silent prayer for the guard he'd killed. "What's our next move?" Awe asked.

Tony spent the time on the highway maneuvering the Duesenberg around other cars, passing them when he felt they were moving too slowly, and keeping up a steady pace, the big straight-eight giving out its distinctive throaty whine as he drove along. The old gas-burner's noise helped calm him after the infiltration and firefight... never a dull moment with this group... and those firefights were always fights for his life.

But those thoughts faded as he focused on the drive, and the feel of the car moving around him. The engine block was one of the biggest of all time, even by modern standards. Super cars rarely got out of the 200 cubic inch range... his Duesey sported a 420 cubic inch engine. Pumping out 265 horsepower (320 for the supercharged models), it was a beast in its day, and more than adequate now. It made him smile, and settle back into the very comfortable seat, exhaling a little as he guided the car north and east, to where his manor was located.

"Well... regroup at my place." the ferret responded to Awe, looking over to him briefly. "And asses the data we gathered... find our next target..." he commented, keeping his body reposed against the seat. "And yeah... could've been worse... fortunate it wasn't." he agreed with Emilena. "Didn't lose anyone either... so that's good." Tapping his claw a bit on the wheel, Tony frowned at a slow car ahead of him. The Duesenberg moved with authority as he merged lanes and blew by the slower car. "Hate that bullshit." he muttered. "Drivers that can't keep up with traffic." Shaking his head, the ferret appreciated his Model J for its raw power, having nudged it into third for the cruise back to the house. Taking the exit, he eased the car up the winding drive to his large home on the hills above the city, and then down the ramp and into his mammoth underground garage. As the lights automatically kicked on at the car's entrance, they illuminated gleaming painted vintage cars of all sorts and shapes, lined up in two wide rows down the long garage.

As he slowed to a halt, then backed the car up into its slot, he turned the key, killing the engine as he set the brake. "OK... everybody out! End of the line! Elevator is off to your left... it'll take you up into the main house." He explained, sliding out now and beginning to make his way over to the elevator doors at the far end.

Soren touched his cheek where the bullet from one of the guards had scraped him. The blood had dried but it haden't scabbed over yet. He hopped out of the expensive vehicle and looked around the expansive underground garage.

Anne whistled as she looked at the expansive garage. It was practically a museum with exotic cars that ranged in age from contemporary custom built gas-burners to cars that were older than her grandparents. She then headed to the elevator after Soren.

The elevator was surprisingly beautiful with mirror polished walls and ornate brass fittings that gave it the distinct charm of a bygone era. Soren said nothing but looked around. To him, he found the fixtures a bit outdated despite their elegance.

Emilena climbed out of the car. She wished she could stay to admire Tony's garage, but she needed to clean herself up and take care of the long gash in her cheek. "Tony, could you direct me to the restroom? Also, you wouldn't happen to own a sewing needle, would you?" she asked.

Title: Re: Blanking the Slate

Nodding as his shoes echoed throughout the garage, Tony looked to Emilena. "Yeah sure thing." he replied. "I'll show you when we get up there. I have a sewing machine... you could probably take the needle out of it." He explained. Smiling as he entered the elevator, he nodded to Awe. "Thanks... appreciate it. Oh and the elevator heh... had it imported." he commented, rocking on his heels as they arrived in a study style room. A brown leather couch rested up below a window, and scores of books reposed on bookshelves built into the wall. A gun safe was recessed into another wall, and hallways led off right and left.

"Nearest bathroom is second door on the left down the left hallway." he pointed for Emilena. "The sewing machine is in the corner over there. Feel free to remove the needle. Threads should be underneath in the cabinet. Can I get anyone anything?" he offered, shoving his paws in his pockets and rocking back and forth on his paws.

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on November 08, 2018, 06:14:53 AM

Flora shuddered as the others left the car and, eventually, the garage, leaving her alone with Marita and Marie. Her instincts reminded her what happened last time she was stuck in the back of a car with Marie, but her heart told her that even if that happened again, it's okay because Marie has her best interests at heart. "Ummm, so how are you two doing these days?" she laughed nervously to break the silence. "You're not mad at me...are you?"

Tony's bathroom had a hybrid bathtub-shower that was easily the most luxurious thing Emilena had ever stepped in; she suspected it alone cost more than the entire apartment she'd owned in Lanthae. She'd originally planned on keeping her shower brief in the name of expediency, but she couldn't resist testing every single setting of the adjustable spigot and lathering her fur with scented gels from every single bottle. Tony's bathroom even came with a clothes-washing and drying slot in the wall, a more advanced version of the same model Emilena once owned. (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=12341.msg380023#msg380023)

After she realized she was falling asleep in the steaming bubbly water, Emilena forced herself to dry off and tend to her sliced-open cheek. She was still carrying her garrotte from the hospital (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=14550.msg469471;topicseen#msg469471), which she hadn't ended up using, but she could now wash and disassemble it to make practical use of the surgical thread. Wincing with every stab, she sewed the hole shut as well as she could and used hydrogen peroxide and bandages from under the sink to clean and cover it from view. Wasn't the finest care she could receive, but it would hold until she saw Lily again.

Which was a coming event she couldn't help but worry about. Now that Emilena knew she shared a mental bond with Lily, she had to wonder how much Lily could ascertain about her situation. Here at Tony's house, waiting for Marita to decrypt files that would take hours to complete, Emilena's first real break started now. If Lily was aware of that, she would almost certainly punish Emilena for not immediately coming to her aid like she'd demanded. And you know what? Emilena growled into the mirror, doubting Lily could hear her. I'm kinda sick of living my life in fear of you anyway. Maybe I WILL come over there and test a little theory I've got on your regenerative powers...

With a quiet DING, Emilena's clothes returned from the slit in the wall. Sighing, she got dressed and left to find the others.

Nodding, Tony went over to a mini-bar and rooted through the fridge, bottles clinking as he tried to locate some Scotch. Pulling out a bottle, he poured a double shot into a glass after dumping ice in it, and walked over to Awe, holding it out for him.

"So there is... you go through the living room over there...." He pointed to his right. "There's a staircase in the corner. Go down the staircase, and you 'll find a corridor. Around the corner and second door on the right, there's a gym. It's got nice windows that look out over the hills and city so... help yourself." the ferret smiled.

Moving over to the couch, Tony plopped down on it, exhaling. "Quite a day." he stated aloud to no one in particular. Spreading his arms out to rest on the couch behind him, he tapped his paws in alternating patterns until Emilena showed up. "Find everything OK?" he asked. "I guess we have to decrypt our information now, yeah?"

"That'd be the next step, yeah," Emilena nodded. "I'm planning on letting those of us with more technical backgrounds worry about that. Either way, I doubt we're going to approach Brennan's HQ before nightfall, so for the first time in a while we have an open day ahead of us."

She glanced at the bar. "You wouldn't happen to have Blue Cherry, would you?" Blue Cherry was a non-alcoholic beer she used to drink when she was a cop; Emilena's tolerance was too low for the real thing.

Post by: Pterano on November 08, 2018, 08:00:35 PM

"Heh... sounds good to me." Tony acknowledged, nodding. "I don't mind taking some time off. Damn firefights always get my adrenaline racing far too much." He admitted, getting up and stretching his arms over his head. "I think I might, yeah." He nodded, walking over behind the mahogany counter and opening up a bigger fridge back there. "Hmm... I drink that from time to time... even though I'm definitely more of an alcohol person." he admitted. Pulling out a bottle of the blue stuff, he shut the fridge and walked over to her, holding it out, a vanilla porter in his other paw, which he soon cracked open and took a swig from.

As he looked out the windows to the gathering daylight, he shook his head. "So I guess we got most of the day ahead of us. I took the Duesenberg out around 4 AM if I recall so..." glancing to his watch, he noted the time. "8:45 AM. If we get there by dark... gives us most of the day, as you said."

He rolled his wrist out, holding it in his free paw as he did so. "Do we need any supplies?" he asked, looking to her now. "Things for the coming assault? I could make a supply run if we don't have it here." He suggested. "I've got guns in the safe, but not sure if we'd need anything else." He took another drink from his beer.

"It's tough to say before the brainiacs see what we've got in the stolen data." Emilena gratefully took the Blue Cherry and took a sip. Normally, she'd just drink water, but these past days had taken a toll on her. "Guns are a safe bet though. I'd love some 9mm ammo for my new silenced Glock, and maybe a combat knife."

She glanced left and right; only Awe was in listening distance. "Also, don't go telling everyone, but I might be making a short personal trip before nightfall. It's about...that thing we discussed before."

She sighed. "I said I expected Lily to kill me when we next meet, but that's not exactly true. She needs info from me. I have a lead that could reveal the location of the Purifier headquarters. I stop being useful to her once she gets that, so naturally I've been procrastinating on following that trail." She took another sip of her drink. "Of course, if I wait too long without contacting her, she may realize I'm stalling and that I'm just a loose end that will never fulfill my end of the bargain."

She hiccupped, and suddenly remembered why she didn't drink Blue Cherry anymore. "So I was thinking, my best chance of survival might be an unexpected strike," she explained, setting the glass down quickly. "Arrive for our meeting and sucker punch her when she thinks I'm cooperating. Then figure something out while she's dead and regenerating."

Awe nodded his head and took a drink. "Ah thank you Tony." Awe looked outside at the rising sun. "I was always more of a night owl I never appreciated the sight the sun rising could do." Awe coughed a few times before taking another drink.

As held the cold beer in his paw, he frowned a little, nodding as she began speaking about her personal trip. "I can provide ammo." He said softly, taking another swig. "Right... so... she needs Purifier headquarters... if she could wipe it out for us..." He replied in quiet tones. "Might be worth it. But as said... she may be safer dead." he reiterated. He nodded a second time as she mentioned she could strike in an unexpected fashion, coming up with something while Lily was regenerating. "Atomize her maybe... blast her to bits... I dunno... gonna have to be permanent. Throw her in a fuckin' incinerator." he shrugged here.

Tasking another drink, he thought now, looking off to the side. "Won't say anything to the others, don't worry. If you need a ride... I could provide that as well. Hell..." he smiled now, looking back over to her. "Might just go for a spin right now anyway... helps me relax and unwind after nearly having my life snatched from me." he half-joked, chuckling. Growing serious again, he looked right at her. "You think you can do it? End her? In a... permanent fashion?" His snout was down, his eyes intently upon her.

Looking over to Awe, Tony nodded. "No problem. And eh... yeah I guess... I prefer the night too." he admitted, looking at the sun climbing in the sky.

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on November 08, 2018, 08:56:53 PM

"It honestly might," Emilena nodded. "Though I'm a little worried about a Lily who's wiped out her primary enemy and needs to find a new pursuit to occupy her time."

She covered her mouth after another hiccup. "Incinerator won't work, I've seen it. I guess I should explain; for the last two months--at least before the Purifiers found us again--the two of us had been targeting serial killers. Lily would pose as a vulnerable victim, usually a hooker, and I'd tail her john back to his place. If he killed her, I'd knock him out and leave video evidence for the police. Lily insisted I get as much footage as possible, which means I had to see some...disturbing things happen to her."

Emilena shuddered. "This gave me a lot of opportunities to witness exactly how Lily's body prioritizes the healing process. It seems to treat the head as the 'base'; it's always the first thing to regenerate, and the rest of the body grows out from there. One guy had kept her head as a souvenir, and the rest of her body grew back out from her neck stump."

She took a deep breath. "I apologize for having this conversation while you're enjoying a drink. But I was thinking...it's possible that if I beheaded her and trapped her head in some sort of reinforced box--titanium or some very solid material--she wouldn't be able to regenerate. She'd just be stuck in that box...forever...as a partially-regenerated head."

"True enough... as said... probably safer dead." he commented, taking another drink, and smiling as she stifled a hiccup, or attempted to. He then listened intently about the setups... and Lily's regenerative powers. He swallowed, but didn't mind the talk, as he just chugged a bit to force any bile back down his throat. As Emilena explained that placing Lily's head in a box might be the way to go... he raised his brows. "Well first off... that's OK... I don't retch easily." he replied. "Second... that... might work." He frowned, nodding. "What about complete destruction of the head? Throwing it in a tree masticator or something." he suggested. "Those things tend to turn logs into dust." he pointed out.

"Still..." he moved his head slightly to the side. "Head in a box may work. I just hope she couldn't use her powers for anything else if... she's still able to do that while alive." he mused aloud now. "Wouldn't want her escaping after all. But if you think it has a chance... then... I say go for it. I could provide whatever assistance you need... for whatever it's worth." the ferret concluded.

"The head regenerates from being completely destroyed, like the rest of her. Leaving it intact would keep variables to a minimum." Emilena bit her lip. "I don't think she'll even feel any pain; she wouldn't have regenerated far enough to even come back to life. I can handle the...unpleasant part, but I would appreciate if you have an appropriately-sized safe or other airtight container. And of course I would appreciate someone to drive me out there. But you're putting yourself at risk if you do that," she warned. "There's nothing stopping her from killing you, though you'd probably be fine if you stayed outside in the car."

The hiccups were dying down, but when Emilena realized it might be her last drink ever, she downed the rest anyway. "But be prepared to leave quickly if she walks out and I'm not with her. Success or failure, our meeting shouldn't take too long..."

Post by: Pterano on November 08, 2018, 09:42:37 PM

Nodding, he stroked his chin a little. "I see... well... I suppose I could come up with something around here. If not, the guy who machines all my parts for rebuilding my cars' engines and such could probably whip something up. He's a master... and has resurrected and recreated engines and parts people haven't seen in over a hundred years." he explained. "So yeah, if I don't have something around here, I bet he could make it."

He thought, closing his eyes, and then reopened them as he took his beer to about halfway down the bottle. "Mm... I could stay outside in the car. Sounds like I'll need something fast if she does walk out... suppose I could run her over to buy myself some time if I needed it but... that won't be an issue. I've got enough cars down there with good power and torque." He smirked. He ran his claws through his head fur after pushing his cap up a bit. "Hm... well... guess the first step is seeing if I have anything here. If not, place a rush order with my guy, but since it's a simple box, he should have it done by the time we even get there." he told her. "When would you want to leave?" he asked, taking his beer down to a quarter left.

"So long as you prevent her from touching you, you could beat her in a fair fight easily," Emilena nodded, standing up. "Lily still has no combat skills whatsoever, it's just that she can drain your body of energy or put you into cardiac arrest with the tap of her finger." She crossed to the bar and started washing her glass. "I'm ready when you are, to be honest. I've never been one to delay the inevitable, and who knows? If all goes well, maybe I'll have time to actually enjoy relaxing in your elegant house."

Flora nodded. "I can call Bailey, of course! I wouldn't want him to think badly of you, you two are some of the kindest people I know."

She followed them into the house and, sure enough, there was an old-fashioned rotary phone sitting nearby. After several failed attempts to figure out how to dial rotary, Flora managed to reach the operator and put in a collect call to Nigel Bailey. “You got a lot of nerve calling me up under her name.” Flora was surprised by how bitter he sounded; she’d never heard him this full of barely-repressed rage. “I’m tracking your line as we speak, and you’re not gonna like who I’m sending your way.”

“Uhh, Nigel, it’s me.”

“Flora!?” Bailey snapped in equal parts anger and surprise. “Is that really you?”

“Hi...” Flora answered quickly.

“Flora, I am so sorry for not listening to you,” Bailey started. “You repeatedly warned me not to leave you with those crackpots, and I ignored you. I got distracted by the money, they were offering to shelter you on the cheap. But I guess we got what we goddamn paid for!”

“Umm...I mean, I know I said a lot of mean things about them…” Flora looked back at them nervously. “But-”

“I’m getting you out of there,” Bailey assured. “Where are you? I’m sending my guys, you warn those dykes not to lay another finger on you or it’s the last thing they’ll ever--”

“--Bailey!” Flora interrupted. “You’re wrong. They're good people.” Stunned silence answered her. “Rose has my best interests at heart, and so do Marita and Marie.”

“But-but-but they dragged you into multiple shootouts! With cyberterrorists!” Bailey stammered. “You told me one of them tried to rape you!”

“Marie meant it out of love.” The neurocotics in Flora’s system (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=14550.msg441155;topicseen#msg441155) sent her heart aflutter, and as she gripped the phone she imagined it was Rose’s soft hand. “Don’t send thugs, Nigel. I want to stay with them. I...I think I love them too.”

Bailey whistled. “You’re suffering from PTSD,” he answered. “Some sort of Stockholm Syndrome. You don’t even sound like you. Flora, I got you into this mess, and now I’m getting you out.”

“Bailey--!” Flora heard him hang up on her. “Crap.” She hung up the line. “Um, Bailey’s still not happy. I think we might need to watch our backs going forward…” she confessed to Marita and Marie.

Tony nodded, thinking on it. "Well... good to know she can't destroy my car." he smirked. "Heh... relaxing... would be amazing. I should really recharge the laser rifle but... it's got enough for a decapitating shot if I need to use it." he stated, pulling out his Glock from his waistband and ejecting the clip. "I think I'll reload this as well." he stated, heading over to his gun safe, pressing his thumb on the reader, then scanning his eye so it would open up.

"So after we leave..." he told her, slapping in a new clip to his pistol with force. "Garage door will lock behind us and go into security mode. So long as there are people in the house, the automated defenses won't activate, but if everyone leaves the house and the system detects nobody inside, security will come online and they won't be able to get back in... so we may want to tell them don't leave unless they absolutely have to, as they won't be able to get back in unless I'm present." he informed the vulpine. "We could just tell them we're making a supply run or something... whatever." he suggested.

"Take what you need." he motioned to the safe, and then whipped out his phone to place a call with his machinist. "Hi Jerry... yes it's Tony... I know you're just opening up, but I need a rush order... willing to pay your usual rush fee. It's easy though; if by the time we arrive, which should be... eh probably an hour and a half from now..." the ferret said, checking his watch. "You could whip up a very small box of your strongest titanium alloy, that would be great! It needs to be smaller than an average human head... I know those are unusual dimensions, but it's what needs to happen... I'd say if possible half the size of a human head." he ordered. "Great! All right! I'll be right over!" the ferret hung up, and smiled. "Should be ready by the time we get there." he spoke to Emilena.

"That's great, thanks again Tony," Emilena nodded. "Honestly, it will be nice having backup at this meeting. That's more than I expected to have, I usually don't involve other people in my business." She gave a rare smile. "It's weird having an ally who goes out of their way to ask how they can help."

She grabbed several 9mm magazines from the safe as Flora, Marie and Marita walked into the room. "Hey you three. Tony and I are going on a quick supply run. Can you let the others know that at least one person needs to stay here to prevent the automated defenses from activating?"

"That shouldn't be a problem, I'm certainly not planning on going anywhere." Flora replied. "Where are you running to, Tony? Could you bring me back a musical instrument? Literally anything, it could even be a kazoo, I just miss writing songs."

"Heh yeah well... figured I've been inactive enough... I have a lot of ground to make up so... may as well start now." he smiled, nodding. "And yeah... I guess that would be odd in some circumstances." he agreed. "I'm just trying to do what I can... not mess up." he stated.

As Marita, Marie, and Flora entered the room from the elevator, Tony nodded to them, and listened to Emilena's brief little explanation, nodding in approval as it was accurate. Blinking, he looked to Flora. "Erm... uh... I'm not sure we're heading to any place really like that... but... I guess maybe if something's on the way..." he kind of trailed off here, not being very musically inclined himself. He didn't really know too many music stores around here.

"Anyway, help yourself to the kitchen, just don't overdo it." He cautioned. "It's very well stocked. We're mostly just getting more ammo, some weapons, and perhaps some food shopping... unsure yet. We're kind of making this up as we go." he explained. "Anyway..." placing the Glock back behind him in his waist, he nodded to Emilena. "Let's head out. Give me a call if you need anything or don't know how to turn something on." he smirked, walking to the elevator. "We'll be back in a few hours." he informed them, hitting the button for the elevator.

Riding the brass elevator down to his garage, Tony exited, the lights kicking back on and illuminating the shiny rows of vastly different painted cars spread out before them. "So uh... I had three ideas for fast cars... you feeling more open or enclosed?" he asked Emilena, smiling slightly.

Now that she was washed and bandaged and hydrated, Emilena could really appreciate the stellar collection of vintage vehicles Tony had accrued. "I say it a lot, but I still can't believe you're risking your life with us," she breathed in awe. You've got it made here."

She thought about his request. A closed car would be more strategically secure, but she'd also like to feel the wind on her face one last time before Lily kills her. "Let's do open," she grinned, only slightly worried at the number of indulgences she was taking on account of her possible imminent death.

"Aw heheh... well yeah... I guess I do..." He rubbed the back of his neck. "I dunno... I guess there's something to be said for friends... and for the thrill of it all..." he admitted. "But yeah... it'd be nice if someday I could just leave all the gunfights and risking my life behind me." he admitted, wandering over to the Duesenberg to retrieve the laser rifle.

As she suggested open, he grinned. "I was hoping you'd say that! Been wanting to take this baby out for a serious spin for a long time now." He began walking down the rows, stopping at a gorgeous blue and cream colored, massive, older looking car. It was a convertible... a large one, and was the definition of open air touring. "So while this thing may look ancient, you will not see a finer example of automobile ever made in the 1910s." he grinned, patting its hood. "This is an incredibly rare Crane-Simplex... it may even be the only one of its kind remaining... if you were insanely rich around the time we were killing each other in the First World War, you'd buy this... but I mean insanely rich. The chassis alone started at $5,500... which is about $150,000 in today's currency... and the custom coachwork? Pfft... tack on another $175,000 in today's currency... you're looking at the equivalent of an over $300,000 car." he explained, smirking. "Its astronomical price drove away most buyers... making it rare even for its day... but for those lucky enough to own it... well..." He opened the passenger side door now to show off its lavish interior, being all maroon leather seats, nickel plated instrument gauges, and wood paneling.

"The back has a footrest, wooden drawers for storing things, and an unfolding windscreen you could put up for a bit of extra protection if you didn't want the wind blowing in your face." he outlined. "The most impressive thing though... is the engine. 563.7 cubic inches... massive by any standards, 110 horsepower straight-six capable of propelling this beauty at 90 mph... easily! For 1916... that was insane! I have NO idea what in the hell they thought people would be doing back then, considering all the roads were dirt, mostly rural, and pockmarked with holes, but for over 300K in today's money back then... you were purchasing a real super car... a car that could easily put anything it drove by to shame. You have to keep in mind... in 1916, most cars were barely putting out 40 horsepower, and doing about 25 mph. This car was a beast... owned by the likes of John D. Rockefeller and Frederick Vanderbilt. Unfortunately..." Tony climbed in, and began pumping a lever on the dash to get some gas into the engine. "They were only made for about two years before the First World War caused them to shift focus to aircraft engines... and never again were Crane-Simplexes made..." he sighed, turning on the electric switch and sliding behind the wheel.

Pulling out the choke, and and retarding the spark with a lever on the steering wheel, the ferret then pushed in a small pedal on the floor to engage the starter. As the engine began to crank into life, it turned over a few times and then started up with a cacophonous roar, filling the garage with its noise before Tony advanced the spark by moving the lever back up, causing the engine to even out into a smoother, steady hum. Pushing in the choke, he grinned to her. "Well let's go! We got an overpowered human to end!" he called, patting the seat next to him.

Emilena narrowed her eyes at the manual choke, completely unable to guess how it worked. "Uhh, I've never admitted this to anyone, but...I actually never got a legal driver's license," she confessed as they drove through the hills away from Tony's residence. "They gave me a state-issued ID when I passed through the Growth Acceleration program, and nobody ever brought it up while I went through basic training. Lanthae squad cars had an emergency self-driving feature and I just used it until I'd taught myself to drive."

She rolled down the window. "It's pretty amazing what you can get away with by just letting people assume things of you." She glanced at Tony. "Speaking of which, do you think Awe's being completely honest with us? You've had more 1-on-1 time with him than I have. What's his endgame?"

Tony put the car in gear, then released the parking brake, and pulled out of the garage, the door opening and then closing behind them. Tony yanked the shift lever down into neutral, then into 2nd as they began heading through the hills, the car lurching forward, indicative of its power. It required double-clutching, but he knew how to do that as easily as normal shifting. "Really?" he asked, looking over to her with a smile as the wind whipped about them, the ferret taking the car into third gear now. "Heh... well... I mean most cars nowadays drive themselves... auto features and all that... driving something like this... it's different. You're... you're almost a part of the car in a way... you control when you shift... how fast you go... and can control it in icy conditions, etc." He explained. "I love it... my electric car... it's great and all... but it just drives itself practically... it's like you're sleeping, you know?" he asked, looking over to her briefly as they merged onto the highway, Tony shifting the Crane-Simplex into fourth gear, the big "land yacht" starting to accelerate into higher speeds, wind rustling his fur as they really got going.

"My dad found this at uh... I can't even remember now... an auction I think. So damn rare... it's the rarest car he ever purchased, and he's acquired some rare ones!" he conceded. "Lots of power, as you can see." he moved the old vehicle smoothly by one of the electrics, the driver staring at them in surprise as they went by, probably not expecting a car well over 100 years old to be faster than a modern convenience. "I have to admit... I much prefer vintage luxury cars... so much more torque and power and appointments but... eh... it's my thing I guess." he shrugged, grinning now. "This is what I really like though..." He moved the second lever on the steering wheel, the one that wasn't the spark advance, and soon, he took his foot paw off the accelerator, and the car was maintaining its speed on its own. "Hand throttle." he pointed to the lever. "It's like a very early and primitive cruise control. So long as it's set, car goes the same speed. If I move it, it'll adjust the speed. Pretty damn nice, really."

"Awe?" he asked, looking over to her briefly again. "Uh... I think he's being genuine. I mean... without having spoken in depth with him... I'd like to think he's sincere... he answered my questions... of course... that doesn't rule out good training but... he was upfront... asked me a few things... and I mean look at it this way... when I was parked with you guys in the Duesenberg in the hotel parking garage... he could've killed me then and there... and all of you, given you were all incapacitated. Could've wiped us all out on the spot... and didn't. That's gotta count for something, right?" he asked now, passing another electric. "Endgame well... I don't know... I need to observe him more but... I suppose time will tell. Your guess is as good as mind." he admitted.

"He absolutely doesn't want us dead," Emilena agreed. "Or arrested. He had a golden opportunity to blow our cover at the hospital, but instead he salvaged the entire heist." She shook her head. "While offering to join our team, he told us that he's primarily employed by a single company to look out for their best interests. I can't help but wonder if he's using us to gain info on Brennan, and whether we'd be letting the cat out of the bag if his employer discovered what secrets Brennan is hiding." She shrugged. "I just can't really trust that a company who employs Augmented freedom fighters for corporate espionage would be any better than Brennan itself, and I don't like how disposable we become after helping Awe infiltrate Brennan's HQ. Am I reading too much into this?"

As Tony cruised along, he listened to what the vulpine had to outline, and he chewed his bottom lip, mulling over her words as he kept his eyes on the road. "Um... I don't think so." he replied, shaking his head. "I think you have valid points... if he's out to learn more about Brennan... and his employer is as well... then... it is possible we'd be expendable after that. So... if you don't trust him... that may be the best course. I don't know... it's hard to say right now whose side he's on. We should be wary... maybe keep a gun on him... discreetly... if you know what I mean." he told her, settling back into the comfortable seat a bit as they drew nearer to the machinist's shop, their first stop on this escapade. "Oh and... who is Brennan anyway? What do we know about him?" he asked.

Give me the phone ' Marita said and she redialed the number ' Hello Nigel " Marita said as bailey answered on the other end " Look, Marita I have no idea WTF you girls did to Flora but that shit needs to stop now! shes acting like an Branch freaking Davidian!" Nigel, We just got her back, about an hour ago ' Marota said " and furthermore any claims that we tried to assault her are complete BS. Why would we try to harm someone who has been placed in our care, and who is worth literally millions to us in full health? Further we know you, we know that if we did anything to harm or upset her, you'd turn us into freaking rugs to wipe your feet on!" true' Bailey sighed. " flora hated us, at first and didn't want to be put under our care in the first place. So, this whole slog started because she rebelled. There's only so much you can do if a teenager doesn't want to listen. You know that.'

Wheres Rose? shes the one I trusted of you three , after all. I didnt know this would go so pear shaped. ' We dont know where she is " Marita said " well, shit. ' Bailey sighed. " look, you got Flora back, alive. Good, that shows you're not utterly hopeless. if you want that money I promised you , you make damn sure she doesnt get grabbed again, and you are not to lay a finger on her. Understood? And-and get her back to normal! She sounds like a passenger on the Love Boat!" Shes a teenager, Bailey when they fall in love, its deep and illogical. I was a teenager once after all, I know what thats like" Whatever you have to do to fix her, do it!" bailey snapped. " I want her back to the girl she was when I sent her to you' Well could you send us some of her music videos? that could help. "Bailey paused in thought for a few seconds before answering "Ok.. fine..I'll send you ' Dance All Night" Resist the Urge" And Groove to Me". theres "Twisted All up" too but thats really just a demo. We were still working on it before this happened. Hopefully watching that will help. I'll send the "Live" versions too. The real trick, is explaining my stars absence. Its been weeks." Why dont you say shes working on that music video? it can take weeks for a film star or singer to get a part or a song down. " A whole month , though? most of the music videos we shot took a couple days to get down! " Say shes going Retro" Marita said. " are we talking 2030s retro, or really old school, like Vogue-era Madonna? ' whichever took longer to get done. " Fine Madonna then. check your email. bailey out' bailey said and hung up the phone. Marita sighe then turned to Flora ' well Bailey wuil be sending us some of your recent music videos to watch Flora. Wants you to work on the one you were working on before all this started. Thank you can do that?"

_ Bianca headed up the street stopping as she show the carnage around the safe house ' She rushed inside as best she could while carrying bags of breakfast food " Kintoki! FLora! You there?" She started before stopping as she beheld a pair of dead guards lying in the hallway ' What the hell happened here!' Bianca fairly screeched.

"That works for me. So long as at least two of us aren't blindsided if the other shoe drops," Emilena nodded.

She sat back. "Brennan Synthetics is the name of the company. The founder, Richard Brennan, went missing two months ago. (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=14550.msg444482;topicseen#msg444482) All we know is that Brennan was responsible for those Augments blue-screening earlier this year, and they've got enough political influence to scapegoat the Purifiers and sweep everything under the rug. The weird part is, Soren thinks the kill patch was intentionally pushed, but we can't figure out why a cybernetics company would willingly cause a PR disaster this large. Their stocks have plummeted and financially they may never recover."

She shrugged. "Lily thought they were being setup by a third party and the Purifier deflection was a hastily-arranged cover story, but she went AWOL before revealing why she thought that. Me, I'm not sure what to think."

"Yeah, sure!" Flora piped up excitedly. "Will you watch them with me? Or, uh, if you're not into pop, that's okay. We could queue up YouTube and watch whatever music videos you're the most interested in." She gave them a loving smile. "I just like spending time with you, no matter what we do."

"Bianca!" Kintoki came rushing up from the basement. "Voice down, please, don't wake the neighbors!" He lowered his voice. "The Purifiers ambushed us and kidnapped Flora. But it's all right, we're pretty sure she was in on the breakout. They're not going to harm her."

The surviving guards filed out of the basement. Most looked extremely excited or pleased and each was clutching a golden credit chip. Kintoki handed a similar one to Bianca. "Under no circumstances are you to follow Flora, okay?" he commanded. "Let her go. Honestly, you're a good-looking woman, you can do a lot better than her anyway." He motioned to the blood and corpses surrounding the safehouse, which was already being chemically absorbed by an aggressive cleaning solvent being secreted from the lawn and carpet. The walls were also slowly cleansing themselves of blood and sealing bullet holes with caulk. "That there is a million credits. You've earned it. Go retire somewhere quiet, and remember your vows of silence. We'll be in touch if you break them." His tone indicated she wouldn't want that to happen. "Now if you'll excuse me, I need to leave as soon as possible to reach Brennan HQ before dark. If you want to stay here and make sure the self-cleaning subroutines finish their job, I'll wire you an extra 500 credits for every photograph of a safehouse room looking spotless."

As Tony slowed, pushing the hand throttle back up and taking manual control of the car by pushing his paw back on the accelerator, he took an exit, pushing in the clutch and brake as he began to roll to a halt on the off ramp. "So..." as the Crane-Simplex coasted to a stop, and Tony shifted back into first gear as he took it onto a smaller road after waiting at the light, he looked over to the vulpine. "How about we have each others' backs on that? I watch him as you do... if he moves against us 'unexpectedly', we'll be ready for him. Two guns on him are better than one, right?" he asked, smirking as he shifted through neutral, and then second, then neutral and into third as they got rolling into a higher speed.

As she outlined what had happened to Brennan Synthetics, he tried to process it all, and figure his way around it. "I see... so... basically... they get blamed for blue-screening Augments... their stock is tanking... Brennan is gone... and Purifiers were blamed... but Lily thinks there's more to it than that." the ferret commented, following along as he downshifted to turn onto another road. "Well... perhaps you could ask her before you end her." he suggested. "And... we need to think about who has the most to gain from this... it's neither the Purifiers nor Brennan Synthetics... Purifiers are coming under heavy fire... the company is in the toilet... who's left? Augments?" he asked, looking over to her now. "Some...

competitor to Brennan Synthetics?" Turning right, Tony took the Crane-Simplex down the final road that led to his machinist.

"Well, not to beat a dead horse, but Awe's employer would greatly benefit from a powerful competitor going belly-up," Emilena pointed out. "Plus it would explain why Awe knew enough to find us in that bar." She shrugged. "If you're comfortable finding a way to work this into an innocent conversation, I'd love to learn the name of Awe's employer. I'm sure he'd be suspicious if I asked, but you two have already shared several male bonding discussions. He might trust you enough to just tell you the truth."

Emilena glanced out the window, trying to ascertain where in Seryet they were, but the area looked unfamiliar. "I'll try to get more info from Lily as well. It's usually pretty easy to get her talking."

Alright I'll stay here for the rest of the day and make sure they complete the job. i'll email you the pictures' Bianca said, as she slipped the million creds into her pocket, " then i'll join you at HQ , i won;t have a place lined up for a few weeks. Shame about Flora, I was starting to like her too " Bianca said handing some of the food she had gotten to the guards, who grabbed whatever they wanted as they funneled out of the basement, soon the food was gone., and both the gusards and kintonki had gone, leaving bianca alone in the slowing self-repairing safehouse. Well alone, wasnt exactly true: the rooma that followed her efvverywhere was still there. bianca sighed as she began walking around the safehouse ' way to ditch me flora ' she said softly to herself.

As he thought about it, it made far more sense, and as the massive convertible bumped its way into a parking lot, he exhaled. "Right... well... they could be behind it then, if they stand to benefit. That makes the most sense to me too...it's not the two parties suffering... it's whomever is gaining the most out of this." he stated, trying to be logical. "I could try and ask him but... if he's trained... he may not be so loose as to volunteer that information but if he does..." Tony paused, bringing the Crane-Simplex to a halt in a parking spot outside a nondescript concrete single story building that spanned the whole block. Shifting into neutral, Tony pulled the brake lever back and turned the electric switch off, shutting off the mammoth car.

Closing his eyes, Tony thought back to the conversation he'd first had with Awe, searching for the name, then reopened them. "When we first spoke, he mentioned to me that he was a 'former' employee of Werner Industries... but that now he's 'freelance' mercing. You think he's being honest?" he asked. "Or you think he still actually works for Werner Industries? I know a bit about them... weapons manufacturer... arms trade. Did some running for them back in the day." he explained, putting his arm over the seat as he looked across to her.

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on November 10, 2018, 03:21:24 PM

"Its possible," Emilena replied. "Though most freelancers I know peddle their trade to get paid, and he's working for us pro bono." She nodded thoughtfully when Tony revealed he knew Awe's former employer. "I don't know anything about Werner off the top of my head. I'll do some digging tonight, when we get home." Assuming she gets home...

She noticed they'd pulled into a parking lot. "Anything I should know about meeting Jerry?" She asked. "'Don't make eye contact, let you do the talking,' that sort of thing?" Even without his business connection, Tony was naturally far more charismatic than her, and she was prepared to give him the limelight no matter what sort of person Jerry turned out to be.

"That's true... which to me doesn't make any sense... why work for free? And also... why leave a cushy job with a ton of benefits, as he claimed they had, to go freelance it with no benefits and unsteady pay?" he inquired. "I think he may have just switched roles in the company... but we'll see." Opening his door, he stepped down onto the running board, and then the ground. "He's a nice guy... he's got no tics... really admires my old cars so... you don't have to guard yourself or anything." he assured her, as Jerry, a zorilla dressed in overalls emerged from the front door, spectacles perched on his snout as he broke out into a wide smile.

"Tony Stracci, as I live and breathe! What the hell is that?" the zorilla asked, pointing behind the ferret to the Crane-Simplex. "Is that REALLY what I think it is?"

"1916 Crane-Simplex my friend! Might be the only one left in existence!" Tony spread his arms wide.

"Son of a bitch... I didn't know you owned something like that! I've tooled a lot of engines for you but nothing of that caliber!"

"Heh... yeah well... it's the rarest in my collection so... it rarely gets to see the light of day." he confessed, giving the zorilla a nod. "Anyway... I've directly debited the amount into your account. You have what I ordered? This is Emilena, my associate." the ferret introduced the two, hooking a claw over to the fox.

"Pleasure to meet you." Jerry nodded to her, and produced the box from behind his back. "Strongest damn alloy I have... slightly smaller than a normal human head... will this suffice?" he asked, holding it out to them. Looking over to Emilena, Tony raised his brows and put his paws behind his back.

"Well... what do you think, Ms. Echo?"

(Ooc: haha I had to Google zorilla, and I'm glad I did, at first I thought you meant a zebra-gorilla hybrid (https://www.deviantart.com/pixel-pushers/art/Zebrilla-Gorilla-Zebra-Hybrid-722610059))

"Pleasure to meet you!" Emilena shook his hand warmly. "If you think the car's nice to look at, I hope you get the chance to ride in it one day. Purrs like a cat and faster than a bullet." She flashed a warm smile. "Stay on Tony's good side and you never know!" she joked.

She took the box and whistled approvingly. "Oh, this will do just fine," she nodded, testing its corners and finding it airtight and unyielding. "Perfect size too, you certainly know your craft. Thank you so much for finishing this on such short notice."

((Hahah definitely not! We are talking about a striped polecat!))

At Emilena's description of the Crane-Simplex, the striped polecat's eyes lit up. "Oh! I don't doubt it at all! That was the world's first super car in a way! I'd love to tinker with it at some point but... heh... to get a ride in it would be an honor and a pleasure!" he admitted, nodding.

"You might someday! And if it needs work, you know you're the first one I'm coming to." the ferret informed him. As Emilena inspected the box, and approved of it, Tony nodded gratefully.

"Oh of course!" Jerry responded. "Tony is my best customer, and relies on me for very unique requests so... this was fortunately relatively simple. Won't ask what you need it for, but I'm glad you approve; I know it's definitely not for one of your cars, but hey! Wish you luck with it all the same."

Shaking Jerry's paw, Tony gave him another nod. "Well thank you very much, friend. We should probably roll, as we have a prior engagement, but as usual, your workmanship is high quality."

"Of course! And you open it with a push of the button on the side, and can lock it with your thumb, if you want." Jerry explained, pointing his claw to the thumb reader on the side. "It can be reprogrammed, but you need to be bring it back here." he told them.

"Right! Well... excellent work, as always. Can you direct me to Lily's location?" Tony asked, starting to head back to the car. Opening the door, he slid back behind the wheel, Jerry intently watching from behind his glasses as Tony pushed in the starter pedal on the floor, the engine turning over and coming to life with a nice roar that caused the zorilla to grin. There was no need to choke the engine or regard the spark, as it was a warm start.

"OK so... what neighborhood is she in? Section of the city." Tony asked Emilena, looking over to her.

Emilena waved politely to Jerry as they got back in the car. "It's in the cellar of one of the co-ops between the Warren and Zolyiak Districts," Emilena explained. "Basically just turn into Carriage Hills once we hit 8th street and I can direct you from there."

She kept looking at the box. She briefly wondered whether she should come up with an excuse for carrying it, but Lily honestly probably wouldn't even pay attention to anything beyond getting what she wants.

"Ah yeah... OK! I know where that is roughly." Tony nodded, shifting into reverse so they could back out of the spot as he released the brake. "Sounds like not a great place... but it's certainly not the worst either. There are plenty of worse locations than Carriage Hills." He pointed out, putting them back into first gear to get rolling by sliding the shift lever from all the way forward to about midway back.

As the Crane-Simplex began conveying them back to the highway, he tapped the wooden wheel with a paw. "So what's your plan?" he asked, merging back into traffic and increasing speed. "You going to go in while I wait outside and try and kill her without her anticipating it? Or something else?" He set the hand throttle so he could take his foot off the accelerator, moving the car along at about 75 mph now as he stayed in the middle lane, passing by slower traffic in the right.

"Yeah, it's a lower-middle class area," Emilena replied. "This particular co-op's been empty for almost a year, landlord went bankrupt and government's been dragging its feet on doing anything with the house. I'm pretty sure somebody had been cooking meth in the cellar before we showed up."

Emilena watched cars zip by at an insane rate; nobody on the road could keep up with the Crane-Simplex' raw horsepower. "I have to play everything by the book, or she might suspect something's up. Crawl through the hatchpiece, get her into a dialogue, and shoot her at some point before she can tag me."

The last complication Emilena kept to herself; she had no way of knowing if their mental bond allowed Lily to read her thoughts. If Lily knew everything she had planned, her gambit wasn't going to get very far. Just to be safe, she mulled over the details from her old sleeper agent training (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=13105.msg423268#msg423268) and tried to shield her mind from outside interference.

Flora poured herself a bottle of the most expensive whiskey she could find. "So wait, do we actually have to work on a music video? How are we going to do that? Do you have a camera?" She thought, and supplied her own answer. "We could use your cell phone, modern phones have killer cameras, with all the megapixels. This could be fun!" Truth be told, she was just looking forward to an opportunity to spend time with Marita and Marie. Too bad Rose isn't here, she thought wistfully, especially since she's the only one with an acting and dancing background...

Even Tony had to admit, he was surprised at the good clip his Crane-Simplex had, passing electrics on the right hand side with minimal issues, whilst a few passed him on the left who were pushing close to 90... which he could easily do, he just didn't feel it necessary right now, as there was no need for that kind of speed at present. The leather seat was rather comfortable, and he nodded as he listened to her explanation.

"OK well... doesn't sound like a horrible neighborhood, then. Not that... anyone could drive this car, even if they wanted to steal it." he smirked. "Shift lever is way different than your standard H pattern after all." he explained.

"All right." he nodded again. "Just be careful... take nothing for granted... and if you need the backup... I will provide it." he told her, exiting down another ramp into the Carriage Hills neighborhood, slowing to a halt, then shifting into first and then second as they started moving down 8th Street. "OK so... where are we going from here? You direct and I'll get you there." he told her resolutely, having pushed back the hand throttle to nothing, going back to the accelerator pedal to control the car. He had left the top down for the entire journey, having loved the feel of the wind in his fur, but now... it was time to get serious... time to... end Lily.

"Right there," Emilena gulped, pointing out the two-story house at the end of the street. It looked identical to every single other house on the block save for the Forclosed sign. Emilena realized it had been less than three months since she and Lily had hidden here. Jesus, this has been a hell of a few months…

She took a deep breath as the car rumbled to a stop. "Remember, if she comes out and I'm not there...floor it and don't look back." Unbuckling her seatbelt, she crossed to the fence and pushed aside the decorative boulder covering the crawlspace into the cellar.

“Lily…?” Emilena muttered under her breath as she squeezed through the crawlspace. There were their boxes, and Lily's laptop plugged into the far wall, but her nose was the first thing to realize something was off. Instead of being hit with the familiar musk of a dusty suburban cellar, the safehouse smelled like formaldehyde and aged blood.

It didn’t take long for Emilena to locate the source; Lily’s old planning desk had been converted into an operating table, and Lily herself was shackled to it by hands and ankles. She wasn’t breathing, and as Emilena got closer she could make out a very familiar pattern of scars and needlepricks across her body, the exact same phantom wounds Emilena had developed the past few months. The freshest incision was the seven-letter word carved into Lily’s thigh; the same one that had brought Emilena here in the first place.

Emilena suddenly realized she wasn’t alone and whirled around to see someone behind her wielding a frying pan. “Get back!” Emilena gasped, preemptively kicking them in the stomach. Her assailant had slow reflexes and took the full brunt of the kick, and with a flash of surprise Emilena recognized their cry.

“Lily?” she stammered, stumbling backwards. “What the…?”

“Oh my god, Emilena! I didn’t realize it was you!” Lily lowered the pan, wincing in pain. “I’m so sorry, you should have announced yourself!”

“I didn’t, I...I saw the table! Who the hell is that?” Emilena leaned against the wall for support, catching her bearings. She’d dropped Jerry’s box, and couldn’t see where it had fallen in the dark.

“Are you alright?” Lily stepped forward to help, but Emilena motioned her away. “The body on the table is why I called you. It’s the psionic monster that possessed me in Lanthae.”

Emilena glanced at the body again. “Wait, really? I thought that thing was long gone.”

“I did too…” Lily sighed. “Until it came after me. I left the others to keep you all safe. I...knocked it out with my powers, but now I don’t know what to do.” She looked pleadingly at Emilena as the vulpine walked over to examine the body. “Nothing I’ve tried will kill it, I can only keep it sedated. Please help me.”

Emilena narrowed her eyes. Lily wasn't acting like the dangerous sociopath she was expecting. “No offense, but you seem a little more…polite? Than the last few times we’ve met?”

Lily turned away in shame. “You don’t have to mince your words. I was insane. I’m really, really sorry about what I’ve put you through.” She looked back to see Emilena hadn’t lowered her defensive stance. “Seeing this beast again was...humbling. I realized I’d abandoned those I truly cared about. You, Soren, Axel...” she gulped. “I was becoming just as bad as it.” Her lip quivered. Emilena couldn’t believe what she was hearing. “Which is why I want to kill it,” Lily finished. “Turn over a new leaf. Finally put the past behind me.”

The two stared at each other for several strained seconds. "Please, Emilena," Lily whispered, cheeks flushing red. "I need you."

Emilena looked from the monster's body, to Lily, and back. She sighed. "This isn't how I thought this meeting would go... but okay."

Lily teared up. “Emilena...it means so much to hear you say that.”

“Yeah...” Emilena pointed her thumb across the cellar at their old boxes. “Did you try my old katana? It can cut through anything, especially with the micro-vibrate setting.”

Lily’s eyes brightened. “Oh! Why didn’t I think of that?” She quickly sprinted over and rifled through the boxes. After a few seconds of fruitless searching, she realized what was going on.

She turned around to see Emilena wielding her pistol, while standing to block both the exit and the operating table. “Lily was there when my katana got destroyed…” Emilena narrowed her eyes at the imposter. “Plus I know Lily wouldn’t have used a frying pan when she can kill someone with a touch.”

Lily’s clone sighed.

As Tony pulled up to the house, he shifted into neutral and then set the parking brake, listening it to click back into place. Relaxing, he looked over to her. "All right... good luck... and if neither of you come out... I may head in after you... we'll see. If I see her come out..." he twisted around to reach into the back seat, pulling the laser rifle up and resting it on his lap. "I'll cut her head off then floor it." he nodded.

He'd parked far enough away from the building that anyone coming out probably wouldn't be able to react in time and race over to his car before he took off, and briefly considered heading up a house just in case, but figured he was OK. He was technically parked in between the lot the house was on, and the next house over, favoring the next house over in fact. He watched as the vulpine exited, and bit his lower lip, producing a toothpick that he promptly jammed his mouth as he watched her head inside. "Fuck..." he whispered to himself. "I hope this works."

As he left the Crane-Simplex idling, he impatiently drummed a claw on the wooden wheel, hoping everything was going all right in there. The rumble of the car was almost agonizing, but he had to keep it running, as he didn't want to risk a rough startup just in case things went south. He needed to be able to drive and drive quickly if it wasn't Emilena exiting the property.

An idea struck him, and the ferret undid the clasp on the passenger side of the split windshield, moving the glass upwards 45 degrees. This was normally to provide fuller ventilation to passenger and driver but now, Tony had an unobstructed line of fire to the house, and wouldn't have to shoot through the windshield if he did need to open up.

“I don’t want to fight you,” the fake Lily started.

“What, now that I can fight back?” Emilena snarled.

The imposter nodded. “I won’t lie. I’ve read your file,” she dropped her pan and raised her hands. “I know you would kill me in a fair fight.”

“Then you should have read it harder, because I’ve killed surrendering opponents before…” Emilena swiped the scalpel from the operating table before her opponent got any ideas. “But first I want to know who you are and why you lured me here!”

“I’m a clone. The Purifiers grew me using the same pod and the same DNA you and Mr. Whent used to create the Lily you know.”

“Are you working with the Purifiers then?” Emilena demanded.

“No, I abandoned them first chance I got. I’m only in this for myself.” She motioned to Lily’s body on the table. “If I can kill her under the right conditions, conditions I have setup in this room, I can steal her psionic powers. I’ve already worked with Mr. Whent to sever her totem with him, it was preventing her from dying.”

“A mental connection caused by two minds inhabiting the same body. Lily formed it when she briefly inhabited Mr. Whent’s body back in Lanthae (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=12341.msg403237#msg403237). Mr. Whent broke that connection after we lured her to an alleyway and tranquilized her.”

“Axel agreed to that?” Emilena asked.

“He was pleased to be rid of her! Wouldn’t even take payment.” The clone balled her fists. “But it wasn’t enough. I performed the operation a dozen times, but she just keeps reviving herself. I’ve spent a fortune on black market sedatives, she’s been clinically dead for weeks, but she won’t stop healing!” She glanced at the word carved into Lily’s thigh. “Until you sent that message, and I realized she must have another totem. One even stronger, strong enough that you two were sharing wounds. She can’t die while you live.”

Emilena almost asked when Lily would have had the chance to inhabit her body, but then realized the most likely occasion. (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=12341.msg398629;topicseen#msg398629) She glanced at Lily. “Hmm. And if you had been able to kill me right now, and it had all worked...what then? What were you planning on doing with these powers once you had them?”

The clone shrugged. “Honestly, I haven’t thought that far ahead. I just want them.” Her eyes glinted.

“We’re both clones, she’s no more original than I am. Why should she get them, while I don’t?”

“Because life isn’t fair.” Emilena lowered her scalpel. “But we might be able to come to an agreement. If I help you get those powers, will you help my team? We’re preparing to go on an extremely dangerous mission, and we could really use a medic.”

Lily’s clone raised her eyebrows. “I...why on earth would you trust me with that?”

Emilena tossed the scalpel aside, where it embedded into the woodwork. “If you’re a clone of Lily, you’ve got her brain chemistry. You’ve got her predilections. And, in all honesty, you look and sound more like Lily than she has for these past few months.”

The clone’s hands trembled. “I don’t understand.”

“You could have carried a gun and just shot me when I walked into this room, you could have murdered Axel because he was a totem. But you didn’t. And that makes you more of the Lily I remember than the person on this table.” Emilena holstered her pistol. “I want my friend back, before she became an amoral, narcissistic psychopath. If that has to be you, I can live with that.”

The clone gulped. “But...I’d have to kill you. Your bond is stronger than the one Lily had with Mr. Whent, it’s an outright mental link.”

“You said you put Lily into a state of clinical death,” Emilena pointed out. “Do that to me.”

The clone bit her lip. “I don’t have the tech to bring you back out.”

Emilena sat down. “Then the millisecond you get those powers, you know what to do.”

As Tony tapped his claw on the wooden steering wheel, his breaths were coming out in something that resembled pants, the ferret's anxiety rising with the passing minutes. He kept glancing to his watch, then shook his head. "Stop it! It'll be fine!" he whispered to himself, but the tension didn't dissolve. As he kept his gaze on the house, he figured he'd head in there in 30 minutes if no sign of anyone emerged by then. So far it had only been... glancing to his watch again, Tony could see 10 minute had elapsed. OK... 20 to go.

He ran his paw over his facial fur, matting it down and then pushing it up in an awkward fashion. He had half-expected the house to explode in bright beams of light or... something; some sort of epic battle, but there was nothing. As he sat in the comfortable leather seat, he felt the idling Crane-Simplex continue to rumble a bit beneath him, the straight-six still running as he still impatiently waited for something to happen; the house to explode... beams to shoot out... the ground to rumble... Lily to emerge... Emilena to emerge. But it was quiet... if he didn't know what was going on in that house, he'd say it was just a normal day in this neighborhood.

Rubbing his nose, the ferret glanced to his watch again... only a minute had passed. "Dammit..." he whispered. "I need to calm the hell down." Gripping the wheel with his left paw, he sat in the big car, and continued his vigil. The fact that no sounds emanated from the house... good or bad sign? Emilena was either very efficient... or something had gone wrong. But either way... he'd wait... give it the full 30 minutes, and then head inside. That would be more than enough time for someone to emerge, after all.

The minutes dragged on. The sun reached the top of the sky and began slowly ambling towards the horizon.

Right on the thirty-minute mark, someone suddenly emerged from the crawlspace. Lily winced at the sunlight, but it didn’t stop her from creeping out to the sidewalk. Without even a glance at Tony, she began sprinting away from the house at a breakneck speed. Reaching a nearby fence leading to Carriage Park, she vaulted it and disappeared from view.

Emilena’s first feeling of resuscitation was a series of electrical shocks that sent her body racking. Her adrenaline levels were going into overdrive, and she wasn’t causing it.

She gasped, a deep ragged gulp of air that made her chest feel like it would pop. Emilena pressed her palms into her eyes and ground her teeth in pain as she rolled onto her hands and knees.

“...Fuck…” The vulpine reached under her shirt and grasped the vasculator she’d stolen from the hospital (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=14550.msg469268#msg469268). “I’d really hoped it wouldn’t come to using this thing. What the hell happened?” She tried to stand up. “Thought your dumb ass was going to revive me!”

She slowly realized she was alone. Other than the entrance to the hideout hanging open, there was no sign of where the Lily clone had scampered off to. Bastard left me for dead...maybe she’s not as different as I thought.

Emilena checked on the corpse on the table. It had gone into rigor mortis, and its eyes were glassy and lifeless. And still, Emilena felt a need to check for a pulse. She’d seen Lily die so many times before, after all…

But after every check she could think of, plus more than enough time for Lily’s healing powers to have restored her to life, Emilena was forced to conclude that her old partner was finally dead. She sighed, finally feeling the gravity of her actions. “Lily…” she couldn’t resist confessing aloud. “I’m sorry. I don’t know if I made the right choice, but you didn’t leave me much of one.”

Morning was almost over. The team would be waking up, and she needed to leave. After shutting Lily’s eyes for the last time, Emilena squeezed out of the hideout entrance and sealed it shut behind her. "It's done..." she gritted her teeth as she slipped into the car, clutching her chest. "She's dead." She looked pale, almost as pale as when Tony saw her in the hospital alleyway.

As Tony gripped the rifle and prepared to head in, noting the time was now up, he tensed, seeing Lily emerge from the house. "Shit!" he whispered, getting it ready to fire through the windshield. As he raised it up, he prepared to fire, but she took off running, not in his direction, fortunately. Watching her go and leap a fence, he cursed. "Dammit!" That meant that Emilena was dead... and a freaking psionic psychopath was now on the loose!

Opening the door, Tony was preparing to hop out of the car to retrieve Emilena's corpse, still gripping the rifle, when he saw her emerge, and froze. "What the... hell?" he asked quietly, getting behind the wheel, and hoping this wasn't some trick... though Lily wasn't capable of those kinds of things... or so he thought.

As she reentered the Crane-Simplex, he kept the laser rifle in his lap, though this time, it was pointed at her, and his paw was on the trigger, even if it wasn't raised. "What the hell are you talking about?" he asked, looking to her with confusion. "No she's not! I just saw her leave the house and head into the park! What the hell happened in there?" he asked, his eyes searching her for answers, and ready in case they were suspect. He noted the very pale demeanor... like when she'd come out of the hospital, poisoned. What the hell had taken place in that house?

Soren thanked Tony for the ride and safehouse and soon got to work analyzing every scrap of data he could lay his hands on. Of course, the news about the deadly augments had spread and in many cases went out of control. Brennan Synthetics was a shell of its once successful self.

Anne looked over the news and papers that were scattered over the elegant wooden table. "So, while I was in the hospital, I overheard someone mentioning that a bunch of of removed augments had been stolen."

Soren shrugged. "Big deal. Happens all the time. They're cleaned but it's illegal to reuse them them without complete disassembly, cleaning sterilization or recycling them for raw materials. OF course, people don't give a shit."

Anne continued. "Yeah, but I overheard some cellphone calls to Brennan Synthetics about 'picking up the evidence'."

"That wasn't her. Things...didn't go according to plan. " Emilena rested her head against the window, exhausted. "The Purifiers cloned her, same way we did back in Lanthae. The clone had Lily captive and unconscious, and a plan to finish her off once and for all. I cooperated with her, and now Lily's dead." She took a deep breath. "I can guarantee it, checked the body myself. But I think I screwed up trusting that clone. There's a chance she stole Lily's powers for herself."

She glanced at Tony's rifle, still pointed at her. "The only good news is, she seemed a lot more sane than Lily. And I don't think she expected me to survive. So we've got that going for us if she bothers us again."

After considering Emilena's words, Tony relaxed, and released his grip on the trigger, picking up the rifle and tossing it back into the rear of the car. "All right... though I fail to see how this improves our situation any." He commented, shifting into gear and releasing the brake to get the car rolling. "I mean if that's a clone running around... haven't we just substituted one for the other? The fact she'd leave you for dead doesn't bode well for us... it's a rather callous act after all." He pointed out, shifting into second.

"Still... I'm glad you made it out of there alive... and that you yourself aren't an imposter... I wasn't sure at first when I saw her leave... I don't think she has abilities like but I wasn't sure." He explained. "If we see her again, we'll deal with her then... if not... whatever I guess." He sighed, shaking his head.

"Heh... gave me quite the fright though." he smirked. "When I saw her come out first I figured you were dead... was going to head inside to retrieve your body but... fortunately that wasn't needed. Anyway...

you made it, and that's really what I care about most." he concluded, moving up the on ramp to the highway now to take them back to his place. He figured they could stop at a supermarket or something... pick some things up to make it look like they'd gone on this supply run. "Do you feel like you at least accomplished your objective?" he asked, looking briefly over to her.

"She acted like she wanted to join our team. Said she'd heal us, like Lily used to." Emilena shook her head, disgusted. "I let my guard down. I shouldn't have trusted her," she admitted, rubbing her forehead and leaning back in the chair. "But in the long run, I think we're still better off with Lily dead. At least her clone isn't actively haunting my dreams and threatening to murder Axel in his sleep."

She sighed, looked over, and gave Tony a rare smile. "You were a huge help today, both at the hospital and here with Lily. I owe you one. It's weird to think we hated each other's guts back in Lanthae. I certainly never thought I'd one day consider you a trusted teammate, much less a friend."

"He went on a..." Flora trailed off, distracted by Awe's chiseled abs. She shook her head to regain her focus. "Um, supply run. Said he'll be back soon."

She sat down and watched her old music videos on her phone. "Oh, god, not this one," she felt horribly embarrassed. "Our original plan had been to use a green screen to swap my body out with that of different animals. But the guy we hired was awful, and it looked terrible. We couldn't afford to reshoot or scrap the project, so the record company made us ship it with me just wearing a green bodysuit for no reason. I'm so glad the internet almost immediately forgot about it."

She scrolled down to her unfinished current project. "Actually, we might be able to finish this with Tony's house as a set. It's one of those music videos that tell a story constantly spliced with footage from a concert. Bailey's already got the concert footage, so we just need to film the frame narrative." She glanced over at Awe again. "You know, buddy, you look like you just walked off the cover of a romance novel. Want to act in a music video?"

If Awe did notice Flora staring at his abs he didn't say anything of it. Though he chuckled at flora's question. "I never really thought myself the music video type." He took a drink of water. "Plus there's also the fact this bailey might not like an ex corporate assassin in one of his videos."

As Tony drove along at higher speeds, he moved over to close the windshield so Emilena wouldn't have the wind blowing right in her face. There was enough of that with the top down, after all. He nodded. "Yeah... probably best she is dead... maybe not so good her clone is running around but... I guess I can't entirely blame you for trusting her... I know you and she had history, after all. It's hard not to when you feel like at some point... there may be a chance to regain what was lost." he admitted. "I know that feeling all too well."

As she thanked him, he looked over to her. "Sure... yeah... of course." he replied, surprised. "And I'm not sure I necessarily hated you... I don't hate many." he pointed out. "But dislike? Sure... still... I knew this was important to you... I had nothing better to do... and it seemed like the right thing to shoot for." he smiled back. He hesitated at the friend bit. "Well... that's good to know as well. It used to be I trusted Axel the most but now... given his... vacillation, to put it mildly... I think you've risen to the rank of most trust on the team with me. And someone I'd see as a friend." he informed her, smiling once more.

"I'm sorry you didn't get what you wanted out of this... I don't blame you, as said, for hoping otherwise." he shook his head. "Sorry about the rifle thing back there as well... my mind was going a million miles a minute... when I saw her emerge... thought it meant you were dead... I honestly wasn't expecting to see you come out so... I didn't process the situation correctly." he confessed, moving by a slower car as he stuck once again to the middle lane for now.

"Don't even apologize about the rifle," Emilena assured. "I'd have done the same. I'm glad you kept your head about you." She watched the white lines in the center of the street zip underneath their car. "The others probably won't ask, but if they do, you think we should be honest with them? I was hoping to just kill Lily and put this behind us without bothering anyone, but the clone's existence ruined any chance of that."

They rounded a corner, and she listened to Tony turning the car's wheels and leaning on the brakes. She realized that, for the first time, she genuinely cared about whether one of her teammates survived. Beyond tactical or personal benefit, she wanted Tony to survive this and enjoy a quiet civilian life, more than she wanted that for herself, or Axel and the others.

Axel. She remembered something the clone had said, and suddenly her demeanor shifted. "Actually, you know what? I'm probably going to talk to Axel either way. The clone said he helped her kidnap Lily, I want to find out what he knows."

Tony cracked another smile at her words. "I'm glad you won't hold it against me. I... honestly thought you'd be dead when I saw her emerge so... my brain was scrambled when I saw you but... I'm glad we worked it out." He nodded, moving into the residential area near his home now. "As for what to tell them... heh... we could do some shopping if we want to keep up the pretense of supply run." he smirked. "I could give you my phone so you could order some stuff from the massive mart that is close to my home. I have an account there, and they get it ready for you so that by the time you get there, you just load it into your car and go!" he told her.

But as she brought up her final point, he paused. "Mmm... damn... Axel... helped the clone kidnap Lily? The actual hell? Then yeah... we have to ask him... forget shopping... we'll just come clean with the group." He nodded, turning down the road that led up to the manor. Determination was on his features, though the ferret was currently unaware of Emilena's thoughts on him, and hoping he'd make it. Downshifting through neutral into second as they made their slow way up to his home, Tony meandered the big "land yacht" closer to the house on the hill.

Heading down the ramp into the garage, Tony drove down the row of cars to the Crane-Simplex's vacant spot, before he came to a full stop, shifted into reverse, and slowly backed the big car in, looking behind him to make sure he didn't hit anything as he did so, leaning out over the door to get a clear view. Once satisfied with the back up job, Tony put the car in neutral, set the parking brake, and killed the motor by flipping the electric switch. "OK... home again!" He declared, opening the door, retrieving the laser rifle, stepping onto the running board, and then hopping to the ground. "I have to say... really enjoyed taking the Crane-Simplex out... first time I ever drove it for any real length of time and... it really exceeded expectations." He smiled widely, admiring his car for a moment, then looked over to her.

"Well... feel free to confront Axel... I'll be backing you up. You know the way." He smiled again, giving her a nod and putting his paw out towards the elevator.

"Well, in that case, thanks for letting me ride along on its maiden voyage." Emilena, smiled, climbed out and walked inside.

"You're no fun," Flora muttered when Awe politely declined. "Hey! Did you get my instrument?" she called out when she heard them return.

"We forgot, sorry." Emilena poked her head in. "Anyone know where Axel is?"

Flora rubbed her jaw in thought. "Actually, now that you mention it, I havent seen him since we all got out of the car."

When nobody could offer up Axel's location, Emilena sighed. "You know what? Maybe that's a blessing in disguise. I really dont want to have this conversation with him anyway." She collapsed on the couch, exhausted. "For the first time in months, I'm just going to relax and forget about all this crap until the tech people have decrypted the files."

"Oh yeah..." Flora looked at Marita. "Do you need to go help with the files we stole? We can put off the music video if we need to."

"The music what now?" Emilena muttered sleepily from the couch.

"Was my pleasure." he answered her. As they reached his living room, Tony waved to everyone. "Hey guys... what's up?" He stuck his paws in his pockets, then sauntered over to one part of his big, L-shaped couch and plopped down on it, listening as Emilena asked for Axel, but he hadn't been seen since exiting the Duesenberg. Odd... where the hell was he?

But still... the fox quickly shifted into relax mode, and the ferret had to admit, that sounded awfully good. Reaching for a glass, he got up and poured himself a Scotch, then sat back down and closed his eyes, taking a sip. "Heh... not a bad idea." he responded to her. "I may go for a swim in a bit..." he cracked an eye open, and checked his watch. Not even noon yet... perfect. He had a pool out back on his balcony, which was propped up on stilts embedded in the hillside. Taking another sip, he appreciated the feeling of not having to do anything, and the relaxing drive back he'd had, which had helped him otherwise calm down from an intense situation.

As Marita addressed him, he cracked an eye again and frowned. "I suppose... just don't mess anything up... no rowdiness, all right? And maybe upstairs... because I need some peace and quiet for the moment." he told her.

"Yeah it's uh, upstairs. It's quite expansive because I like my books... mostly nonfiction though, but there is some literature in there as well... mostly some of the greats." He informed Awe, pointing to a staircase off to the right that led up. "It's uh... make a left at the top, then two doors down on the right." He explained.

Emilena had fallen asleep on the couch.

Flora led Marita and Marie upstairs. "So, what sort of plot were we thinking for this music video?" she asked. "Remember, no dialogue because the music will be playing over it. Some sort of romance storyline is the standard fare for this sort of thing, cause no offense but you two are a bit old for a 'wild girl's night'-style party video. Unless..." Her eyes lit up. "Oooh, want to do a kidnapping plot? I could meet one of you on Tinder, arrive at your luxurious 'house' for a date and you drug me, tie me up and we do some crowd-pleasing sexy bondage shots. Then we end with a plot twist, like I pay you money and show that it was completely consensual and preplanned."

Or we could pay yiou upfront then whisper in your ear, then go some close face close ups, before we get into the ' over 18 subplot" and we can wear stuff to make us look younger too" Marita said. i'm sure there's stuff in our makeup kit that can make us look like teens ' Marie said. eyeliner, hair styling, things like that."

"But then there's no twist. Look, who's got years of experience making these, you or me?" Flora rolled her eyes, then realized she was being rude. "Sorry, sorry, you're the boss," she amended hastily. "We'll do it your way. And yeah, if you got makeup, I'll see what I can do."

After a few hours in the bathroom working on both ladies, Flora nodded approvingly. "That turned out better than I expected," she confessed, stashing the eyeliner. "I think with some creative angles you could pass for teenagers. Now what are we filming first?"

Awe went to the library and got himself the book The Complete Works of William Shakespeare before returning to the living room and fixing himself a drink. He sat at the bar and started reading King Lear.

As Tony heard Awe reenter the room, he opened his eyes, and noticed he was carrying his two volume "The Complete Works of William Shakespeare" in its leather bound edition. "Oh... didn't know you were a Shakespeare reader... would've pegged you for something else." the ferret smirked. still sitting back on the couch, his arms up and resting on the couch's top portion.

"Interesting." Tony commented, nodding. "You're a learned man, Awe. I didn't expect you liking Shakespeare... but kudos to your adoptive father for bringing you up with it... "Well he does, but he also loses his life." Tony pointed out. "Not many survive that play but... then again... I suppose in his position... I'd do whatever it'd take to get back at my uncle too." He nodded thoughtfully. "Hamlet's probably my favorite as well. Did like the Taming of the Shrew, and Coriolanus." He commented. Flora shrugged. "Okay." She took Marita's phone and filmed a sample shot. "This thing has great quality," she nodded approvingly. "I bet its got all the megapixels."

"Sounds good to me!" Flora continued filming as they moved from room to room, getting plenty of shots of the extremely photogenic house. When they had enough transitionary footage, Flora handed Marie the phone. "It's all set to record, just tell me when to come in."

Flora stayed out of sight until she got the signal, then walked into the room, looking around shyly as if for a date.

Emilena woke up with a jolt once she realized she’d fallen asleep. Looking around, her brain oriented and she remembered she was in a completely safe location, surrounded by people who weren’t going to shank her. I don’t normally fall asleep like that...need to get ahold of myself.

She noticed Tony was talking with Awe and wondered if he was learning any useful info about Awe's possible allegiances. “Tony, you mentioned something about a swim, is there a pool?” she yawned, stretching on the couch. “Nothing like cold water and a few laps to wake yourself up…”

"He was... one of the most prolific of all time for English speaking authors." Tony commented, smiling as Emilena jolted awake, the ferret smirking over to her. "Heh... welcome back." He greeted her. "And yes... so... basically... you go through this room." he pointed to his left. "Which is like... part of the library, and then make a right into the kitchen, and straight ahead if you keep going is the sliding glass doors to the back balcony... pool is out there. Just don't fall over the edge. I have a railing but the balcony itself is extended out over the cliff on stilts." he informed the vulpine. "I may join you now that I think about it." he commented, stroking his chin.

“Sounds great. You’re welcome to join as well, Awe,” Emilena offered, dragging herself to her feet and away from the warm spot on the couch. She left the room was halfway to the balcony when she spotted something more important than the pool; Axel was standing in the conservatory, smoking and looking at the exotic plants.

Emilena doubled back to the garage, fished Marita’s laptop out of the backseat of the Model J, and joined him. “Axel, you’re good with computers, right? Marita’s focused on some stupid thing involving a music video, so I think it falls to you to sift through this safehouse data. She mentioned it contained the location of Brennan’s HQ, where we were hoping to head next.”

Axel scoffed. “Yeah? Whatever, sure. It’s not like I had anything better to do anyway.”

Emilena didn’t hand the laptop over right away. “Hey. We’ve been through a lot, and I hope you know that if you ever need to talk, I’m here.”

Axel took a long drag of his cigarette and blew it in her face. “Don’t you worry, only thing bothering me is that Tony’s got the zinnias right between two racks of succulents.”

“Well, that might be more true than you think,” Emilena replied, wrinkling her nose. “I just visited Lily today. Now she’s dead.”

Axel inhaled his next puff too quickly and coughed for several seconds. “What, really?” he gasped.

“Yup. Less than twenty minutes ago. Tony drove me to our old safehouse for a meeting, and she was all chained up and drugged out. By a woman who looked just like her.” Emilena studied him, looking for a reaction. “She used me for some voodoo magic, stripped Lily’s powers and stopped her heart. Lily never even felt it.”

Axel flicked his cigarette stub into a bird-of-paradise. “Well, thank god. Didn’t think anyone could do it, but if she’s really dead, I owe you one.”

“Axel, have you met this doppelganger of Lily?” Emilena pressed.

Axel rolled his eyes. “She told you something, didn’t she? Look, when I followed Flora into that alleyway, nobody told me what was going on. I just did what I had to do to leave in one piece. To be done with Lily and all the bullshit around her." He threw his hands in the air. "Which is how I’d like things to be, even right now. Just consider me removed from that whole little sordid affair. Case closed.”

Emilena sighed. “OK, Axel. If you don’t want to get involved, I won’t tell you anything else.” She allowed him to take the laptop from her hands and stride out of the room.

Awe finished his drink and closed the book. "Think I'll take you up on the offer. Just let me take to book back to the library." Awe took the book back to the library and walked in the direction of the pool.

Tony pushed himself up off the couch, and headed for a changing room to slip out of his clothes and into his swimming trunks. Having accomplished this whilst Emilena was talking to Axel, he emerged out onto the back balcony, gazing out over the city, the sun framing everything as his house faced west out the back. Padding over to the pool's edge, he smiled, gazing down at the fluid surface, before placing his paws above his head and launching himself off to dive in. As the water encased his body, surrounding all aspects of him, he paddled briefly under the surface, then swam for the top, breaking the water and inhaling as he looked about him, filling his lungs with a hearty and audible gulp.

Running his paw over the top of his head fur to smooth it back, the ferret smiled, then kicked his body sideways to start enacting the sidestroke.

Anne had found her way out to the pool. She lay on one of the chairs and inhaled the cool dusk air as she took a pull from her bottle of beer. She rather enjoyed the dark, malty flavor of the beer. Framed by the sun were the featureless towers of Seryet City. A faint oceanic scent hinted at the algae farms in the outskirts of the city.

Soren was busy poring over his notes in the study which looked and smelled like a library from a monastery. A glass of seltzer spiked with some lemon juice served as his refreshment. He rubbed his forehead. The music video that Marita and the others were doing did not interest him at all. That and he really didn't want to appear in a music video that would certainly be seen by thousands if not millions.

He got up to walk around to try and clear his head. He decided to head to the outside for some fresh air...which was easier said than done, given the sprawling layout of the house. But the Human managed, finding his way to the conservatory and taking a seat next to the open window that let in a fresh breeze.

Emilena finally reached the balcony. "Turning into quite the party out here," she remarked, stripping down to her knickers and diving into the pool.

After holding her breath as long as she could, she came up on the other end gasping for air. "You know, Tony," she panted, "I expected this to be more hot tub-sized when you said it was on the balcony, but you actually managed to fit a whole pool out here. This property continues to amaze."

She started swimming underwater laps, only taking breaths when she tagged the other side of the pool. Thirty minutes of this and she'd have met her daily exercise regimen for the first time since this ordeal started.

As Emilena and Awe joined him, the ferret blinked, not quite expecting Emilena to have nothing to wear save for her undergarments, and as she dove in, he found himself slightly admiring her form a bit more than he wanted to before she dove in. But as she broke the surface, he smirked. "Heh... yeah well... that comes from having a shitload of money and not knowing what to fully do with it. I think some actors have similar setups or... something." he rolled his eyes. "But thank you." he smiled, nodding to them both. "I'm glad you approve." He then pushed off from the wall and began doing some laps as well, doing the front crawl as he began heading back and forth, kicking off one end and moving to the other fluidly, being well versed in the different forms of swimming.

Awe lay floating on his back on the surface of the pool. "I'm also a student of history as well as a fan of Shakespeare." Awe's athletic physic was a bit of a pride symbol for him. But his missions for Werner Industries had left him his fair share of scars mainly internally.
"I mainly study the second world war."

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on November 23, 2018, 02:07:33 AM

Axel reached the study and, noticing Soren's notes were already occupying the desk, selected a plushy armchair and opened his laptop. Sorting by recent, he found the info dump and began decompressing it.

He sighed as he scrolled through seemingly infinite files, all with unintelligible numbers and letters for file names. There was a lot to sift through...

———————-

After thoroughly waking herself up, Emilena dragged herself out of the pool and joined Anne on the reclining deck chairs. She noted that Awe had almost as many scars as herself. "Awe, if you don't mind me asking, did you ever serve in the military or law enforcement?" she asked. "That's an impressive scar collection for a corporate hitman."

Post by: Pterano on November 24, 2018, 12:18:51 AM

Nodding, Tony smiled slightly. "Heh... same here... my library is mostly non-fiction as it's a lot of books on history. Used to be big into the Second World War myself... still kind of am, but then I took a greater interest in the conflicts around the late 19th and early 20th centuries... technology was really exploding at the time, so yeah... Sino-Japanese, Spanish-American, and Russo-Japanese are some of my favorites... but I really do like history in general." He pulled himself up out of the pool now, his fur matted and water dripping off him as he moved to a deck chair.

Settling back in it, he placed his paws behind his head, and gazed up at the sky. As Emilena asked a question of Awe, Tony's ears pricked up a bit and listened, as he was curious about the answer.

Awe showed off the scar of a rather nasty gash on his right thigh after swimming to the edge getting out of the pool. "I got this from the mission that gave me the name Awe. A piece of pipe from the refinery came flying at me after it exploded." He showed a cut across his left arm. "This was from a training accident with my trainer. Though I will say I haven't served in the military or police... at least officially..."

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on November 24, 2018, 03:22:53 AM

As Awe recounted his battle scars, a mischievous smile played across Emilena's face. "Hey, Awe, you up for a friendly spar?" she asked. "I bet I can take you. First to knock the other in the pool wins!"

She leaped out of the chair in case he was open to the idea.

Axel lit another cigarette and sighed as he clicked through yet another file. Most of these contained records of encrypted messages, messages he couldn't read but he could tell where they were being sent.

If he could just reverse-engineer the actual location from the numerical coordinates the computer used to connect to the other computer...

And then suddenly divine providence offered him an opportunity. For a single message, the safe house sent somebody else a picture. Pictures were loaded with alt data, and far easier to track than text. He’d be able to extract the reciever’s MAC address at absolute minimum.

Axel didn’t expect to care about the photo itself, but nevertheless his jaw dropped open when he reverse-encrypted it. Oof. The others are gonna want to see this...

Emilena assumed a defensive stance and the tested the wooden balcony floor with her paw pads; it was sturdy and provided more than enough traction. “Simple and straightforward. No weapons, no using augments, no permanent damage. If you can get me in that pool, I’ll owe you a beer.”

“Gonna make me make the first move, huh?” Emilena murmured. She dropped to one knee and attempted to sweep Awe’s leg out from under him, angling so a fall would send him into the pool.

Axel stood up, having found the data they were looking for. Finishing his glass of scotch, he began the slow walk up to find the others and report on the location of the Purifier base.

Emilena narrowed her eyes and darted sideways, realizing the dangerous position he'd put her in. "You'd better not just dodge the whole time," she growled, keeping her center of balance low and going for an open-hand strike into his shoulder. "This is a spar, not a ballet!"

Post by: f-22 "raptor" ace on November 27, 2018, 02:10:08 AM

Emilena grunted when she wasn't able to dodge the strike in time, but recovered quickly enough to scramble back to her starting position. Since Awe appeared to use a very defensive combat style, she hung back, both to recover from the hit she took and force him to go on the offensive.

Post by: f-22 "raptor" ace on November 28, 2018, 12:31:09 AM

Awe delivered another strike keeping a close eye on Emilena for any tricks. He also made sure not to reveal any clues as to what his next move would be.

Emilena deflected it with her forearm, simultaneously dodging to lessen the impact. It still sent shockwaves rippling up her arm; Awe had strength and size on his side, and Emilena realized she’d need to change her strategy. Maneuvering herself so she was between Awe and the pool, she kept her stance wide hoping to bait him into rushing her so she could dodge around him and use his own momentum to force him nearer or into the pool.

Awe grinned seizing the chance and used her own momentum against her to send her flying into the pool. But awe admired Emilena since she had fought well.

Emilena hadn’t expected him to act so quickly, and before she could even figure out what happened he had counter-striked her kick and sent her flying head over heels into the pool.

She came up spluttering and quickly grabbed the edge of the pool to orient herself. “You’re...faster than you look,” she finally admitted once her head had stopped spinning. “I concede defeat.”

Axel, meanwhile, saw Soren in the conservatory and decided to tell him first. “Hey, I found out where we’re headed next.” He handed Soren a paper printout of the Google Maps result from inputting the coordinates of the IP Address.

(OOC: Serris, if you or bushwhacked had ideas/plans for the locale/setting of the HQ, wanted to leave that in your hands. Bushwhacked didn’t say anything particular about the location Brennan Hq was)

Bianca was walking out of the the safehouse, after waiting a full four hours foir the entire place to be clean ' she had sent at least 50 pictures to Kintoki, which would net her a 25000 creed bonus. ' the roomba beeped as a car pulled up alongside the street and a lioness climbed outof the drovers seat. she was very fetching, with bright green eyes dark red lips, and golden hoop earring in her ears. she wore the uniform of a tennis player, several racquets resting in the passenger seat indicated she had just come from playing a match. ' Can i help you?Bianca asked. " Actually i was going to ask you that. i noticed you walkingh down the street earlier, and was going to ask of you needed a ride. Outside of this part of town, things get really dicey really quick.'

Yeah, hence why I have this roomba following me around' Bianca said " And you are?" oh, forgive me. I'm Zula. I work part time at Mr Jiangs augment repair ship on downtown Seryet, when I'm not instructing kids on playing tennis. its a 75-25 breakdown or there abouts. Tennis 75% Jiangs 25%. You look sorta familiar. ' I'm Bianca' Bianca said quickly. ' Could you take me to 35th and Green? I need a change of attire, and well I dont look all that hot in this getup. Zula is it? for some reason your name rings a bell. did you work as a receptionist somewhere? " Yeah I did at Jiangs old place. the pay was lousy, and that's when patients actually paid their bills.' Zula sighed. 'Just hop in back, your roomba can come too. ' the roomba climbed in before Bianca and settled on one of the seats ' Do forgive the clutter, ' I'm just handed back from my latest tennis instruction. We have a tournament against Bright Falls next week, and some of the kids have very weak serves that will get them killed in a match. " Zula said. Bianca buckled herself in. the car smelled like tennis balls but otherwise was very nice. " I hate to impose, but do you have anything to drink? I'm rather thirsty and haven't had the chance to get anything to eat this morning. I've been.. running errands. ' " Oh, of course! There's Diet Coke in this cooler. there's mini-cans regular cans or liter bottles, help yourself.' Zula said with a smile. Bianca flipped open the cooler, which had several cases of Diet Coke in it, along with 6 1 liter bottles. ' Bianca took one of the bottlers and found an empty cup in a container. the soda was ice cold to the touch and tasted great. Zula pulled away from the curb and began driving down the street.

Anne's ears were splayed to the side as she drifted between sleep and wakefulness in the cool sea air. She bolted up right as she got an incoming message from her horn.

Her frustration soon turned to excitement as she realized who was calling her. She turned to Tony. "Hey, Tony, I just got a call from my cyberneticist." She was of course, referring to a black market one. "My parts came in. So you got a discreet car that I can borrow for an hour or so?"

Soren accepted the piece of paper and looked it over. His eyes widened as he realized where the location was. The Human blinked a few times and took a sip of his now flat seltzer. "The fuck!?" he blurted out.

He sat on a stone that made up the wall. The pungent scent of the exotic flowers in the greenhouse was making his nascent headache worsen. "Axel, are you absolutely positive you got the right location? Because according to this printout, the IP address is originating from several miles offshore!" Soren didn't mean to raise his voice but the situation did rile him up a bit.

"It's pretty clear, feel free to double-check but there aren't many ways to slice this sort of signal." Axel shrugged. "The guys in that safehouse kept chatting with somebody on, like, I guess a houseboat or something, I dunno." He looked at the paper again. "Or I guess a boat would be moving around, so like, an ocean lab?" He glanced at the balcony, where some sort of scuffle had been audibly going on for the past minute. "We should probably let the others know."

Emilena accepted Awe's help to climb back out of the pool. "You gotta teach me how you countered that kick," she remarked, shaking her head to help regain her balance. "I had all my momentum behind it, and you just flipped me on a dime."

She heard Anne's question and glanced over. "You're sure your contact's not compromised, right? We've made a lot of enemies, any of them could be using him to lead you into a trap."

Tony had been resting, having retrieved some sunglasses, and placed them over his eyes. He'd watched the fight a bit, but had kept his eyes closed during some of it, mostly drifting in and out of his thoughts. As he heard Anne address him, he looked over to her, swiveling his head to do so. "Oh uh... discreet? Not really sure about that.. most of the cars I own are all vintage... I have my electric... which I guess looks just like everyone else's... it's a nicer model, but still pretty run of the mill." he explained. "You can take it if you need to. It drives itself, so you really just have to sit back and let it take you to whatever destination you program it with... that is... if you think it's a good idea." he added, noting Emilena's words.

"Works for me," Emilena grinned at Awe's offer, before Axel walked somberly onto the balcony.

"Hey, people." Axel passed out printouts of the same data he'd given Soren. "So, good and bad news. Good news is, I figured out where Brennan's HQ is. Bad news..."

Emilena squinted in surprise at the data. "Wait, you mean that circled coordinate set in the middle of the ocean?"

"I mean, 'middle of the ocean' is overstating it, but yeah," Axel yawned. "It's about three miles off Seryet's coastline. There's no publically-registered buildings out there, and I didn't see anything too exciting from the bluffs on Google street views, which makes me think they're in some sort of submerged lab."

"We have to break into an underwater lab?" Emilena repeated. "How exactly are we supposed to do that?"

"That's up to y'all, my job was just to find it," Axel shrugged, leaving and heading for the bar. Now that his work was done, he wanted a drink.

Anne nodded. "I'll take my chances. The guy's someone who owes me some favors." She didn't specify what the favors were but from the way she spoke, it was pretty obvious said favors were probably spectacularly illegal.

She then turned to Tony. "Anyways, thanks for the electric, just show me the way to your garage and I'll be on my way."

Soren watched Axel leave the poolside area to go get a drink. He examined the map more closely. "Well," he said. "Looks like we'll have to get a boat or something. A fishing trip should work as a cover story." He brought up his cellphone and checked out the location. A frown crossed the Human's face. "Or not. Looks like that particular area is listed as a protected offshore zone." Protected offshore zones were locations that were off-limits to public boat traffic. They usually marked mining, power generation or other industrial zones and were usually protected by autonomous drones as well as crewed patrol boats.

He checked the surrounding areas for anything that could help them get to said lab.

"If we abandon all notion of a cover story, we could still try to get there by boat," Emilena suggested. "Paint it black, go by night, feign ignorance if we get discovered. Maybe even confess to a much-lighter crime like fishing in a protected space, I think the penalty for that is just a large fine."

She grabbed a towel and dried herself off. "That still won't help us actually get in. Even if Tony happens to own a half-dozen sets of scuba gear, what would our plan be for even gaining entrance? We cant exactly shatter a window. Awe, you got any gadgets that could get us into an underwater lab?"

Tony had been semi-listening in, chewing on his bottom lip. Yeah... his father had owned a ship... but it wasn't something that would be capable of being moved easily... plus it'd be ridiculously conspicuous. Oh well...

Hopping off his chair, he shoved his paws in his pockets, still dripping moisture a little. "Sure... this way." he waved his paw for the pony to follow, and headed back into the house, weaving his way through the rooms until they got to the old brass elevator. Hitting the button for a descent, he began whistling a little as he rode down into the garage, the lights kicking on automatically as they arrived. "First one on the right." He pointed to the sleek looking electric car.

Walking over to a panel, he pushed his paw against it, causing it to slide back, revealing the key fob. "Here you go. Just don't wreck it. Door will open automatically for you when you reach the end of the garage, and upon your return." he explained.

He went over to a locker, pulling the door open with some spare clothing so he could change, having mostly dried up in the sun. Keeping the door so it blocked his body from view, the ferret went about slipping out of his bathing suit and into something more akin to an Edwardian motorman's outfit. Shutting the locker door, he sighed, and went over to his vehicles, walking down the row until he came to a beautiful brass era red painted 1910 Elmore. Pulling himself up into the driver's seat, he rested his arms against the big wooden steering wheel. Exhaling, he looked ahead.

Should he go on this mission? Risk his life again? Risk drowning or worse out at sea? Pursing his lips, he tapped his claws rhythmically on the old car's wheel, turning the options over in his mind.

"Uhhh, doing...good, I guess?" Flora shrugged helplessly. "I'm sorry, I just don't understand," she admitted, breaking character. "There's no talking during a music video, the song is put on top. And if Marie's drinking at the bar, and you and me are here, who's filming?"

"A submarine ride? Well, that'd certainly be one to check off the bucket list," Emilena nodded approvingly. She glanced around and noticed that only herself, Soren, and Awe remained on the balcony. "Maybe we should rekindle this conversation once everyone's in the same place," she remarked, putting her clothes back on now that she was sufficiently dry. "Give everyone a bit of time to marinate and then regroup. Actually, speaking of marinating, dinner's always an easy way to get everyone in the same room. Either of you two interested in helping me cook up a big bowl of pasta and garlic bread?" It was one of the few things she knew how to cook since she once went undercover at an Italian restaurant during her police career.

Yeah, his name was Skyler Blake," Flora shifted her feet. "He was okay. He and Bailey knew each other from back while they were nobodies, so Bailey did most of the talking and I never really interacted with him except when he told me what to do. I don't think he'd be available to come film this though."

Flora took a deep breath. "I think we can get this done. Let's film it your way. Take two." Flora left the room and returned, looking chipper. "Hi!" she smiled. "Always nice to see a friendly face! What's your name, stranger?"

Emilena poked her head into the garage. "Tony, there you are. Awe and I were thinking of cooking dinner for everyone, mind if we use your kitchen?" She noticed the withdrawn expression on his face. "Is everything okay?"

Tony jerked his head upward at Emilena's voice, his arms still resting on the wheel as he looked out over his sea of cars, the Elmore fortunately riding much higher than most of them. Inhaling, he slumped a little, using the wheel for support. "Yeah that's fine." he responded softly, not exiting the car just yet. "Hm?" he blinked, realizing she'd asked him if anything was wrong. "I just..." He began to reply haltingly, pondering how best to word this. "I don't know about my merit to this upcoming mission." He slid out from behind the wheel at long last, stepping onto the running board and then down onto the floor as he began making his way forward slowly, eyes wandering over the line of cars to either side of him. They all gleamed in their different ways, having unique facets and points to them.

Trailing his claws over a teal 1948 Delahaye Type 135, Tony smiled slightly. "Putting your life on the line over and over again can wear you down... and I have reservations about... other things as well." he shifted his gaze up to her here, coming to a halt a few cars away from the elevator. "Either way, I guess I just... came down here to think." he concluded, offering her a little shrug as he spread his arms out to either side of him before letting them fall back down.

"Well, let me know if you'd rather be alone, but I'm here to listen if you want it." Emilena rested her hand on the other car door but didn't enter until she received more of a signal that he didn't just want to be alone. "Just know that you're not obligated to do anything, the whole team is already in your debt. Hell, we were in your debt before you let us stay the night in your huge awesome mansion." She smiled. "That goes double for me, since you listened to my problems and even helped solve them. If there's a way I can help you in return, I'll do it."

The ferret returned her smile, giving a smaller one in return, and nodding a little. "Heh, I couldn't consider any of you in my debt." He responded softly, tapping his claws lightly up and down on the fender of a blue and cream 1925 Locomobile. "Well I'm glad I was able to do that for you." He nodded again. "I really am." He narrowed his eyes, looking off into the distance, as if thinking. "Heh... I wouldn't even know what to ask for." He confessed, looked back to her at this juncture. "But if I can ask you something... why the sudden change?" he asked. "I mean I know I've been kind of out of the loop for awhile, and I hope this doesn't offend you but... I don't remember you being this kind and well... concerned over others' well being, my own most of all. I do distinctly remember you being... well different, let's just say." he informed her, curious as to her answer.

Emilena grinned. "You know I was a police investigator, right? I can play any role I want." She broke eye contact. "It's just that for the longest time, I didnt see any of you as important enough to put on an act for. Originally I planned to arrest Mr. Almaya, immediately get my badge back, and never see any of you again."

She sighed. "I must admit, and I know this will sound odd, but another reason is that eveybody's turned into even more of an asshole than me. I'm not used to relying on other people, but the truth is that we're going to need this team intact if we hope to get through this alive. In the past, Axel and Lily were the sane and compassionate ones that kept us all held together, but now that they've taken my job as the self-centered asshole, I'm adapting for the survival of the group."

She climbed into the car and sat down. "You've changed a lot too, you know. Consider that when you first met us, you were a Purifier grunt who betrayed them on a dime just to save your skin. And before that, you abandoned your family to join them. Now, dozens of firefights later, you're the only person on our team who isn't prioritizing their own self-interest. You've turned your family business into something legitimate, and you're spending time, money and your own safety making things right for a small group of former enemies with nobody else left."

She grinned again. "I can't name one other person who could do all of that, who could change themselves so drastically for the better. So I don't want to hear anything more about whether you have merit. You've earned your merit in ways few ever will."

"Heh... of course." he smiled in response to her first statement, even smirking a bit. "That... was my assessment as well." As he listened, he closed his eyes, flashing back to those days... Lily and Axel... the compassionate ones... Lily was a homicidal maniac with too much power... now fortunately deceased; who knew what her clone wanted though... and Axel... poor guy went from being a good friend to a washed up drunk who seemed very self-absorbed. His eyes snapped open as he heard Emilena opening the Locomobile's door. Smiling, he did the same on the driver's side, tugging it back so he could step up onto the running board and settle down on the comfortable, plush, dark blue leather seat.

"Heh... you have good taste." He commented. "This is such a beautiful car. Was very expensive in its time..." He swung the door shut now, and looked down to the blue rug his paws rested on, and the nickel plated dashboard. "I think my favorite thing about this car are the dark blue artillery spokes on the wheels... really gives it a dignified appearance." he sighed, tracing his claws over the nickel plating with almost a sort of reverence.

As she spoke next about how he had changed, he pursed his lips, staring at the various instruments on the dash, and tracing a claw over the Delco starter lever, running the claw back and forth. "Heh... I guess I just... I don't know... inheriting everything and losing my father... was a humbling experience... made me realize I can't take anything for granted... nor should I." he sighed again. "And how about you?" he asked, glancing over to her as they sat side by side in the upscale Locomobile. "You feel you've changed? You mentioned putting on an act earlier... so which is this? Actress Emilena... or more vulnerable Emilena?" he inquired slowly, still running his claw on the starter lever.

"Adult Emilena, to be honest," she admitted, leaning back in the comfy seat. "Pretending to be nice was just...how I thought grownups acted. Or at least, it's how the wardens in the orphanage did." She glanced over at him. "Most people get a childhood to experiment with who they want to be, to figure themselves out. I opted not to have one. For as long as I could remember I'd already been pretending to be an adult, so I decided to enroll in the Growth Acceleration program and make that a reality." She shrugged. "And I still think I made the right call. But a nine-year old is missing a lot of the nuances and experience one needs to function in the real world, unless they choose to see everything in black and white." She sighed. "The police gave me such a simple way to view right vs wrong...I still miss things being so simple."

She glanced at him. "What about you? You've never really mentioned your childhood. Did Don Stracci let you be yourself, or did you grow up living a persona as well?

Post by: Pterano on December 22, 2018, 07:40:42 PM

He nodded a little at her admission, pulling his claw back to rest it on his lap as he watched her speak. So there was an orphanage and... his head rocked back a little at the Growth Acceleration program she'd been a part of. "Holy shit..." he whispered. "I don't think I knew that about you!" He exclaimed. "Jumping from nine years old to an adult..." He nodded. "Yeah I mean... there'd definitely be some formative things missing there. But yes... I guess the police force would at least give you a... somewhat simplistic view on the world." He admitted. "I just... I never knew... I never knew that." he emphasized. As she paused, and then said she missed things being simple, he pursed his lips again. Yeah... those were true words. He pined for the days where he didn't have anyone threatening things he cared about... where he could just take a car out for a drive... not worry about having to shoot people or using his fists... what happened to those days? And... perhaps reclaiming them was partly why he was hesitating now.

But she had asked him a question, and the ferret swallowed. "Um..." he started out softly. "I... didn't like my father's strict demeanor... and when I found out what he really did... I disliked it even more. I rebelled... did my own thing... but jeez... childhood... it was..." he shook his head, looking out through the windshield. "It was nice... rides in these cars... family outings... my father was generous... strict but generous. But no... he expected me to follow in his pawsteps... and threatened to cut me off from everything if I didn't... so... as said... rebelled. Joined the Purifiers... and now... I guess I settled on a bit of a compromise. Reconciled with my father but... turned his empire into my own vision... not his." He commented, looking over to her now, and resting a paw on the steering wheel, giving her a small smile.

“Axel never told you?” she asked, cocking her head. “Yeah, I was the fifth, that’s why my last name’s Echo (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/NATO_phonetic_alphabet). It was a government initiative to reduce the underage homeless population. But the program was cancelled after a single run, when all eleven of us wound up with severe personality issues. Now that I think about it...only 3 of us didn’t get ourselves killed within the first year doing something stupid. So, it’s not the sort of past I go around telling everyone about.”

She sighed. “If I’d known you didn’t know, I might not have brought it up. I don’t want you thinking I’m mentally stunted or anything. Trust me, it was a choice of desperation. Not everyone’s childhood has fancy cars and family outings...”

She relaxed her muscles and let herself sink into the chair. “Just make sure you take care of yourself. You actually have something to live for. A business, a family, a legacy.” She chuckled. “That being said, plenty of people have those, and it doesn’t make them happy. Sticking with us might be your only chance to ride in a submarine. Oh, I forgot to mention, Awe says he knows a guy who can get us a submarine.”

Post by: Pterano on December 23, 2018, 09:08:09 AM

He pondered it, but the last name made sense. "Oh... well I don't think I would've judged you negatively or anything... the fact you've survived more challenging situations than most people have ever been in in their lives means you really aren't mentally stunted." He shook his head. "As you mentioned... it was desperation... I might've done the very same thing in your position." he confessed. "Saw it as the easy way forward and the way to get out." he nodded.

As she sank into the seat, he did the same, leaning back and resting now, finding it much easier to do so in one of these cars than anywhere else in his mansion. Perhaps it was the solitude... or perhaps it was the sheer beauty that surrounded him, but whatever it was, he had always had a much easier time down here than upstairs. "Oh?" he perked up, raising his brow. "An actual submarine? Must have a lot of crew manning it... unless it's one of those remote drone type deals." he commented. He briefly considered letting her know about his own ship, but figured it wasn't worth bringing up. "Heh... I guess that's why I partly came down here... you mentioned taking care of myself... that's part one of my musings... part two is well... the merit thing. I mean sure I might be a great guy or what you said but... I only have very basic firearms skills... almost no combat training... I can back you guys up easily enough but... this mission sounds like a whole new level... it's not just me providing transportation to some neighborhood... we'll be out at sea... and I'm not sure if my ability to back you guys up is going to be very useful. Now you might argue an extra gun is an extra gun but... compared to your skills, I don't want to be a liability out there. You guys have been together awhile... fought together... understand each others' abilities and form cohesion." He pointed out.

"Me?" he pressed a paw to his chest. "I don't want to do more harm than good." he shook his head.

"See you in bit!" Anne called as she got in the electric. The car's door automatically opened as she got close. She even noted the driver's seat had a hole in the back for her tail. Usually, she'd have to tuck her tail to the side but this time, she could let it naturally go back.

She pressed the ignition button (even though it was an electric, it was still an ignition button due to decades of tradition) and the motor came to life with a low hum. She disengaged the brakes and headed out where the garage door automatically opened, letting in the late afternoon sun.

Soren looked over the area and rubbed his temples. There was a seaport nearby. The Human sighed. Looks like they were going to be breaking into yet another industrial facility. Luckily, that was something they were getting quite good at.

“Don’t worry about that,” Emilena shook her head. “None of us are the right people for the job. It’s a miracle we’ve gotten this far. And you’ve been there from the beginning, so don’t sell yourself short. You’re not an outsider like Awe, you’re a veteran part of this team.”

She closed her eyes. “That being said, this is dangerous work, and if you did retire to a supporting role in our plan, I’d be at least relieved knowing one of us will survive. I can even help come up with a cover story if you don’t want the others learning it was voluntary. But don’t leave because you think you’re letting us down, or that you aren’t good enough to help us.”

She sat up. “And don’t decide anything until you’ve had some dinner; everything seems bleaker on an empty stomach. You have any requests? Gotta be something pasta, that's all I know how to make."

The ferret pursed his lips again, and shifted his mouth to one side before moving it back. "Well... I'd describe myself more as an absentee part of the team. Here and there, in and out." he waved his paw in a circular motion. He considered her words, chewing on his bottom lip. "Thank you... if I do decide to step aside... it's good to know you'd come up with an excuse for me... I haven't decided yet though." he admitted. "I think it's not necessarily that I'm not good enough..." he trailed off, not finishing, as if there was more on his mind, but he wasn't voicing it.

"Heh... all right... deal." he nodded to her request to not decide anything until dinner. "Uh... carbonara is my favorite but... I'm not sure you know how to make it, plus it's kind of finicky. I could show you though... if you want." he smiled slightly. "Or if you just want to keep it simple... I really don't mind. I'm Italian after all... pasta is my blood." he chuckled. He made no move to exit the Locomobile, sitting back in its seat for now as he waited for Emilena's response.

“Carbonara...never even heard of it,” Emilena admitted. “But I’m prepared to learn.” She climbed out of the car. “And Awe likely wouldn’t mind another helping hand. It’ll especially be nice having someone who knows where everything is in the kitchen.”

"Yeah I... kind of figured you wouldn't know what it is." He smirked a little, nodding as he looked down, hearing the passenger door open as she began exiting the car. "Sure... go up without me... I'll follow in a moment or two. I just... want some solitude for a moment, if that's OK." he told her, looking over to her as her head was now even with the car's compartment due to how high it rode off the ground.

Just help me carry in this tennis stuff and then you can crash on the couch. I'm heading to work in a couple hours so we can hang out until then.

"Of course, take your time. Awe and I will try to keep the kitchen in one piece until you arrive," Emilena assured, closing the garage door behind her.

She searched the mansion until she found Awe. "Were you able to contact your submarine guy and see if that offer's on the table?" she asked.

"Hi, uh, Anna!" Flora plastered a smile on her face. "Okay, let's dance!"

She tried to follow Marita's lead. It was weird dancing when you couldn't actually hear any music, but it wouldnt be the first time she'd had to do that for a music video.

Awe was finishing the dough for the ginger snaps when Emilena walked in. "No, I thought I'd get the dough for the gingersnaps ready first." Awe placed the ready dough in the fridge to cool. "And now since t's done I'll call my contact." Awe pulled out his phone and dialed a number speaking in German when he got through.

Emilena tried to eavesdrop on Awe's call while she prepped the kitchen for cooking, but she didnt speak German and couldn't glean much from his inflections or tone.

Once a pot of water was boiling and the kitchen was prepared for pasta, she started making the garlic bread and tomato sauce, planning to leave the pasta itself to Tony.

Flora stopped dancing with a tired oof. " That's probably...enough footage, right?" she gasped, wiping her forehead. "So what now? Are we gonna edit it into a video and post it online? I know the password to my official YouTube channel."

"Nigel always insisted postproduction take less than a month," Flora shrugged. "Not that I ever touched any of that. We always hired freelance video editors cause they worked for pennies."

She opened the laptop and searched for video editing software. "Is this thing an Apple? I remember using iMovie once when I was young, it was braindead easy."

Awe's tone had gotten a bit more excited to give a word. Awe hung the phone up and put it in his pocket. "Sure hope you guys know how to use military style sucba gear." Awe commented to Emilena. "Cause I got us a ride. took some convincing but i got it done." Awe sat down on the couch. "It'll be a bit cramped since it's an older submarine though."

Title: Re: Blanking the Slate

Emilena grinned from ear to ear. "Hell yes." She'd eventually put the pasta on herself; it wasn't that fancy dish Tony had mentioned (at least, she assumed there was more to it than assorted pasta shapes with tomato sauce and parmesan) but there were at least enough of these so everyone get their fill. "These should be done in about 15 minutes. I'm gonna start prepping the sauce. Ginger snaps are looking good, by the way."

Flora found the video editing software and opened it. "All right, let's... hey, what's up?" she muttered angrily as the program refused to accept the footage. A quick google search revealed that this software didn't accept .flv2s. "Oh for the love of..." The comment section suggested a free converter, so she converted the footage to .mp7 since it was the only available format that Marita's video editing software accepted. "There we go. Hmmm..." The footage now had a watermark along the bottom. Flora zoomed the footage in so that lower chunk of the video was missing. "It's a bit blurry now, but I mean, who wants to see our legs anyway, right?" she joked.

She watched through the professionally-done half of the music video sent by Bailey's film studio. "Hmm, our new footage doesn't sync up super well," she admitted. "But we might be able to hide that with an establishing shot." By now it was too dark to go outside and record one, plus Tony probably didn't want his exterior in a music video for the world to see, so Flora found a site with Royalty-free stock videos and purchased a time lapse featuring the outside of a mansion. "OK, now let's add some text that says 'The Next Day..." she murmured out loud...

She slowly got lost in the act of video-editing, working with what she had to sync it together with what Bailey provided. Almost twenty minutes passed before she sat up. "Okay, so Bailey's footage of the concert is unchanged," she reported to Marita and Marie. "And after that, this transition implies it's the next day, I meet you girls at this mansion, and then we dance, and...uh, we didn't have enough dancing footage so I looped it a few times, and stuck the song on top of it..."

Together they watched the new video, which hard cut to black the second the song ended. "I think that looks good!" Flora smiled, setting the project to render.

"Hey," Emilena stuck her head in the room and made Flora jump. "Dinner's served in a few minutes. Head to the dining room if you want pasta."

"We'll be there!" Flora grabbed the newly-rendered video and uploaded it to her official YouTube channel, ignoring the thousands of unread notifications. "Hope people like it. I've never edited my own music video before. This was fun!" She beamed at them. "Especially because I got to do it with you two!"

Emilena, meanwhile, had sleuthed out Soren and Axel to give them the same spiel she'd given Flora.

"Yeah, I'm not really hungry," Axel admitted, taking another swig from a bottle.

"Too bad, come anyway," Emilena's eyes flashed in irritation. "Awe and I put a lot of work into this goddamn food, you're going to at least stare at it. Plus we all need to talk battle strategy, Awe's got us a way into the underwater lab but we need to nail down specifics."

Axel grumbled as the vixen left. "You coming to dinner?" he asked Soren, hoisting himself out of his seat with a grunt.

Anne had found her location. It was a somewhat decrepit looking electronics store with assorted computers and other electronic goods that were not months, but years out of date. That and most of the companies were no longer in business. In fact, she even recognized one of the items: a wearable radio eavesdropper similar to her horn but it relied on a wire coil hidden inside a shirt and a small bone conduction speaker disguised as a bandage.

There was a Tegu sitting on a blanket a few feet away. The reptile's clothing looked to be rather scraggly and they were selling what looked like some bootleg pills. She ignored the reptile and stepped into the shop, which was dimly lit and kind of scraggly looking. A sad looking plant sat in the corner of the shop.

"You see anything you like?" a Chinese man asked, his heavy accent betraying his recent arrival.

Anne nodded. "I'm actually looking for the latest Screaming Wire album." Screaming Wire was a Hong Kong based industrial rock band that was quite popular with the rougher parts of society. Of course, being a store that sold only electronics, it did not sell albums of any sort.

"In back. Follow." Anne followed the man through a door with a tattered and outdated calendar that was clearly a free gift from some company that went under quite a while back.

Soren's stomach growled and he looked at his empty glass. "Yeah, I haven't eaten a good meal in a while," he said as he got up and followed Axel.

Emilena cursed as she scalded herself on a large heat tray while moving the massive pot of pasta into the dining room. "Dinner!" she shouted, dinging a little kitchen bell for added effect.

She set down the parmesan shaker next to the massive platter of garlic bread right as Axel entered the room. "Whoa," he commented. "We expecting company, or are a half-dozen people really supposed to eat all this?"

"I only know how to cook in restaurant portions," Emilena admitted. "And who knows, maybe Awe's a heavy eater. By the way, he's made ginger snaps for after dinner so save some room."

"Well, I don't want dinner, so can I have them right now?" Axel folded his arms. Emilena defiantly served him a large plate of assorted pasta shapes with a ramekin of sauce.

Right, the mission debrief. Now that Awe had reminded her, and everyone was in the same room, Emilena broke the ice on explaining their situation. "Awe has managed to secure us a submarine and diving gear, so we're probably going to be infiltrating the base from the water if possible. Speaking of which, Axel?"

Axel busted out his phone. "Yeah, I had a couple ideas, but only one that works with going in like Red October. So, a submerged lab needs to vent heat, cause the water around it is basically serving as a permanent insulator. This is normally done through massive dedicated vents. For a lab this size, we'd be able to fit in them no problem."

Flora passed Marie the parmesean and began dipping her garlic bread in tomato sauce. "Where does the heating vent lead to?" she asked mid-munching.

"Probably the filtration room. But we wouldn't be going that far." Axel brought up a schematic of an underwater lab. "This map isn't Brennan specifically, but they'd need to follow the same rules of architecture. Heating vents are treasure troves for microbes and algae, so they're always connected to maintenance hatches for cleaners or repairmen to get into them. We find one of those, we're in."

"Okay, so what special equipment will we need other than the submarine and scuba suits?" Emilena asked.

"An acetylene torch to burn any grates out of our way." Axel racked his brain. "And I guess, like, weapons. You know, the usual." He looked around. "Any other questions? Opinions?"

"We'll need to keep quiet. Most security at places like this is heavy. Having broken into many myself." Awe noted. "Suppressed weapons and melee weapons, but we should also be ready just encase we loose surprise."

Emilena nodded and glanced at the clock. "It's 5pm right now. Ideally, we'd leave under the cover of night." She glanced at Awe. "Where will the sub be, and how soon will it be ready for us to head out? If we could disembark at 3am, that'd give everyone 8 hours to sleep before the mission." Not that anyone had to rest if they didn't want to, but Emilena was feeling plenty tired; she hadn't had a full 8 hours of sleep since Buller ambushed her yesterday morning. I can't believe that was only 48 hours ago...

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on January 15, 2019, 12:26:48 AM

(OOC: Timeskipping to 1:30am, half an hour before the submarine heist. Feel free to post what your character did during the 8-hour break if you want, but it feels like the RP ground to a halt at dinner)

Emilena's first sensation was the feeling of weightlessness, of being surrounded by a comforting warm gel. She couldn't move, but as she'd just been born, this didn't bother her all too much. Her world was small but safe, letting her slowly learn how to move and stretch while exploring her existence with absolute security.

Her second sensation was the sound of murky voices infiltrating her slumber. "I don't know about this, Rhaegson. We could just store the DNA sample and test it once we've rebuilt in Seryet. It'd be safer."

"Oh come on, it's a piece of fuckin' hair!" The second voice was snide and commanding. "You gonna carry it in a baggie for three months? No. I wanna know who was so goddamn important that those freaks smashed their way in here and turned this place into Pelvanida just to clone 'em."*

She was growing bigger. Her hands and legs were taking shape, hair was growing on her scalp. Light started penetrating her eyelids, and the cloning pod started feeling constricting rather than cozy.

Before long it was done. The pod drained itself of the viscous green goo and the door hissed open, and she took her first stumbling steps into the world.

"Wait," gasped the first voice. "That's...that's the woman Lupis has been chasing! Does he know about this?"

"Feel free to ask him," the other answered dismissively, "we're standing in a puddle of his brains right now."

She groaned as she opened her eyes and saw her surroundings for the first time. She was standing in a heavily damaged laboratory. Bloodstains, bullet holes and burn marks pocked the walls, and the floor was coated in a mess of various bodily fluids. A larger man in a labcoat was staring at her in fascination. The smaller man, in a crisp business suit, wore a look more akin to disgust. "She's nobody I was expecting…" The smaller man narrowed his eyes. "What the hell were they playing at?"

"We'll study it," the larger man assured. "See if we can find out what Lupis was so interested in."

"Nah, we don't got time for this right now." The smaller man drew a silenced pistol. "We're in the middle of a big move and there's too many eyeballs from the feds." He cocked it and poked the barrel into her chest. "We'll clone another one in Seryet."

Something in the man's tone, and the barrel stabbing painfully into her ribcage, warned her she was in danger. In a panic, she whacked the gun with her hand as it went off. The larger man screamed as the bullet ricocheted off the cloning pod and embedded into his leg. "Fuck! Goddammit!" he cursed, glaring at Rhaegson with watery eyes.

Rhaegson was more interested in the cloning pod. "Well, I'll be," he chuckled. "You bitch, you made me shoot the DNA receptacle." She'd stumbled backwards into the pod, and was staring at him in terror. "Guess we're stuck with you." He put his pistol away. "Okay, wash her up and maybe knock her out until we've got her in Seryet."

"You shot me!" the larger man snapped angrily.

Rhaegson rolled his eyes. "Then fucking get some Neosporin and then do it. Jesus." He hit a button and the cloning pod resealed, locking her inside. "She'll be here when you get back."

She heard their steps walking away. A soft light shone from the ceiling of the pod, letting her see her reflection in the metal; a brown-eyed, dark-skinned human.

"Oh, shoot," her reflection suddenly said. "Sorry Echo, you weren't supposed to see into my memories. Don't worry, I'll fix this before you go to sleep again."

Emilena awoke in a cold sweat.

After several minutes digesting everything she'd just seen, she sighed and sank deeper into her pillow. Goddammit, I thought I was done with Lily butting into my dreams... Once her heartrate had settled down, she climbed wearily out of bed and staggered down the hall to splash her face in the bathroom.

(*referencing an incident in 2008 where gunmen assaulted and murdered most of the staff in an American research facility)

Flora was sleeping on a couch in the living room, having drunken herself to sleep on liquor from Tony's bar. Hiccuping drowsily as her 1:30am alarm went off, she rolled over and abruptly crashed to the floor with a resigned groan.

Blinking blearily, she remained strewn across the floor as her brain pieced together the plan they had decided on last night. Sleep for 8 hours, then drive 30 minutes to the coast and meet the submarine... she yawned. "Fifty credits says someone sleeps in and makes us late..." she bet the couch leg.

Five minutes later her alarm went off again, reawakening her with a jolt. As she swiped snooze, she noticed her own name flashing across the News app notification.

Andy Margolis, Clickpop reporter
Fans of DJ Xyler just received their first cryptic clue as to what happened to the missing icon. At 5:21pm last night, Xyler's YouTube channel unexpectedly uploaded a new music video, though its bizarre production quality has left critics baffled and fans worried for her safety.
The video (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ucVVikTmg7A) starts out normal enough, with standard Skyler Blake production quality, but by the second half has descended into a nonsensical hodge-podge of camcorder and security footage. Xyler herself appears dancing with several other women who have not been identified. Columbia Records has since taken the video down and has not commented on why or how it was published in the first place.
So, was it a promotional stunt gone wrong? A half-finished project accidentally made public? Or is DJ Xyler being held hostage and this was part of some sort of ransom notice? In any case, at least we can finally put to rest any theories of Xyler having died in the assassination attempt at Topical Amphitheater.

"Wow, geez. Everyone's a fuckin' critic..." she muttered, dragging herself towards the bar. "Well I thought it was a good video..."

After taking an Amaretto shot in a futile attempt to wake herself up, she limped like a zombie towards the bathroom to relieve herself.

Marita storred as the alarm went off, and she looked around at the fold out cot she had been given. Marie groaned as she stirred next to her ' And i had such a nice dream. i was at this fine arts school, where i was drawing old buildings to put on postcards ' Marie groaned. ' You, do artwork? Thats more of rose's thing.' Marita said as she stretched , feeling her toes and claws crackle as she did so. ' I miss her terribly. Its been weeks now and no word at all, and.. Marie, I think she;s dead. " Until we find her body somewhere you cant give up hope entirely' Marie said as marita pulled out her computer, which had a clip of the 'video' they had made with Flora, and the comments were running about 100-to 1 in favor of ' this video stinks' " so much for our promising careers in music." Marita said with a sigh. ' what do you expect from a cell phone? its not going to have the same production value as a professionally directed and edited video. '[Marie said as she changed into a fresh outfit.

Bianca stirred from her sleep and blearily looked over at a clock that hung on the wall which read 1:40. the Tv had been left on, She had been watching.. well she didnt really remember, show News program.

Now there were a trio of people discussing a music video of some kind. the quality of the video was not great.. it was grainy, and blurry,. "it looks like someone went to the " Blaiir Witch " school of camera holding ; Bianca yawned " Either that or its a home movie or some kind.' The roomba that had been guardiong her and the flat, moved back and forth on the ground, beeping every so often as it bumpred into a tennis racket that had fallen on the floor. Bianca decided to see if there was anything in the pantry to eat. she had just crashed on the coach after finishing moving Zulas stuff intoi her room. 'that had been several hours ago, apparently, and now she was hungry. tthe light in the kitchen flicered slightly, the bulb probably needed to be replaced, but that cost creds, and Zula didnt have much in the way of extra creds. Nor, as it turns out, did she have much in the way of food. there was a half container of milk, some thick baloney slices and and a jar of grape jam in the fridge, a quarter loaf of white soft bread and some crackers in the pantry, and a large case of Diet coke in a small space between the fridge and pantry. ' baloney.. and Jam sandwiches" Bianca sighed as she took out the scant food that was available to her.. As She was sliding bologna between 2 slices, Zula entered from the front door carrying bags of food ' Sorry i'm late. Jiang had a augment repair that went 3 times as long as we thought it would. had to remove the part, find out its burnt together, and spent out 6 hours slowly separating them, so we can get a replacement part made ' Zula sighed. ' also forgive me but i borrowed that gold creds card of yours, I spent about 500 creds, to get all this food. ' I'd been living on bread and jam for the last couple weeks. I'll pay you back once Jiang pays me next. Which will be.. lets see .. Friday. Should be a decent sized amount too, what with the double shift tonight." Zula said as she pulled out , milk, cereal granola bars, peanut butter and several other food products. " its ok, you're giving me a place to crash, so we're even' Bianca said, as she took out a box of fruit snacks from the bag.

"Hey!" Emilena complained when Flora opened the door to the restroom. "I'm in the shower! You had to have heard the water running."

"I did, but I got to piss really bad." Flora raised the toilet seat. "Why didn't you lock the door?"

"Last time I was in a Stracci mansion, they auto-locked." Emilena focused intently on the far corner of the shower while waiting impatiently for Flora to finish and leave. "Do you know if everyone else is awake yet?"

"I saw the mercenary in the kitchen. Don't know about the others." Flora flushed and washed her hands.

"Ugh. We were supposed to leave at 1:30, that was two minutes ago," Emilena sighed. "Hopefully Awe's contact isn't on a tight schedule."

Flora started washing her hair in the sink. "You know, you still owe me a conversation. We made that deal (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=14550.msg432060#msg432060), way back in the day."

"I'm more than prepared to honor it, just there's hardly been a chance." Emilena grumbled as her shower turned lukewarm due to Flora stealing the hot water. "But if you really want it to happen while I'm cornered in the shower, sure."

"Well, to be honest, back in the day I was going to ask you for help cutting and running from this whole ordeal." Flora rifled through the drawers, locating a hair dryer. "But now that I've found true love, I'm invested. I want to be a part of Marita and Marie's adventure. I want to keep them safe."

"I honestly don't care." Emilena pursed her lips as she heard Flora testing the hair dryer. "Umm, is there any chance that could wait until I'm gone?"

"I know you don't like Marita and Marie," Flora answered, ensuring the hair dryer was plugged securely into the wall. "You've always said such hateful things about them. So I'm giving you one warning. Don't ever say another rude thing about my girlfriends again."

"'Girlfriends'?" Emilena scoffed. "Look, I've known them a lot longer than you, and I'm not going to tiptoe around them just for your sake. Sorry."

"Oh yeah?" Flora abruptly pulled Emilena's curtain open and brandished the hair drier menacingly. "What if I tell you," she threatened as the vixen recoiled in surprise, "that if you don't promise, I'll throw this in there with you and--"

Emilena punched her square in the throat. Flora's eyes went wide and she gurgled in surprise as Emilena followed up with a karate chop to the forehead that sent the folf's head smacking against the mirror. Emilena maintained her startled combat stance even as Flora slid to the floor, out cold.

Sixty seconds later, Emilena was dressed, dried, and opening the door to Marie's and Marita's room. "We need to talk," she said simply, dropping the unconscious folf on their bed. "What is the whole story on this girl? How did she get involved with us in the first place, and why does she suddenly love you so much she tried to kill me in the shower just for insulting you?"

"Our job was to keep an eye on her. We're getting paid a lot of money to do so. As for why she suddenly has a major crush on us, well we couldnt tell you" Marie said " Some sort of love potion, or something, I dont know. Until a few weeks ago or so she couldnt really stand us. So her change is a complete 180. '
So she threatened you for you not really caring for us, and you knocked her out?" Marita said " Truthfully I cant find any fault with you defending yourself, she was completely over the line' She sighed. " she's lucky you only knocked her out. You could have killed her."

"So you didn't drug her or anything?" Emilena furrowed her brow. "Hmm. Well, we're about to break into a high-tech laboratory, maybe we'll get the chance to run some tests on her."

She glanced at the door. "I need to check on everyone else so we aren't too late to meet Awe's contact. When Flora wakes up, can you talk to her and dissuade her from doing something like that again? I don't want to leave her behind, but I also don't want to get backstabbed while 200 feet underwater."

(OOC: I've written an epilogue (https://docs.google.com/document/d/1hlkUuGCo5GpJ7R0tlanjJewVEYZfLZfDx5GTUGCP64M/edit) for this RP since it seems to have breathed its last. I got permission from all authors whose characters appeared, and they also chose their characters' epilogues. Serris never sent me his epilogues, if he does I can update the document. Of course, if we ever revive it, I'm more than happy to de-canonize this and we can continue the story as usual, but I don't want the story to forever end unfinished.)

zula finished putting the food away then moved to the coach to relax' ' is there a place i can sleep ' bianca yawned. ' i mean, i nodded off on the coach here, but thats not something i want to get in the habit of. i just want a room, that i can store some clothes and have some privacy. ' well, this a rather small apartment' Zula said ' theres only 1 shower. so if you want one and i;'m already taking one then well just have to share a shower.' " i'd be ok with that' Bianca said.' alright, then.i usually take a morning shower around 10, and an evening shower when i get home from work. since it is so late tonight, i'll think I'll hold off until tom morning. unless you want one, i suppose." I'm really tired, so why dont we hold off on the shower until tomorrow? right now, if you could just show me to my room. 'I'll just crash onto it most likely ' Bianca yawned ;' Follow me then" Zula motioned with her claw.

"Hey there," Axel passed her a round of 9mm ammo for her pistol. "Don't look like you slept well. Hope you're ready for this."

"As I'll ever be." Emilena rubbed her temples and changed into one of the wetsuits. "Where's Tony?"

"He ultimately decided he'd rather stay here. Frankly, I don't blame him." Axel was already drinking from a flask of scotch. "This is suicide."

"Suicide's practically our business by this point," Anne responded as Flora silently entered the room already dressed in her own wetsuit. Unlike the others, she wasn't nervous at all; she suspected Coxon had bigger plans than killing her, which was the main reason she hadn't voiced any complaints up till now.

Soren double-checked his oxy-acetylene torch was working; it was his responsibility to burn through any vents or grates that might impede the team's progress once they've breached the base. "If Tony isn't coming, who stays with the submarine while the rest of us are risking our necks inside?"

"We'll figure it out in the ocean," Awe replied, buckling up. "It's a long ride."

Once everyone was prepared, Flora led the way down to the beach. There was nobody on the beaches this late at night, so they were able to reach the docks without incident. Awe was checking his watch and glancing at the pitch-black ocean. "There's the signal," he noted.

Before the team, a massive gleaming capsule suddenly rose from the surf. The moonlight reflected off of its chrome chassis, and a smaller man opened the top hatch and waded to them through the surf. "Perfect," Awe shook the man's hand. "I knew I could count on you."

"You know the deal, Awe," the man cautioned. "Full payment up front, and I need this thing back in one piece."

"It's already been deposited to your bank account, plus a bit extra for prepping on short notice," Awe assured, helping the others scale the side and clamber into the interior.

Soren let out a low whistle. "This is incredible!" he breathed, observing the medley of scientific and nautical observational tools. "We can scan up to 30 miles in any direction, and these floodlights can illuminate all the way to the ocean floor!"

"Enjoy the view while you can," Awe remarked, activating the engine and taking them away from shore. "We'll have to turn these off before we get close to Brennan Labs, or they'll see us coming."

Marita found a refrigerator and opened it to find a medley of sodas and other drinks. "Wow! You pull out the stops, Awe," she noted approvingly, grabbing a diet cola.

"Sorry to interject with more worries, but will we even be able to contact each other while underwater?" Axel asked. He was watching Awe intently as he drove the sub, since they may need someone else to drive home if Awe for some reason didn't survive the raid.

“I highly doubt it,” Anne replied. She was watching the rocks, coral and kelp speeding past their floodlights as they zoomed along the ocean floor. “Maybe if we had military-issue walkie-talkies or something, but we’ve been doing all our communication through ordinary cell phones. I doubt any of us even get signal.”

“Actually, my phone plan covers international waters,” Awe replied. “It’s expensive, but worth it in my line of work.”

“Perfect,” Emilena nodded, glancing at Flora. “You sure you want to come with us? It’s highly unlikely we’ll encounter a situation down there where we need you. No offense.”

“Are you kidding me? We’re about to break into an underwater lab! You think I’m gonna pass up that opportunity?” Flora assured. “I’m getting a boner just thinking of what we’re about to do!” She also secretly hoped that she might see Bianca down there.

It was almost thirty minutes of sailing before they reached their destination, but it still felt far sooner than Anne expected. “All right…” she muttered, donning her oxygen tank and mask. “Everyone get their gear on. Last chance to duck out.”

“I can’t believe we’re doing this…” Axel muttered, putting his flippers on. “I hate swimming.”

“Really?” Marita asked, clipping her laptop to her back; Tony had leant her a waterproof pouch she could hide it in, and she wanted to be prepared in case she needed to hack anything down there. “I remember you and Lily used to go to the pool all the time before you broke up.”

“There’s a difference between the YMCA and a 200-foot dive into pitch-black ocean waters,” Axel shot back. “How do we even ensure we don’t lose each other down there?”

Soren thought. “Let’s tie ourselves together with the yacht’s rope. Axel’s right, we don’t want someone to get lost before we even reach the lab.”

Marie spread a printout of the area. “You’re going to want to swim directly that way,” she pointed east; she’d drawn the short straw and would be guarding the sub.

“We stopped a bit early, just because I figured we’d want to stay out of sensor range,” Awe chimed in. “I’d say it’s probably a 15-minute swim.” Axel groaned louder.

Emilena took a deep breath as Awe tied the rope around his waist and the others clipped themselves on. “All right, before the night gets any younger. Let’s do this.”

In unison, the seven donned their masks and flipped off the side of the boat. Immediately Emilena was hit with a freezing cold sensation as the frigid water enveloped her faster than her body could compensate. For a coastal climate, these waters sure get cold at night… But she didn’t spare more than a few seconds of orientating herself before kicking off in the direction Marie had pointed out.

She worried that they’d miss the lab in the dark, but as they swam that proved to be a moot problem; a faint glow appeared on the horizon, first ever so small, then larger and stronger before they finally found themselves treading water and staring in awe at a massive castle-sized structure. Brennan Labs was a vaguely circulare network of reinforced tubes, containing portholes and massive green lights that were currently dimmed to create the illusion of nighttime; a mechanic they no doubt use to help their personnel maintain a day/night cycle.

Awe realized his allies were waiting for his cue. He pointed his thumb downwards and they circled the bottom of the base. The light was worse down here, and Emilena wondered whether she should activate her flashlight. No, it's probably better that we not broadcast our location to them while we're still in open waters.

They got their first break when Marita spotted the discharge tunnel on their second pass around the western side. As they suspected, it was blocked by a massive vent that controlled the outlet. Swimming close, Soren activated his blowtorch and slowly cut through the grate bar-by-bar.

The team could finally activate their flashlights once they were inside the tunnel, and Anne gasped in surprise at how unexpectedly beautiful the ecosystem was within the tunnel. Thanks to the extra heat venting from the base, the walls and floor were covered in a medley of multicolored mosses and flora.

Maintaining the lead in their formation, Awe slowly swam down the various tunnels. The water got even warmer as they progressed through the cooling tunnel, but the wildlife disappeared after swimming past a set of fans, signifying the point the lab started worrying about janitorial duties.

After emerging into a turbine, Soren noticed light filtering from above. An air pocket. Almost there… Flagging the others, he led the way onto a submerged ladder and climbed his way into an access chamber.

Everyone was panting with exertion from their swim, and Axel was so drunk he needed a bit of help as he reached the top of the ladder and hoisted himself onto solid ground. “Oh man…” he groaned, popping his breather out and rolling onto his back. “You're telling me we need to do something here and then repeat that swim on the way out?”

“We shouldn't be long,” Emilena assured. “I can't fathom it'll be hard to find a way to cripple an underwater base. If we just find the control room and start shooting random systems, maybe break a couple portholes along the way, we can let the hundreds of pounds of ocean pressure do the rest for us.”

The hallways seemed to be dotted mostly with scientific personnel; Anne figured the lab probably didn't need to worry much about security 200ft underwater. But the hallways often lacked alternate routes, so the team found themselves backtracking frequently just to bypass the rare scientist or worker.

"God, this would literally be impossible if it were daytime and the staff were out in full force," Marita muttered, massaging her backside after cramming herself into yet another storage closet to avoid being spotted.

"We really need to find disguises," Flora agreed. "None of these rooms are labeled, how are we supposed to find where anything is?"

"I saw one room labeled 'tellectrum,' but we couldn't reach it because that janitor was at the end of the hall," Awe whispered.

"Tellectrum?" Axel exclaimed. "We should check that out, it came up in the papers we stole from Kintoki's safe house. It's important."

"Hmm," Emilena nodded. "Well, the janitor was almost thirty minutes ago, let's see if the coast cleared."

He was gone now, and the team gratefully left the hallways and filed into a currently-empty lab. "Loving how everything's unlocked," Flora commented, swiping a vial of brown powder and examining it curiously. "So what is this stuff?" she asked.

"It's an electrical catalyst, you use it to trigger certain chemical reactions," Axel explained, recalling what he'd read. "It's really rare, which is why Brennan has to mine it from the ocean floor. The problem is, I couldn't figure out what they use it for."

"Looks like they create some sort of gas with it," Awe replied, overlooking a series of mixing stations and incubators.

"Marita, can you figure out what these do?" Soren asked.

Marita hacked her way into one of the computers sitting at the workstations. "Alright, let's see…" she muttered. "The tellectrum is inserted into a pressure chamber with nitrous oxide and ether. When they mix, the tellectrum gives the resulting anesthetic a harmless electrical charge."

"Why would anyone want electrified anesthesia?" Anne asked.

"Because it works better," Soren answered, reading through clipboards of results from tissue and subject testing. "According to these, at least. Anne, you deal with drugs more than me, are these results as impressive as they look?"

Anne accepted the clipboard and checked it. Her ears flared back in surprise. "Holy fuck, that's the best knockout drug I've ever seen. It works instantly, it doesn't have side effects, and there's no resulting nausea or disorientation upon waking up. This is actually revolutionary for that field of medicine." She quickly looked around for samples she could pocket to sell on the street.

"Yeah, but Brennan is a cybernetics company," Axel shrugged. "Why are they even fucking around with this?"

"Because they're about to go under," Marita answered, still surfing through Brennan's files. "Even before their product famously killed hundreds of people. They'd already posted record losses for the last four quarters. This delve into hospital drugs is just one of multiple hail-mary attempts to find a new market, and it appears to be the only one kinda working."

Emilena was exploring several workbenches with petri dishes, seal cages, and copious notes about terrrablende's reaction with specimens. "It looks like they've been hard at work trying to make their anesthesia compatible with augments," she replied. "With little success."

"Wait, it's not compatible with augments?" Anne asked.

“Not according to their animal and tissue trials,” she replied. “Apparently the electricity doesn’t react well with any cybernetic implants. In augmented test subjects there’s been a…” she flipped the page and paled, “...one-hundred percent mortality rate.”

“Holy shit, that sounds like a colossal design flaw in an anesthetic,” Soren breathed. “A huge portion of the population is augmented.”

“Hey, guys!” Flora called. “Look at this!” She’d crossed through another door into a new lab, one that was surrounded by an intricate web of metal wires. Surrounded by testing equipment was a workstation with something sitting under a tarp.

“This is a faraday cage,” Soren recognized. “They must do some sort of electrical testing in here.”

Flora pulled the tarp off to reveal a humming black box with a button and some sort of reader sitting on top. “Any idea what that thing is?” she asked.

“It looks like either a battery, or a generator,” Soren rubbed his chin. “I don’t see anywhere to plug something in…”

Axel blew a strand of hair out of his eyes. “I think I’ve seen this thing before, but I can’t quite…” he muttered, touching the side and accidentally pressing an equally-black button embedded into its face.

Suddenly all seven of them felt a harmless current pass through them, and Flora yelped and dropped her vial. “The tellectrum shocked me!” she exclaimed.

The pulse dissipated thanks to the faraday cage. “Okay, so it’s a box that releases an electrical charge.” Anne pondered. “Why do they have that?”

But Flora’s tellectrum vial wasn’t the only thing that popped open. Soren squinted as he spotted a tiny capsule that had similarly sparked when the testing box went off. “It’s so they can energize the tellectrum for testing purposes,” he answered, examining the capsule. Where have I seen this design before? he racked his brain, and suddenly realized. Oh, this looks like...the killchip Rhaegson had me install in Emilena. He pried it open, to see tellectrum inside. So that’s how it works. And if that’s what Brennan was developing...

He glanced at the box, then the dropped tellectrum, then the chip in his hand. “Holy shit, I’ve got it…” his eyes lit up. “I figured everything out!” He pointed at Flora’s shattered vial. “Brennan found a mineral that can give off an undetectable electrical shock, one that’s lethal to people with augments. They wanted to kill a bunch of gleamers. So, all they had to do was store tellectrum capsules in all their augments and then, when the time was right--” “--signal the capsules to release the tellectrum, and anyone with a Brennan augment would be killed!” Anne’s eyes lit up.

“But why did they do that?” Flora asked.

“Because augments are the primary reason their anesthesia isn’t the market standard,” Axel explained. “If they could successfully scare the public into banning or avoiding augmentation, hospitals would use their only profitable product significantly more.”

Marita started snapping pics of the emitter and grabbing paperwork from the tellectrum stations. “I don’t think we need to blow the base up anymore. Let’s just get out of here and reveal what we’ve discovered to the world!”

The others followed her back to the room, but Emilena suddenly stumbled. “Um, guys? I don’t feel…” she shook her head, trying to clear her mind, but she felt her body shutting down. “Uhhh…” she looked in alarm as her augmented hand started dripping blood.

“Emi? What’s happening?” Flora gasped.

“I...don’t know…” Emilena looked disoriented, and was instinctively clutching her cybernetic wrist.

Soren suddenly realized what was going on. The pulse triggered the killchip! “Lay her down!” he ordered. “Grab me some tools, anything!”

Awe quickly looted a supply closet and brought Soren a full toolset. Slicing the sleeve of Emilena’s wetsuit down the middle, Soren peeled her synthetic skin aside and rooted around in her cybernetic innards. Where had he put it?

There! Delicately pushing a neural connector aside, he unearthed the killchip. But his heart sank. Like the one in the faraday cage, it had broken completely open, and the tellectrum had infected her bloodstream. There was nothing he could do.

“Soren, what’s wrong with her?” Marita asked.

“I…” He took a deep breath. “Rhaegson must have had a killchip embedded in the cybernetic hand he’d given her. And it was activated by the pulse emitter.”

Flora gasped. Emilena’s breaths were growing fainter by the second. Of the team, only Axel was more focused on Soren, since he remembered helping install the hand part-by-part. Did Soren know that killchip was installed?

Emilena, for her part, was surprisingly calm, even as her heart beat faster and faster in a hopeless attempt to save her. She’d never feared death, and had been reflecting on its likelihood pretty much every day of this ordeal. It was almost relaxing that it had finally arrived and she didn’t need to worry about it anymore. “It’s okay,” she winced, coughing up blood. “I’m...fine with this. Just...get out there and reveal what they did to the world.”

She shuddered her final haggard breath. I hope I’m wrong about there being no afterlife, was her last fading thought. I’d like to see Nairda again...

The others were silent as they watched their partner finally grow still. Flora balled her fist over her mouth and couldn’t stop tears from filling her eyes. I can’t believe I threatened her life in Tony’s mansion, she breathed, finally snapping out of the neurocotics' mind-altering effects through sheer shock. She just seemed so larger than life...I thought she'd get through everything.

“I never liked her, but it's hard to see her go like this,” Anne admitted, averting her gaze from the corpse.

Awe somberly kneeled down and closed Emilena's eyes. “I wish we had time to mourn, but we need to get going,” he reminded everyone. “She'd want us to prioritize the mission.”

Marita nodded. “I've got more than enough evidence to put us on the front page of every newspaper in the country,” she announced. “Let's get out of here.”

But that plan didn't get very far when she creaked open the door to the hallway and found a fully-armed platoon of security guards already training guns on her. “Well,” she remarked, dropping her pistol and raising her arms. “That fell apart fast.”

Metheun paced outside their holding chamber in the brig. “I gotta admit, I didn't expect the bosses' plan to work as well as it did,” he gloated. “I was sure you were all going to get yourselves killed long before you managed to reach us, but here you are!”

The team had been stripped of everything but their wetsuits and were now handcuffed in the brig. They weren't gagged, but nobody felt like responding as Metheun explained how badly they walked into his bosses' trap.

“We let you raid our safehouse and steal that data! We wanted you to find us! Heck, when we saw you were gonna get yourselves arrested in the hospital, we sent an anonymous text to Tony so he'd arrive with a getaway vehicle!” he cackled triumphantly. “I love a happy ending. You have no idea how much money I'm gonna get paid; this is golden-parachute level stuff. I'm never gonna work again.”

“So, if you wanted us here so badly, and you're not just killing us, what do you actually want?” Marita asked.

Metheun flagged down a guard. “Me, personally? Couldn't care less about you. But I know the boss has things he wants to discuss. Starting with the pink one.” He snapped his fingers and two guards marched forward.

“I'm fuchsia!” Flora corrected hotly as they dragged her out the door and down the hallway.

Five minutes later, she massaged her arms after they uncuffed her and dumped her in a dimly-lit office. “Uhhh...hello?” she asked.

“Flora.” The desklamp clicked on, and she jumped when she realized an old man with a weatherbeaten face was staring softly at her from the other side. "It's been a while, hasn't it, Flora?"

“I...what?” She cocked her head. “Your name was...Coxon, right? It's been like...two months max.”

Coxon smiled kindly at Flora as a guard pulled out a chair for her, helping her to ease down into it. He reached over to pat her hand reassuringly. "No, I suppose you wouldn't remember. It might surprise you but I actually knew you when you were... much younger."

Flora blinked. “Erm...okay. Nice to see you again? This is kinda a weird time for reacquainting, especially since I was here to help destroy the base.”

“Yes, well, it’s not easy to find excuses to bring people down here.” Coxon lit a cigar, offering her one but she declined. “Nevertheless, I’m proud of you for making it this far. You and your new friends are a pretty good team.”

It’s true!” Flora bounced in her seat. “You’re not gonna harm them, are you?”

“That depends; are you interested in helping me out?” Coxon sighed. “I hate to sound unpleasant, but Brennan didn’t get this far by letting loose threads hang around. Your friends need to make themselves useful to us. Luckily, we have just the way they can do so.” He passed a manila folder over. “Do you recognize this woman?”

Flora opened the folder and jumped in surprise at the scowling face staring back at her. “That’s Lily!”

“Yes. We’ve read a lot about her. And we know your friends have interacted with her in the past, especially Mr. Whent and Ms. Echo.” Coxon leaned forward, drenching his face in shadow. “We simply want them to bring Lily North to us. If they do that, we’ll make all their Purifier problems go away.”

“Why would they work with you when you killed Emi?” Flora snapped, flushing red.

“We did nothing of the sort,” Coxon raised an eyebrow. “The Purifiers did that when they tainted her augment. A regrettable loss, I was going to offer her employment as chief of security. Honestly,” he leaned forward, “I’m offering you my support to bring her killers, the Purifiers, to justice. I think their comeuppance is what she would have wanted.”

“You’re only doing that in exchange for Lily. Speaking of which, does she have to be alive?” Flora stammered, a bead of sweat rolling down her brow.

Coxon laughed. “I don’t think there’s any other way. Clearly they didn’t tell you everything about her.” He templed his fingers. “Yes, alive. Or our deal is off the table.” Flora gulped. “You see, Flora, Mrs. North has a most incredible gift. A gift we’d like to study. We think we could revolutionize the world by using her powers to increase the potency and capabilities of our pharmaceutical products.”

“Is there any chance I could persuade you to accept us bringing her dead?” Flora asked nervously. “I don’t think you realize how evil she is. She wouldn’t work with you, and her powers were--cough--are too dangerous to let her stick around. You wouldn’t be able to control her.”

“Let us worry about that.” Coxon snuffed his cigar. “If you kill her, she’ll merely regenerate to heal her wounds. But if you keep her sedated, you can bring her to us during that time.”

“And if we can’t...you’ll kill us?” Flora fought to keep from shaking.

“Oh no, of course not!” Coxon assured. “I’ll kill them. You have a more nuanced offer.” He handed her another file, this one on herself. “There’s a lot your parents never told you about your conception. It’s not a coincidence that you turned out the way you are. Have you ever heard of the Changelings?”

Flora flipped through notes discussing her gestation, sonograms of her unborn fetus, and outlines of gene therapies for which she was one of the filial testing generations. “Yeah, weren’t they like Gattaca hippies?”

“They were an illegal underground community that experimented with prenatal gene alteration to find the ‘biological limit,’ Coxon explained. “They wanted to see what the human body could be capable of, and they used their own unborn children as the test subjects. The Changelings only really stuck around for one generation before increased social awareness got them all arrested and their practises outlawed...though your parents were rich enough to be above the law.”

Flora’s shivers of nervousness slowly shifted into trembles of disbelief. “So...that’s why I can change my colors and body structure?” she stammered.

“Most of the Changeling kids turned out rather the worse for their ordeal. Underground gene experimentation isn’t an exact science,” Coxon replied. “You were one of the rare ones that came out great. They all had such high hopes for you before the police started raiding.” He sighed. “But, if you can convince Echo and her crew to capture Lily for me, we can work together to continue what your parents started. With my company’s resources, and Lily’s power, we can start a revolution the likes of which this world has never seen.”

“...so, you didn’t bring up that Lily’s already dead and rotting in an attic somewhere?” Anne protested.

“It was the only thing stopping them from killing all you!” Flora explained. Awe was scanning their cell to make sure they weren’t being bugged. “If Coxon thinks we can bring him Lily, he’ll release us into the wild, and we’ll have a chance to escape!”

“Right back into the Purifiers’ hands,” Soren pointed out. “If we leave without taking this base out, we’re just changing who ends up wanting us dead.”

“What if we tell the public the truth after Brennan lets us go?” Marita suggested. “Get the media on our side. Maybe we can enter witness protection or something after that.”

“Brennan’s not gonna let us leave with proof, and without evidence we’ll just sound like conspiracy theorists with giant criminal records,” Axel shook his head.

Awe completed his search and, satisfied they weren’t being wiretapped, rejoined the conversation. “Flora, are you sure you’re okay with turning down Coxon’s offer?” he asked. “It sounds like you’re irreplaceable in his schemes. Whatever happens to us, you could stay here and milk his good side for a new life.”

“Brennan isn’t my team,” Flora shook her head. “You guys are.”

“That’s good to hear, Flora,” Marita smiled. “Then in that case, I’ve got a plan.” She turned to Soren. “You said they triggered the Seryet incident with tellectrum, right?” Soren nodded. “And we’re sitting in a lab full of that stuff, right now. So I’m wondering…”

“I got them to agree,” Flora informed Coxon in a small voice; she still felt somewhat cowed at how the architecture of the room made any visitor the center of attention. Like the furniture was watching and ready to attack her.

“Excellent, Flora!” Coxon beamed. “We’ll release them on the docks. Were you planning on joining them, or would you like to stay here and begin learning about your past?”

“Go with them,” Flora answered quickly. “We’re a team, and I’d rather do my part to bring Lily in.”

“Are you sure? There’s so much for us to discuss.”

“Positive,” she nodded. “We can discuss all we want after my friends are saved from the Purifiers.”

Coxon shrugged. “Not the answer I expected...but that is your right.” He hit a button. “Please return to the brig. And best of luck to your team, sincerely.”

A pair of guards arrived and unlocked the cell door. “Follow us,” the taller one grunted. “We’ll take you to your stuff, and give you equipment and supplies and get you on your way.”

“And the handcuffs?” Marita asked as the team complied. “We won’t be much use with these on.”

The man acquiescently uncuffed them and marched them into the hallway. After a short walk, they arrived at several lockers, the first of which he opened to reveal their wetsuits and gear.

Soren cocked his head. “Where are our guns?”

“We had them delivered to the dock,” the guard explained. “They’ll be waiting for you when you arrive surfaceside.”

Anne sighed as she donned her wetsuit. “I guess that makes things a bit harder.”

“Uh, why?” the guard asked, right before Awe suddenly smacked him in the back of the head with a punch that could shatter a cinderblock. Simultaneously, Axel grabbed a combat knife from Emilena’s gear and slashed the other guard’s throat with a vicious swipe.

The alarm immediately sounded, but none of the five seemed too fussed. “Things are gonna get heated, Awe, you ready to do your part?” Soren asked, frisking the guard for his rifle and handing Anne the sidearm.

Awe nodded, pinned his oxygen tank and breather to his belt, and leaped onto the ceiling. Prying a grate off the ventilation system, he slithered away into the recesses of the lab.

“Alright, let’s get out of here!” Anne whooped, opening fire on a pair of guards approaching from the far side. The bullets punched holes in the wall, causing water to drain in and forcing the approaching targets to retreat for an unpunctured section.

Retracing their steps from the route they were marched to the brig, Soren shot every porthole they passed, and before long they were wading through waistdeep water. “Our exit’s up ahead!” he urged everyone. “Keep going!”

They threw the door to the access chamber open. “Flippers on!” Marita ordered, but before they could do anything a hatch slid shut, blocking access to the cooling tunnel.

“What the hell do you think you’re doing?” Coxon’s furious voice shouted at them from the intercom. “I thought we were gonna work together!”

“We’re already being strong-armed into doing one enemy’s bullshit, why on Earth would we want a second group lording our lives over us?” Anne shouted back defiantly. Soren and Axel kept their scuba gear on but assumed defensive positions in case anyone tried to storm the room.

“Don’t worry about defending the door, I’m not dumb enough to send my men down there,” Coxon sneered. “You’d have to do a lot more damage to cause this base any problems; we’ve already evacuated and sealed off that section. Your attempted hull breach was simply embarrassing.”

“Was it?” Axel challenged. “How are you gonna get us?”

“I don’t have to!” Up in his office, Coxon was red-faced with frustration at his prey’s games. “I can just wait for you to suffocate in that locked room!” he shouted into his broadcaster. “You basically killed yourselves, for nothing! How did you survive this long if you’re so goddamn stupid?”

“Because we know our limits,” Soren’s voice responded, “and we know our weaknesses.”

“For example, all of us except me are Augments, which is about to become a serious liability in this base,” Marita chimed in. “But as a team, we can cover each other’s weaknesses and, if not win handily, at least live to fight another day.”

“What the hell is she talking about…?” Coxon muttered, and then something suddenly clicked in his mind. He checked his trackers to see where Flora was, then switched his camera view to her section. She was in the filtration room, staring straight at the camera. Empty canisters of their own anesthetic were scattered at her feet. “Hey!” he snapped. “Flora! Step away from that!”

Flora complied with a huge smile, and he realized it was simply because she’d long finished messing with the air supply.

Elsewhere, Awe finished dismantling the faraday cage around the electrical emitter and, after ensuring his oxygen mask was on tight, fired another pulse. Without the faraday cage to block it, the pulse radiated in all directions, covering the whole base before dissipating in the ocean.

Suddenly Coxon felt lightheaded. “No…” he breathed, switching to the global cameras. Personnel across the base were clutching their heads and falling to the ground. “Flora, you didn’t…” he breathed. “Why…?”

“I dunno if you’re an Augment, Coxon, but in a few seconds you’re gonna be asleep either way,” Anne taunted. “I really hope you are one, though, because I think it’s only fair you experience the same terrible death you gave so many people in Seryet.”

Coxon clutched his head and urgently switched computer windows to shut down the ventilation system, but it was far too little too late. His genius augmented brain wasn’t responding to his hands properly. He felt helpless as he couldn’t force his body to work, he felt terrified as he felt blood leaking from his eyes.

And before long he felt nothing.

Almost 80% of Brennan personnel had at least one augment, and the anesthetized air killed them outright. The remainder were knocked unconscious, giving Soren and his team full access to the base. Flora, due to her lack of augments, was knocked out by her own incapacitating agent, but her team rescued her after Soren burnt the doorlock open with his blowtorch.

“There we go,” Marita urged her younger teammate as she breathed her first clean breath from the oxygen tank she fit on her. “Feeling okay?” She sounded a bit odd thanks to the oxygen rebreather.

Flora nodded. “It’s a really good anesthetic,” she admitted, impressed. “No nausea or anything when you wake up. Shame it was produced by a bunch of dicks.” She looked around. “Where are the others?”

Marita led her out of the filtration system, stepping over dead or unconscious bodies. “The control room,” she explained. “Figuring out how to contact the Purifiers. Let’s get our rewards and put this mess behind us.”

Awe gave them a curt nod when they arrived. “Was just waiting for you to get here. We can hail them whenever you’re ready. Also I’ve sealed off this room and pumped out the gas, so we don’t have to debrief Rhaegson with masks on.”

“Perfect, punch it,” Flora ordered, and Awe quickly complied.

For several minutes, no reply. Axel cocked his head. “Erm, you sure the frequency is right?”

Awe squinted at the computer screen. “I got it from Brennan’s own files; they DDoSed the Purifiers during the Seryet incident so they could control the narrative. I guess it’s possible Rhaegson changed it after that--”

And then suddenly the connection completed, and the main viewscreen lit up to show Rhaegson’s severed head lying on his bloodstained desk.

“Holy-!” Soren jumped up, and even Awe gasped in surprise. They could hear gunfire, screaming, and the sound of desperate scuffles on the other side...but it all faded away quickly enough.

A bloodstained and very resigned dark-skinned woman walked onto frame, dropping Buller's corpse. Her combat outfit was charred and shredded with bullet holes, but she didn't have a single injury underneath. "Brennan?" she narrowed her eyes. "What on earth do you...wait…" Her eyes widened. "Are you...Echo's team?"

"Is that her?!" Flora stammered, pupils dilating. "How? How did she survive???"

"Hold on, just let me do the talking!" Axel said urgently. He stepped forward and addressed the woman on the screen. "You're the clone, aren't you."

"Don't ever call me that again," the dark-skinned woman snarled. "I'm the only one left, and her powers have awoken within me. I've earned the right to be called Lily."

"Fair enough," Axel conceded the point. "I understand. Um, congratulations on getting everything you wanted."

The new Lily sighed. "Thank you…" she sighed, glancing around the aftermath of her carnage. "It's funny...in the end, she and I wanted the same thing. The Purifiers treated both of us like objects, like we were inhuman. I guess I felt the need to prove to them I was more than they ever thought I could be." She returned her gaze to the screen. "But I understand I wouldn't have succeeded without you and Echo. Consider us even."

"I am more than happy with that," Axel assured. "No hard feelings, no need to ever meet up...let's go our separate ways."

"Yes. Let's." Lily affixed him with one final gaze, and then the connection cut.

It wasn't hard to transmit more than enough evidence of Brennan's crimes now that the team had control of all the base's systems. A series of anonymous data packets were sent to every major whistleblowing and journalism site, several of whom responded in real time with breaking articles and public releases of juicy details, and the surviving teammates returned to the submarine leaving a crippled ghost base less than twelve hours after they'd arrived.

The team brought Emilena's body and gave her a short seaside funeral before returning to Seryet. As the team stood at attention on the hull of the surfaced submarine, Marita delivered a final eulogy as the floating pyre drifted towards the horizon.

"We commit Emilena's body to the cleansing fire, that all ties to this world are severed." Marita watched as the flames slowly grew on the small wooden raft. There would soon be nothing of Emilena's body but fine ash. "We remember her as a colleague, someone who, while we didn't always agree, was someone you wanted on your side. I came to respect her over our time together, even though this whole thing came about over her trying to blackmail me." She chuckled softly. "Goodbye Emilena, rest easy, and rest well."

Axel bowed his head. “She was never the most...straightforward ally. Always seemed to have some sort of scheme or hidden agenda. But she stuck her neck out for the team as much as anyone else. Considering most people die for nothing, at least we made her sacrifice matter.”

Soren didn’t say anything.

Several hours later the sub surfaced upon reaching the Brennan docks, and all six climbed out into the surf. Awe was the last to leave; he battened down the hatches and prepped the sub to be returned once he eventually said his goodbyes to his current teammates.

“Welp, we made it…” Axel panted, paddling to the docks. “Doesn’t look like we’re getting those rewards we were promised, though.”

“The Purifiers being dead is more than enough for me,” Soren affirmed, helping the others up the wooden ladder. After that he collapsed onto the boardwalk, the adrenaline from their odyssey in Brennan Labs finally catching up to him.

Flora observed the warehouses, stamped with Brennan’s name and logo. In this day and age, everything within was completely automated, but without the lab sending signals the warehouse machinery was likely shut down. “You know…” she noted, “we are currently standing on a pier loaded to the brim with expensive cybernetics and possibly drugs. That nobody owns.”

“Hmm…” Anne exchanged glances with the others. “We could probably fix that. Without those Purifier rewards, I think we’re all in the same predicament.”

“Having to start again from square one,” Marie agreed. “Let’s split them. There’ll be enough in there for each of us to rebuild our capital and start a new life.”

“One last crime, huh?” Axel sighed. “Why not. After the bullshit Brennan put us through, I think we earned it.”

“I’m actually good,” Flora declined respectfully. “I’m still a world-famous and wealthy pop star, so I’ll settle for just lying low in Tony’s mansion until this all blows over. The rest of you have fun though.”

And split it they did. Brennan Cybernetics wasn’t in a position to stop them, as its surviving admins were quickly arrested by law enforcement. Before long the company's crimes were thoroughly investigated, catalogued and broadcast to the public. The identities of the whistleblowers who broke the conspiracy open were never discovered.

marita crawled to a stop, her tail dragging behind her. around her, large dunes sprawled in every direction. marita fumbled feor her phone and tried to get a signal ' no bars ' damn it ' she muttered. She slowly got to her feet ' ans began calling out ' Rose! Marie! Can you hear me..' she kept calling out, her voice fading into the distance ' before finally she heard a faint response.' marita ran towards the sounds before seeing a figure run towards her over the sand. as it got closer marita recognized the figure, it was Marie. marie reached her and the two girls hugged. Marie pulled away and put her claws on her knees.' where the heck are we? she panted. " i have no clue. I'm not getting any reception on my phone. and its hot. we need to find rose and get out of the desert.' marita said.

the girls began wandering through the desert, calling out Roses name. Finally, they found her, sprawled out in a depression between a couple sand dunes. the dunes provided a small amount of shelter from the wind and was cooler than the surrounding area. rose had sand all over her, and looked miserable. ' what kept you girls? She said weakly. I've been trying to text you...' " Phones dont work out here ' marita said as shghe took a seat.

Flora wandered in a dazed stupor from the crash site. The events she had just lived through weighed heavily on her sanity, and she was struggling to keep from hyperventilating and shutting down. Her thirst was the only thing keeping her going.

Then Mother Nature decided to add a sandstorm to help her keep motivated. Tearing a strip out of her nurse's outfit to cover her snout, she squinted her eyes shut and stumbled blindly through the vicious lacerating sand in no particular direction.

the sandstorm soon blew its way over the desert and towards the deprression wherwe Marita marie and Rose were sitting.' the clouds moved rapidly over the desert and was boring down on them. ' What the heck is that?' Rose cried. " Its a sandstorm " Marita said ' a big one. we're not safe here. the wind will tear up the dunes on the one hand the temperature will drop a lot , on the other hand we'll be scoured by the samd and wind, it'll be like rubbing your face with sandpaper. not fun.. ' marita whipped outr her phone again, praying to whatever deities there were to let her get a signal..' ok. ok! i have two bars..' bringing up the map.. ok.. down to one bar.. theres a town.. about .. 6 miles from here to the southeast. Bus- al' ghar. lets head southwest as quickly as we can..' marita turned off her phone- it had lost connection again anyway.' and she got up off her seat. ' that storm wil be herein a few minutes. we need to move..

Flora continued stumbling blindly, until she couldn't take it and collapsed on the sand. Covering her face in her hands, she tried and failed to keep what felt like gallons of sand from filling her lungs grain by grain.

And then it was over. Flora looked up in shock. Because she stopped moving, the sandstorm passed over her, leaving her buried up to her neck in a brand new dune. "Ahhh!" she gasped in surprise, then grimaced when the course sand filled her mouth instantly. Spluttering angrily she wiggled and thrashed and freed herself inch by inch. She was more sand than folf when she finally freed herself. Her face felt badly sunburned and her nails were splintered raw from clawing free from her burning prison. So she kept walking, wishing with every step she had procured a less-tight outfit in her escape from Kalis' warship.

The trip was survivable only due to it being twilight, the sweet spot between the parched daytime and frigid night. Nevertheless after what felt like an eternity her footpads were raw and her tongue was swollen from thirst. This might be the end... her heatstroked brain thought with alarming calmness. Saved from Kalis only to feed the vultures...will vultures even find me? I'll probably just be a skeleton if they do, there's nobody and nothing for miles...

These thoughts were suddenly dashed from her mind when with wild shock she realized there was something up ahead. Glinting in the fading afternoon light, she made out curved rooftops and gleaming steeples...a town?

Is it a mirage? she thought with wonder. Is it delirium? It didn't matter. Increasing her pace with reckless fervor, she sped towards her only hope of getting through the approaching night alive.

Marita and the others had only made it a few hundred feet before the storm had hit them, despite the wind, searing sand and low visibility the trio slowly made their way towards the southwest. the storm blew over finally after what seemed like hours. all three were coverd in sand, blood dripped from scratches in their face, and was absotbed by the sand that clung to their fur. finally, the outline of a city appeared on the horizon ' Bus Al ' gahr' marita said, relief oin her voice. ' we'll just find an inn, there and crash for the night. Hopefully they'll have enough creds.."

Flora could hardly believe it when she stumbled into this unknown city and the buildings didn't melt away in the wind. "It's real!" she breathed in shock. "A real city!"

She dropped to her knees, tearing up in relief. Then she got back up almost as quickly because the stone tiles paving the road were still blistering hot.

Hobbling to a cheap motel called The Oasis, Flora approached the register and silently hoped the clerk spoke English. "Please, can I have a room tonight?" she begged. "I don't have any money but I just survived a sandstorm and I'm so tired! I'll do anything, I'll wash dishes, I'll work off my debt! Just one night!"

the clerk- who was a camel- looked at her and sized up her attire.. ' well you do look like hell. tell you what. ' we will have some guests checking out in an hour or so. once they check out i'll give you a room. For now,the dining room is open. so go grab yourself some food and drink, you definitely look like you need it. i'll charge the cost to your room bill." the clerk said ' your name please?' he said pulling out a book, and flipped it open to an empty page.

"My name is Flora..." She mumbled, only realizing afterwards that she should have given a fake name, as she clearly wouldn't be able to pay her room bill. "Thank you sooo much...I promise I'll work the debt off somehow, just let me know anything I can do around the hotel..." She glanced at his nametag, but it was written in the Arabic alphabet so she didn't know how to pronounce it.

Flora " the camel repeated, writing it down on the ledger. 'welcome to The Oasis madam. i'll let you know when the room is available. Masad over there- he motioned to a parrot perched on a perch. ' will show you around the hotel.'

marita and the girls entered the city. leaving tremkks of sand mixed with blood on their wake. ' marie tried to wipe some of the sand off of her, her throat was dry and every time she coughed sand dribbled out of her mouth. 'wh-where to, Marita" Marie wheezed." i dont know' Marita said. " Just look for an inn, any inn will do." rose was wipeng her face fre of the sand, all three of them looked like something out of a zombie flick.

"Thank you..." Blushed Flora, crossing over to the Mcaw. This wasn't the service she expected from an Arabian hotel, she'd always heard that on this side of the world business was full of haggling and nitpicking down to the penny. But she couldn't well be scammed if she had no money. Maybe he had a crush on her...

Or the Mcaw's going to knock me unconscious and steal my organs, she thought, but she didn't care. She needed somewhere to sleep.

follow me please' the Macaw said in a thick Arabic accent " the dining room is this way. sample as you like, your room will be billed once you finish and enter it. Unless you are expecting friends? But no matter, that is between you and them.' the macaw entered the dining room and guided the folf to an open table, the room was about a quarter full of guests, mostly camels altghough there we a few dogs and human families as well, all dressed n local attire. they paid little attention to the newcomer, and NMasad paused at a open table ' please sit here. theres water in that pitcher."

marita looked around the street, it was late now anmd she was exhausted . for the last 15-20minutes or so they had been looking for anything that looked like an in, but with no luck.

Flora looked with alarm at the food. She couldn't pay for the room and was certainly skipping town, not to mention she was starving, but she suspected that they would hunt her down and kill her if she flaunted her bill before dashing. Not to mention the food was bringing up uncomfortable memories about Titus... "Ummm, maybe I'll eat later, but right now I just kinda want to shower and fall asleep." She rubbed her sunburnt arms and winced. "Also, maybe some Aloe Vera, if that exists out here..."

after stumbling around the city some more. Marita spotted the sign for the Oasis and led the girls inside. Rose dug into her dress and pulled out her creds card ' a room please' she said looking at the clerk ' If you have rooms available." the camel opened the book, ' how many are checking in?'
3 Rose said . the camel swiped her creds car then handed it back to her ' i have a guest who is looking for a room, but has no money. would you mind, letting her stay with you? i cannot afford to eat the cost of a room and meals if she has no money to pay..
well.. rose sighed ' it depends on who that person is.. ' Her name is Flora. outsider, looked really beat up. i'm having the bellhop show her around..'
- Marita started ' Flora? wait.. how did she.. nevermind. we'll let her stay with us once we find her. I'm Marita, Thats Rose and Marie."
sign your names here ' the clerk said, handing marita a pen. Marita put her name in, then handed it to Marie, who signed, then Rose completed the trio. " room 18 will be available in 20 minutes' the clerk said ' just up the stairs to your right.
the rooms should have supplies in the bathroom ' the macaw replied to Flora.

"ohmygodohmygod thank you!!!" Flora rushed into the air-conditioned, carpeted room and collapsed on the only bed. She sighed loudly and contentedly as she sank into the fluffy covers and a small pyramid of sand trickled out of her dress and onto the floor at the base of the bed. She almost fell asleep right away, but the aforementioned sand was giving her rashes in almost every joint.

Spurring herself back to her feet with Herculean effort, Flora staggered into the bathroom and shed her clothes immediately. Running the bath as hot as it went, she sank into the bathtub and sighed as the water pooled around her and coaxed the grit out of her fur.

You're welcome the macaw said before the door was slammed in his face, and he turned to head down the hallway when he saw three female dogs walking towards him. they were silently counting the room numbers. " Excuse me sir" said one of the dog ' we're looking for room 18 , please."
" well its this one. its well occupied. i just had a guest named Flora inside..' Yes.. shes.. staying with us, for the evening " Marita said.' ah.. excellent.' Masad said, unlocking the door with a master key, and letting the girls in.' call downstairs if you need anything. good night ladies ' he said' closing the door behind him, and headed down stairs.
the sound of the bath running was audible, but the girls were more interested in settling in. there was only one bed, but it was a large one, enough for 3 people, or 4 if the squeezed in tight. marie brushed off the sand flora had left on the bed as best she could, the three of them were sandy as well. Rose got a garbage bin and place it on the ground and one by one the girls wiped as much sand and grit off their dresses and out of their fur and into the garbage. between the 3 of them, they filled the bin nearly halfway once they were finished. ' yuck ' Rose said looking at the mess in the bin, ' cant believe all that was on me..'
marita took off her dress, and set it on a chair, ashe triered to lie down on the bed but there was still a lot of sand in her fur.

Flora used the entirety of the little complimentary bottles of shampoo, conditioner, and body lotion. She scrubbed every inch of her body until it was raw, then lathered herself in soap and shuddered in pleasure as the stinging dulled her nerves and let her mind off the sand rashes. She soaked a towel and pressed it against her calloused feet, scrubbing her paw pads until they were swollen with water. Occasionally she'd change the spigot to cold water long enough to take some long deep draughts; it was the greatest water she'd ever tasted.

Almost an hour later she stumbled out of the bath, took one look at the towels and muttered, "fuck that I'm going to sleep." Opening the door and walking into the bedroom, she noticed with abject shock that were three people on her bed and fell over with a spooked "Yeep!!!" hi Flora' rose said from the bed as she heard the door open and saw a nude hot pink folf come out. ' i see you managed to cross our path again..I'm Rose, if you remember. " could you put a robe on please? Marie said ' not that i dont admire the feminine form- you've got a good sized bust, by the way- but usually you cover your goods when coming out of the shower.

- marita looked at Flora. " hey Flora. dont worry, we're not going to kick you out of here. you'll be sharing this room with us for the evening, which includes dinner. don;t worry, we've got enough creds for all 4 of us to get a meal in us.. since right now I'm very hungry- don't know about you" she said. She scrambled to her feet in surprise. "I'm sorry, I just didn't think anyone would be in here!" she stammered, blushing and covering her privates. "Especially not you three!"

rose put her claws to floras shoulders' come on Flora relax..' she said softly, and repeated the request as the babbling folf went on and on about torture chambers , and people getting their heads blown off and terminal velocities and explosions and various other ramblings, and rose finally cut her off by kissing her. Roses dark red lips found Floras dark red lips, and the great dane slipped her tongue into Floras mouth. both marita and marie were surprised by Roses move, they hadnt expected her to kiss Flora, on the other hand, the folf had been rambling on and on and on about all sorts of weird stuff and perhaps talking her mind off of - whatever nioghtmare she had been through was a good move.

"--Ulp!" Flora's ears perked and whatever she was saying died as the Great Dane slipped her tongue into Flora's mouth. Her eyes widened as Rose's tongue scraped against her own, and she felt a warm feeling throughout her abdomen as she finally got to experience a genuine kiss. The sudden tonsil hockey was such a surprise that for some time Flora could only stand stock still and reciprocate.

But as Rose explored her mouth, she grew more bold, and reached to cup Rose's breasts. Flora shuddered as she ran her fingers along Rose's soft skin. Without her hands to hold it up, her towel unraveled itself and fell to the floor.

Marie got up off the bed and headed towards the bathroom, giving Rose and flora a wide berth. ' Since you girls are, um, BUSY, i'll go take a shower. Hopefully there'll still be hot water left in there. I'll leave some hot water for you marita, I promise. Assuming theres any..'
alright' marita said. ' i'll .. look out the window and try and get a glimpse of where we are.. don't worry about the water, a bath is a bath at this point too me, i could care less if it is lukewarm.."

rose felt Flora touch her breasts and she moved her claws down floras side, brushing off dirt and grime floras bath hadnt reached . Floras fur was soft to the touch, and so was her lips. Rose began to massage Floras tongue with hers more forcefully, and moved in to press her body against Floras. tan and pink breasts bounced off each other', and the scent flora was giving iff was becoming more powerful. rose had had many sexual experiences at the electric sheep, and she was starting to get into her routine, firstly subtly rubbing her breasts against her partner - in this case Flora-, the next step would be kissing her partners breasts.

Hands shaking, Flora slid her hands down Rose's dress and dug her fingers into Rose's butt. She pushed her tongue into Rose's mouth, but her legs were shuddering with excitement and she let Rose remain in control of the speed and flow of the foreplay. Her erection, freed from the towel, pressed itself against Rose's stomach, the light brush causing the folf to moan loudly in pent-up anticipation.

Flora's nerves were on fire as Rose let her remove her clothes. She hungrily watched as the Great Dane presented herself to her, the first time somebody met Flora halfway towards consummating. She could hardly believe it, her mind was cooking up a thousand different ways Rose might be about to pleasure her...

Then Marita ground it to a halt. "We're...we're stopping?" She exclaimed. "But I'm...so horny...I feel like I'm about to explode!" Desperately she grasped for Rose's arm as the Great Dane pulled away, but she was too slow and was left alone standing in the middle of the hotel room shaking all over.

Flora felt incredibly pent-up. "I...uh...okay..." As her excitement forced itself to simmer down from the peak of anticipation, her body was racked with a turgid fullness that dropped her to her knees. It was a feeling she was familiar with (after all, her sex life has been an endless series of getting blue-balled at the last minute), but she'd never had it this intensely before. She saw fuzzy shadows in the corner of her vision, and had a brief moment to reflect on how tired she'd been before the events in this hotel room...she realized she was running entirely on rapidly-fading adrenaline right now...

Her vision faded, and before she knew it she collapsed face first into the carpet.

Rose sighed as she bent over to pick up the unconscious folf ' should have let us finish marita the girls been holding back a lot of tension..'' well rose i didnt want to see a hump show- that i didnt pay to see' Marita smirked,' or wasnt involved in.' ' jealous, girlfriend?' Rose said, a smirk running across her face. ' hey, we're not married after all, i can have sex with other girls- and guys if i so choose..' you've had plenty of it Rose, that was your gig after all.' marita said 'you want a piece of this? marita said, holding the unconscious - and naked- Flora up so marita could see all of the folfs features ' wait.. ios that a.. ' yep. she has working breasts AND a pecker. so, conceivably, she could get you pregnant and you would still be a lesbian. course i'm not sure what you call it ' a dolf- or dog -wolf' marita said ' but shes part fox... a fodolf, fox-dog-wolf..' Rose said.'but why are we even discussing potential kids..?'

- because she has a working male part. she can impregnate us, while i cant get you pregnant or vice versa. cause of that we possible rose.. we'd have had 4-5 kids by now..' ' we'tre not in any financial position to have a family Marita, we barely can afford what we;ve got, and we have marie pitching in. 'if Flora stays with us, that 4 girls helping out.' maria replied.' she sighed ' put her n the bed, i'l go see if theres any smellibng salts in the bathroom.

Marie was soaking in the tub, which was discolored from all the sand and grime she was washing off of her ' the bottles of shampoo were empty, so washing her fur and cleaning it out wasnt an option.' theres no shampoo in here' she called out ' So Flora used it all' marita said as she went though the drawers in the counter. 'Is rose still french-kissing her? 'Marie asked "no, i made her stop. it was getting pretty heavy.' rule of thumb at the electric sheep was, you never stop people making out, you let them finish first. To do otherwise was bad form. naughty naughty Marita ' marie said . 'did you ever make out with Rose Marie while you worked together?" no, although we had noticed a mutual attraction between us. i thought she was beautiful, and she admitted to me that she thought i was lovely. we did kiss, though, a couple weeks after we started, after we clocked out for the night, in one of the 'private' rooms. a couple tongue rubs, a few boob squeezes, and that was it. she went downhill really fast and i was switched to bartending. if she hadnt been hooked on biproxytol, i think we would have had sex at least a few times. but her breath was terrible and she owed me quite a bit of money. a quarter of her paycheck, before the place burned down. you rescuing her quite literally saved her life, she was going to get fired if she didnt straighten up. and since had nothing e,lse going on i followed you. You've become quite the friend Marita. I can see why Rose loves you.' Marie said.' so how do you feel about me? marita asked ' well.. I.. love you' Marie admitted."i know you and rose have a history but..' well i think rose is going to be quite busy tonight with flora, so.. theres going to be some you and me time.' marita said as she finally found the smelling salts.

Flora didn't resist as she was placed on the bed. Her passed-out slumber was heavy and dreamless. Her body was a bit slower on the uptake than her mind was, however, and she was still very clearly in the later stages of sexual excitement. Slowly her state graduated from unconscious to semi-conscious, and her mind was filled with lucid dreams of an intensely emotional nature.

Mumbling incoherently in her sleep, she turned her head back and forth and occasionally moved her legs in a running motion, quietly questioning and conversing with unseen entities.

marita came out of the bathroom and came over to the bed . she reached out and reached the smelling salts under Floras nose=- or tried to, as the folf was tossing and turning. ' hold her down Rose, shes half-asleep and moving too much for me to give her the salts..'
_ Ros pinned the folfdown with both paws, her paws sliding up and down her body as the folf turned underneath her ' mariyta finally managed to get a good shot of the vapors under Floras nose.

"Mmmm....mph?" Flora mumbled sleepily. She tried to stretch out, and looked with unfocused eyes at nothing in particular as she slowly returned to consciousness. "I uh..." She realized with alarm that she was being pinned down in a bed by two naked women. "Oh...uh...hi...good morning?" She was still rather discombobulated and wasn't 100% sure she wasn't still dreaming.

"I..." Flora didn't dare herself to speak. Her flytrap was figuring things out quicker than her brain and was quickly rising to the opportunity. "...yes, okay! Let's do that!" She looked with equal parts eagerness and disbelief at the ample supply of female flesh suddenly presented to her. Is this it? she wondered in a daze. Am I FINALLY about to lose my virginity?

marita and rose got up off of flora, allowing her to rise up off the bed. ' marita i'll kiss flora then you start to fondle her. after 5 minutes, we'll switch positions. do whatever you want to her from behind. we'll be exploring a lot of each other..' Rose said " well i promised marie she and i would have some fun time while you and flora made out. ' alright, i see. we'll just have you kiss her then, maybe some foreplay tops. Maries really interested in you then?" shes interested in you as well rose' marita sad as she moved behind Flora.' she told me that personally."

mArita wrapped her arms around Floras waist and pressed her breasts into the small of floras back.

Flora gasped in surprise as she felt Marita's breasts rub along her back. Almost as quickly she barely had time to react when Rose's mouth was against hers again, causing her breasts to rub against Flora's. So many breasts... Flora rubbed her tongue against Rose's, still playing it safe so as not to risk doing anything to cause it to end prematurely. The sensations were indescribable and left her panting with anticipation.

Flora continued snoring loudly from the tangled mess of bedsheets inhabiting the space between the bed and the bathroom wall. Marie, Rose and Marita had been able to get a spare blanket ordered via room service and share the bed for the night.

Rose stirred from bed, and found herself entangled with flora in the sheets. the memory of what they had done l;ast night, the foreplay in tandem, and the exploring of every inch of floras body by her, came back to her in a flash.. Rose had mated with Flora first, or rather Flora had mated with her. rose had sensed that flora was holding in a ton of repressed desire, fortunately finally mating with someone had allowed much of that to ber rekeased. after the first first nervous , unsure of folf and Great dane , Rose had become the partner severeal more times during the night, until finally she had switched to marita. Rose sniffed the air and recignized the smell of cooking food. she looked over at the far end of the bed, Marie was still fast asleep. "Must be Marita cooking them , she said groggily.

When Rose moved, she lightly brushed Flora, and the folf instinctively scooted further away from her and tumbled out of the bed, taking the sheets with her. Her head banged against the wall and she ended in an upside-down pose on the floor that left her neck in a crooked position under the bed. But still her only response was an abrupt snore and some subconscious wiggling to attempt in vain to free her trapped hands from the restraining sheet.

Eventually she finally woke up from the feeling of both arms and a leg having fallen asleep. "Huh?" she muttered, temporarily trying to remember how she got where she was. "How did I...?" She remember the desert, the warship, and lots of painful walking. She had gone through more exertion in the last 24 hours than anything she'd ever experienced in her 17 years of life. Even now, the last night was something of a blur.

Until she remembered that there women involved. "Rose? Marie?" she started, finally succeeding in freeing herself from the sheets and stumbling to her feet. All of her extremities began tingling something fierce. She realized the girls were in the tiny hotel room kitchen. "Hello?" she mumbled, wandering into the kitchen. "What did...how long was I asleep?"

"I'm still exhausted...and starving..." Flora murmured sleepily in response to Rose's first sentence. "The desert really did a number on me yesterday..."

And then Marita continued talking.

Flora's eyes flew open in shock. "Wait, we did--? We had--?"

She racked her brain wildly. "I can hardly remember last night!" she exclaimed. "Everything's a blur past the part where I staggered out of the desert!" She looked in a panic around the room, then at her flytrap, then back at Marita. "I really....we really...What did we do??? I'm...not a virgin any more?"

A mix of every possible emotion flowed through her at once and left her head spinning in shock. She almost fainted. And slowly little tidbits came back to her. Taking a shower...passing out...smelling salts...someone rubbing breasts on her... "I...must have been so tired I...can't remember the sex at all..." Flora realized slowly. "How long did it take? What happened?"

"I...I got...you gave..." Flora's mouth hung agape. "Four hours...?"

She stumbled back to the bed and sat down, grabbing herself by the head try and counteract an intense dizziness that overtook her. "Holy crap..." she breathed. "I lost my virginity for four fucking hours and I can't even remember it?" She felt a little sick to her stomach. "How many times did I cum?" she asked, flopping backwards onto the bed and only then noticing how damp it was.

' don't need a blow by blow recap' Marie said ' i'm trying to eat breakfast here. anyway whats the plan for when we leave this place?'

"Christ..." Flora muttered quietly, staring blankly at the ceiling. She couldn't believe she'd slept through her first sexual encounter, and a threesome no less. "I don't...feel any different," she admitted. "I mean, maybe it would have been different if I'd actually remembered it, but being a not-virgin kinda feels exactly like being a virgin..."

She got up and the blood rushed to her head. "God, I'm starving," she realized. Grabbing a plateful of the breakfast Marita had cooked, she scarfed it down in huge gulps and quickly realized it wasn't going to be enough. "I'm heading down to eat the complimentary breakfast," she announced, grabbing her robe from the floor and cinching it around her. "Thanks for making food, but I'm going to need a lot more than what this hotel room had in the mini-fridge."

Flora rushed to the dining room to make maximum use of the complimentary breakfast. She poured mix into the waffler, put two bagels into the toaster, and started brewing a cup of coffee. The first thing fully prepared was a bowl of shredded wheat, and she consumed it hungrily while waiting for the hot food to finish.

She had just returned her hot items to her table and was dipping her knife in a butter packet when she was approached. "Excuse me, madam," the waiter interrupted her, coming up to her table with an apologetic look. "We recieved a complaint from another table as to how you ate your food."

"You what?" Flora stopped, halfway through buttering her bagel. "Who?"

"The Breakfast Club would like to ask that you use proper manners when eating." The waiter motioned to the table. "They're offended that your fork and knife are not placed to the left of your plate, and your napkin's not in your lap."

Flora blinked and looked around the room. "I'm sorry, where are they? There's nobody else here."

"They're eating in another building. But they're still offended that anybody could dine without the same ettiquette standards that they follow," the waiter explained. "We really must insist. No more spilling drops of milk on the table either."

Flora wiped up the milk, placed her napkin in her lap and straightened her silverware in the correct spots, still confused. "Is, uh, that good? Why are they getting a say in how I eat?"

The waiter bowed his head. "That should suffice for now." He departed, leaving Flora nonplussed and with cold food.

"Okay!" Flora slumped down in her seat. She was already bored of breakfast, with their rules. As the girls continued to eat, Flora caught herself zoning out observing the patterns of the tabletop.

She realized that her foot was on someone else's. Rather than withdraw it, she playfully danced it up their leg, tickling them with her toes and wondering if they'd say anything with the others around. She suppressed a giggle, trying to gauge from their expressions who she was playing footsies with.

A grin spread over Flora's face at the idea. "Okay! Yeah, that lines up with what I was thinking...I think I still consider myself a virgin. After all, if you don't remember your first time, it doesn't really count right?"

She looked at the city. Most of the buildings were unmarked. "Do you think they have a clothing store in this town? I really want to check out the local fashion." She glanced again at her small bathrobe. "Are you sure they won't stone me for showing my ankles or something?"

After twenty minutes of wandering without luck, Flora's feet were starting to burn. She looked around for pedestrians. "Let's just find someone and buy their burka. 6000 dinar? rose said. whats a dinar?' its the local currency, its about 1/1000th of a dollar' Marita said 6000 dinar equals 6 bucks. since there are 10 creds in a dollar. 6000 dinar is about 60 creds. we can easily afford that. Nice find Flora.' the totals for the 4 girls dresses came to 450 creds, with Marita and Maries outfits going for 100 creds each, and Roses costing 190.' the clerk gave the girls bags to hold their dresses, and the girls left the store ' so where do you girls want to go next? marie asked. " back to the hotel?

"I'm hungry again!" announced Flora, leaving the store and flaunting her new outfit to the the first pedestrian she saw. "I don't think the hotel does free lunch, we should go to a restaurant! Maybe Mediterranean," She thought about the concept. "Is it even possible to go to a Mediterranean restaurant when you're in the Mediterranean? What do the locals call it?"

Marie closed the bathroom door behind her as she entered. ' well flora.. girl today is your lucky day' she said in a confident voice as she strode towards the pink vixen, her eyes focused on Flora , gazing at the pink shawl the folf was wearing, which completed every part of the folfs pink body except for the dark red of her lips, which were as crimson as Maries own. maries purple attire moved as she approached Flora. what do you say we have a 'little.. show and tell' first' she said, as she wrapped her claws around flora and ensconced her in a hug.Maries claws slipped under Floras shawl, her left claw stopping at her bra the right moving down her back towards her tail. Marie was almost nose to nose with flora, their lips achingly close together yet far away from a kiss.

Flora was halfway to the toilet when she saw Marie striding towards her non-too-subtly. "Ooh, are we...?" Her eyes widened, and she had barely a glance at her previous objective before Marie's hands were on her. Flora gasped as Marie's cupped her breast and another stroked her butt. Already? "That's...really fast," Flora smiled quickly, placing her hands on Marie's chest and gripping with an excited shudder. I can pee afterwards... She wasn't going to miss her first sexual encounter where both partners were fully conscious.

" And do you want tongue to start off, or not? Two questions to answer i guess. ah.. what the hell lesss talk, more liplock' she leaned in and kissed flora on the lips the red lips locking together as the girls began undressing each other. Marie slipped her tongue into Floras mouth.

Flora trembled with excitement as she slipped Marie's bra. She was already hard even before Marie had slipped her skirt off. "W-Whichever..." she stammered, unable to take her eyes off Marita's crotch. "T-tub would be nice..."

And then Marie's tongue silenced any further words. Running her hands down Marie's flank and grasping her butt, Flora fought to keep her excited panting from interrupting their makeout session.

Maries wrestled with her, each girl for a moment atop the other, the cold floor sending a brief shiver down Maries spine. marie ended up atop Flora, her eyes gazing at the folfs face.

Flora blushed instinctively as her remaining clothes were removed. Quickly she pulled Marie's pants until they slid to the ground and the two were fully exposed to each other.

But Flora didn't have long to ogle before Marie was on top of her, locking lips and leaving her nether region's very close to Flora's...

Then they switched places and Flora found herself straddling the Golden Retriever. Shimmying forward, Flora dug her palms into Marie's breasts and shoved her erection between them. Her every fiber yearned to start thrusting, but she wanted to give Marie a chance to look at her womanhood.

"You'll be gentle...right?" she flushed bright red.

"I, uhh, I mean," Flora stammered, trying to figure out how to politely note that female-wise she had secondary sexual organs at best, but her explanation died in her throat as Marie's smooth breasts slid back and forth across her erection. Any intelligible words turned into a high-pitched moan and she peaked her back, closing her eyes and focusing on the sensation of Marie's gentle caress. As the dog's tongue scraped across Flora's nipples, the folf shuddered and dug her claws into the bathroom carpet.

Flora panted heavily, her nerves overstimulated, her muscles felt coiled and ready to spring. Marie's hands, tongue, and breasts were all rubbing Flora at once, and Flora felt extremely hot...

She felt a flash of deep dread when she felt contractions bubbling up from within her abdomen. Not already! With a strained cry, Flora arched her back and gritted her teeth as she rode out an intense orgasm, splashing all over Marie's front.

The intense feelings seemed to last forever, her entire lower body tensed up as wave after wave of pleasure stripped the energy from her. "I'm...sorry..." she panted, dropping to her knees and looking with alarm at the mess she'd caused. "It was just so...intense...I...couldn't control myself..."

breasts, mannerisms, fur color, all the features of a girl-minus the malehood. from my experience, theres a spectrum of what we in the business called 'co-sexes' or bi-sexs. people that have both gender parts. many of them tend to chose their feminine side, and act on that. you are acting on your female side,so despite your male rod. you are a female. thus this sexual encounter between us is counted as homosexual not heterosexual. Flora returned the kiss, simultaneously panting with embarrassingly high-pitched gulps. Her nipples pressed into Marie's breasts and her eyes were squeezed shut as she focused on the feeling of ramming Marie's pussy again and again.

It felt awesome, but Flora was secretly worried that she wasn't going to be able to finish. Her backside was distractingly cold from being outside the shower stream and her legs were feeling like jelly from supporting her weight while keeping her balance. Think sexy thoughts... she tried to will herself to orgasm. *Think of pornos...big, muscled naked men...imagine we're fucking in a big, sleek, powerful car...*She glanced at Marie's face, lips still locked with hers. For a moment, her mind tried to imagine Marie was Emilena, but that made things more awkward than sexy.

Pretty soon her panting slowly edged away from husky and more into exhausted. She kept slipping out on accident. "It feels...really good," she moaned truthfully, gulping desperately for air and pausing momentarily to splash hot water on her butt. She gave her lover's breasts one last squeeze and quickly stepped into the stream for one last drench of hot water. Shaking herself off like a dog, she grabbed towels and handed one to Marie.

Drying off quickly, she winced as the fabric scraped against her chafed privates, but the rawness wasn't enough to dampen her excitement at trying something new.

Walking into the other room, she blushed as she realized she was flashing Marita and Rose. "Hey girls," Flora smiled shyly. "We're, uhh, taking the fun to the bed, if you two are okay with that." I guess it's nothing they haven't already seen...

Flora had taken the time Rose and Marita were using her as a prop to recover from her orgasm, and was capable of hoisting herself to a seating position.

"How long's it gonna take you girls to pack?" she asked. "I've got literally no luggage, Imma just chill here on the bed and watch TV till it's time to go."

After roughly fifteen minutes, she was languidly surfing through dozens of Arabic-speaking stations in a fuguelike trance, tongue lolling flaccidly down her jaw as genres and actors and graphics sped by all punctuated in a rapidfire tongue she couldn't understand.

So when an English-dubbed commercial came on, she immediately stopped flipping channels despite it appearing to be a generic pharmaceutical infomercial.

Genetics is the backbone of our humanity, it began, showing a 3D representation of the double helix. Our society flourishes and our species controls the world solely due to our genes. At Sartonic Labs we are dedicated to the preservation and study of humanity's finest blueprints.

Shots of photogenic scientists working with complicated and microscopic machinery. We've accepted genetic material from the finest human specimens across the world, and have spent billions of dollars unlocking the theoretical limits of the human body, and making those limits a reality.

"Woah..." muttered Flora, watching the biopic with glazed-over eyes. "They pay people thousands for their genetic material...hey, you think they'd want mine? I mean, my body's absolutely amazing! Perfect in every way." She didn't feel like mentioning it was due to her having the psionic power to gradually adjust her phenotype; she didn't want her new friends with benefits to turn on her like everyone else did when they learned she was a freak.

Flora panted loudly, staggering into the new city. But her mouth opened even wider when she glanced in awe at the sprawling metropolis in front of her.

This city was far more industrial than the previous, and Flora felt a tremor of nervousness even thinking of trying to barter out a room...after all, she didn't even speak Arabic, and she couldn't count on getting another impossibly nice hotel clerk like last time.

"So, like, for the time being we're probably gonna sleep in this alleyway," she finally admitted to Rose, Marita, and Marie after a few fruitless hours of trying to ascertain what the hell various signs were trying to say. "It's not claimed by any of the gangs, at least none that I've seen. And you can flip the dumpster top over and shield yourself from the rain, in case there's any of that."

She fished a metal pipe out of the dumpster and used it to fish through the contents, looking for anything interesting. "Any idea what direction Sartonic is?" she asked the others. "The sooner I can donate genetic material, the sooner we can have enough money to afford a hotel room."

Flora walked over to the map. She could see the city and many different routes, spindly roads and alleyways with Arabic writing everywhere. She was only able to recognize Sartonic Labs due to the recognizable insignia under their name; a circular eye with a horizontal line through the middle.

Grabbing a piece of paper out of the hotel printer, Flora sketched the route as well as she could. "I'm going to head there now; can't waste time when we'll be broke if tomorrow rolls around and we want to buy another night," she told Marita. "Can I have some money to buy food on the way?"

"Okay!" Flora led the way down the street, skipping merrily.

After a few hours of being hopelessly lost, she somehow managed to wind up at the Sartonic Labs. It was a towering building with white marble walls and a scarcity of windows.

"Hiya!" she beamed at the receptionist.

The receptionist looked at her with and air of condescension. "Can I help you?"

"Umm yeah, my name is Flora, and uh...I saw your advertisement on TV." The folf shifted her feet uncomfortably. "I was thinking of trying to qualify as a donor."

The receptionist tossed her a datapad dismissively. "Fill this out and you'll hear back from us within one month."

"A month? But--!" Flora's protest died in her throat when the receptionist, who was wearing a nametag saying 'PILAR', shot her a glance of pure ice. Resigning herself to the possibility of future income, Flora began filling out her personal information. Until she hit a snag. "Ma'am? My species isn't listed in the dropbar."

Pilar cocked her glasses. "What? What's your species?"

"I'm a folf," Flora smiled weakly under Pilar's unfriendly gaze.

Pilar narrowed her eyes. "Folf don't exist."

"Not normally, no..." Flora answered, "but neither does pink fur or...uh...other weird things about me."

Pilar took the datapad back. "Are you genetically modified? How old are you? And why..." she suddenly frowned, "Why did you mark 'sperm sample'?"

"Heheh, that's...uh...the other thing..." Flora blushed.

Pilar masked a look of alarm and sat up. She looked over Flora, silent for several seconds. "I, uh...need to go in the back for a moment."

Flora looked at Marita with bemusement as Pilar left them in the waiting room. "What was that all about?" she asked the Great Dane.

Flora's eyes brightened up. "Sure, that sounds love--" she abruptly cut off when the receptionist burst back out of the door.

"Miss Flora, you've been fast-tracked to the front of the line! If you come with me please." Without another word, the woman grabbed Flora and led her into the inner recesses of Sartonic Labs.

The receptionist led Flora down a pristine white hallway filled with tinted windows. She finally opened one of the labs, where a tall raccoon in a business suit motioned to a seat in front of the center table. "Hello, I'm Dr. Van Der Merwe. Please, sit down," he ordered congenially.

Flora acquiesced, staring around the room in awe. The walls were dotted with storage lockers, gestation chambers, and various gleaming chrome machines.

Van Der Merwe tried to refocus her attention on him. "Are you comfortable? Could we get you anything to drink?"

Flora nodded eagerly. "Ooh yes, please! Do you have juice? I'm parched from all the walking!"

The receptionist nodded and left the room, and Van Der Merwe discussed the task at hand. "Miss Flora, you did an admirable job filling out our questionnaire, but you must understand we still have some questions about your unusual appearance. The scanners reported no indication of gene therapy or augmentations in your body."

"You scanned me?" gasped Flora. "Where? When?"

"As soon as you walked through our door." Behind Van Der Merwe the receptionist briefly returned, handing Flora a chilled can of cranberry juice.

So Flora told the doctor everything he wanted to know. Starting with her early life as a male gray wolf, to the time in boarding school that she started developing the mental ability to alter her appearance, to redesigning herself as a pink-furred female and fleeing her old life out of fear of prejudice.

"Very fascinating..." breathed Van Der Merwe, jotting notes down on his clipboard the whole time she spoke. "Untrained psionic manifestation...that's a rare occurrence, especially for a non-gecko."

Flora gave an awkward smile. "So...do I qualify to donate sperm?"

"Even better." Van Der Merwe handed her a map of the facility. "We'd love the chance to be able to analyze you on a more permanent basis. We have private apartments in our staff quarters and we're prepared to offer you a rent-free room. Food, utilities, and various recreations are included." For the last one, he pointed out a gym, pool, and indoor garden on the map. "In return, you'll agree to a series of tests we'd schedule at regular intervals, focusing on various aspects of your mental, physical, and genetic state."

Flora looked over the paper, mouth hanging open and thoughts swirling through her head.

"I understand if you need some time to think about it--" Van Der Merwe started, but Flora immediately interrupted him with "Where do I sign???"

"Hey girls!" Flora exclaimed excitedly, bursting into the waiting room. "Guess where we're sleeping tonight?" She excitedly showed them the map of the facility. "Sartonic says we can live with them while running a bunch of tests on me!"

"I get a weekly allowance of 500 credits", replied Flora. "Not much, but considering it comes with free food and water and electricity, I can spend it however I want. Or save it up for the future. Credits are worth a lot more out here."

The receptionist handed Flora 500 credits. "Here's an advance for this month," she said. "Your room will be ready by this evening. For now, would you and your family be interested in dining at our food court? Tonight's special is Vietnamese."

"I told them you were my family so you get to live in my apartment with me," Flora whispered under her breath as the receptionist pointed them in the direction of the food court.

"All sorts, apparently," Flora replied as they reached the elevator, a glass-covered gilded pad that hummed powerfully as it rose up the stories. "Running, reflexes...more sciencey stuff like blood samples, IQ tests...they really want to know everything about my..." Flora trailed off.

She'd never admitted her psionic powers to the girls. "...about what makes me look the way I do. But they promised that none of the tests are harmful. They aren't gonna cut my brain up or anything."

Following the map, they reached their new apartment on the fourth floor near the futuristic ice machine. Everything was equal parts elegant and practical; the floors were padded with waterproof luxury carpet and the furniture looked easy to clean but was composed of high-quality plastics. A curtained transparent aluminum window showed a breath-taking view of the bustling city below.

The apartment came with a tiny kitchenette, two bedrooms, and a living room with a plushy couch that Flora immediately collapsed on after shedding her outer clothes. "Ummmm..." her tongue lolled happily and her chest rose up and down, covered only in her bra. "Maybe we should just order room service tonight...I think I'm too comfy to go to dinner right now..."

marita took off her shirt tossing it aside ' hmm. room service .. can wait she said as she climbed onto the couch next to Flora..' Because' she grinned. " you and i are going to be a bit busy' maritas dark red lips parted in a smile and she looked at Floras dark red lips' playing tonmsil hockey. she suddenly leaned in and kissed Flora on the lips, feeling the folfs soft lips locked with hers. Maritas breasts bounced against Flora and the girls began settling into the kiss.

Flora's eyes went wide as Marita and climbed on top of her. "Oh!" She returned the kiss happily, reaching over and unclasping Marita's bra so her breasts could hang free. Fondling her excitedly, Flora passionately stuck her tongue into her lover's mouth. "Mmmm..." Within seconds, her underwear wasn't doing a very good job of hiding her excitement.

marita reacted to Flora taking off her bra by reaching under the flof and unhooking her bra in return. she began to masages Floras tongue with her own vigorously, moaning softly as she did it. with her left hand she tossed Flora bra and with her right began to caress Floras right breast. she moved her body slighly so she was directly over Flora feeling the folf's panties slide against her thigh as she diod so. Marita kissed Flora passionately with her mouth open, nibbling slightly on Floras lips as the kiss became more passionate.

VERY willingly' Marita smirked as she took off Floras soaked panties, revealing the folfs erect penis.' well well someone is very excited. But first.. Flora returned the kiss, chest heaving with sensitivity at the amount of attention Marita was giving it. "Mmm, keep talking dirty to me..." she purred, grasping Marita's buttocks and pressing her whole body against hers. After so many years of never being close to anyone, this was more than she ever could have dreamed for...

"I have to...oh!" Flora was currently too turned on to devote much brainpower to the prospect of anything after the imminent blowjob, but she still marveled at the prospect of getting to reciprocate. She'd always been extremely open to providing sexual favors, even if life had always found a way for nothing to ever come to fruition, but she couldn't help but worry that she'd do a bad job due to lack of experience. "Okay!" she exclaimed excitedly. "I can't wait!"

Flora let out a low moan, arching her back and tensing her muscles. The feeling was incredible, and as the friction continued rhythmically she felt herself get more and more excited. Flora felt the older woman tense up with each lap. She stretched her tongue as far as it went and noticed with surprise that it was angled a lot more downward than she'd always expected. How have all those pornos prepared me so little for this?

After some time, she switched to a figure eight pattern, and decided to start exploring. Trailing her tongue up Marita's abdomen, Flora rubbed her fingers along the stomach before finding her way to Marita's breasts. She felt an excited thrill when she brushed the dog's nipples with her lips, giving them her mouth's full attention.

She was so preoccupied massaging Marita's breasts that it was several minutes before she realized with a flash of shock that her flytrap was pressed tenderly between Marita's legs...

marita tensed as Flora entered her then she leaned forward to grab flora by the face and pull her into a steamy liplock. marita forced her tongued deep into floras mouth and held the kiss as they settled into the lovemaking ' inwardly she was thining flora was doing pretty good for her first time ever doing this. a prono, this was not. then again marta never watched those anyway.

Flora gasped, eyes widening as her brain caught up to what her body had already figured out. She barely registered as Marita's lips connected with hers, so focused was she on what was happening downstairs. "Mmmph!" she yelped in surprise, faltering for only a single thrust before plowing ahead. Her eyes drew themselves to Marita's bouncing breasts.

It didn't take long at all. "Marita...!" she tried to pant, but Marita's tongue in her mouth rendered her words unintelligble. I'm already about to blow! she thought in a panic, How do I stop??? With little to no chance of stopping herself, she hoped Marita was okay with how little time had passed before the folf stiffened up and groaned passionately as her climax coursed through her in a wave of pleasure.

Marita moved under Flora so the folf was fully inside her, and it wasnt long before she felt a warm rush as the inexperieced girl peaked. marita broke the kiss briefly 'don't be upset. this is a learning exoerience. we have all night for me to teach you ' she said locking lips with Flora again and climing on top of her, moaning slightly as she did so.

I've told you everything..." Except about Flora's psionics, and already she was wondering how she was going to keep that a secret forever. After all, they were currently living in a facility that wants to test her precisely because of said psionic abilities, it wasn't hard to imagine that circumstance could reveal her darkest secret to those she loved most. "Before I met Emilena in Corona, I lived by breaking into cars and driving them to new towns until the gas ran out. I'd usually buy fast food with money from the glove compartment and I'd shower at truck stops. I'm lucky I never got arrested..."

everything. my dear flora. if you are going to be in a relationship with me. you have to tell me about what happened prior. also you;re going to have to identity as fully lesbian, becauses thats what i am. now a personal question. you have the organs of a male in addition to those pf a female, i, of course have fe,ale parts. thus the possibility is there for us to have children. i ask you, my beautiful folf... do you want to have kids? of course i'd be the one to have to birth them..but' marota smiled ' i wouldnt mind that at all.

"Fully lesbian?" Flora mulled over. "I always was kinda bisexual though..."

And then her eyes went wide when Marita asked the next part. "Kids???" Her flytrap, which had been inching its way back into the warm embrace of Marita's thighs, retreated into its sheath at record speed. "H-have children? Wow, that's--I--really--sudden for a second date, you know?" she stammered. "I--having babies...uh, could I even have kids? My biology's so messed up, I'm not even sure if I'm fertile." At only seventeen, Flora had always been too concerned with getting laid to ponder on the biological ramifications of being successful. "I think I'd ask to have the doctors here whether that's even possible!" she blurted. "Before we plan anything. So, um, question I probably should have asked earlier..." she grinned nervously, "Are you three...on any birth control?"

girls cant get other girls pregnant. we lack the plumbing for that. so no we're not on birth control, because since we bang each other, theres no risk of pregnancy. we do have protection against STDs though. we're all clean of that. i trust you are clean as well? marita said.

"Oh yeah, I'm clean," Flora assured her, still hung up a little about Marita's chosen rationale for not needing birth control. "I was a virgin, you know. Not a lot of opportunities to pick things up, unfortunately." She stretched her arms and shifted her position so Marita was spooning her backside instead of her crotch. "Say, are you hungry?" she asked digressively, "Cause I'm super starving after that workout."

With her attention finally off Marita for a moment, she became aware of the ample fluid stains causing the couch cushions to cling to their fur. "Oh man, we made a serious mess of this upholstery..." She bit her lip as she observed the damage. "Hopefully they do daily cleanings...and don't bill us..."

"Okay!" smiled Flora, skipping towards the bathroom. Her heart was pounding in her chest and unable to shake a feeling of foreboding ever since the end of the conversation. She'd needed a break from the lovemaking just to digest this new direction their relationship had taken.

She had been extremely startled by the kids question; the possibility had literally never entered her mind. She practically still considered herself a kid, having lived only 17 years and without ever holding a job or having any sort of responsibility. Was she ready to have kids? Could she even take care of kids considering her financial situation? And whether her mental answer was yes or no, the fact remains that she just blew a load right in the babymaker, and Marita is showing no indication of not wanting the baby if nature takes its course...

She became aware that she was in the kitchen, having taken a wrong turn due to not knowing the layout of this sizable apartment. "Oh, uh, hi gals!" she beamed, face flushing red as she realized she wasn't exactly presentable at the moment. But while she was here... "Hey, do you mind if I ask you both a question?" She lowered her voice so it didn't carry into the living room. "Where do you two stand exactly on the topic of...having children?"

well if you want to have kids, with one of us.. well you'll need to earn an income. kids arent cheap.. at all. try many hundreds of thousands of creds, if not into the millions." Rose said. but i'd be fine with having kids with you ' rose said.

Flora sat down and took a sandwich. "You all keep saying I have male and female parts, but I don't have a vagina," she reminded. "I was born male and have never had any surgeries, so my body hasn't changed in THAT way."

She bit into her sandwich. It was delicious but she couldn't place the meat. "I'm only asking because Marita mentioned she wanted kids with me." She looked Marie and Rose in the eyes. "Is it true none of you are on birth control? Is that safe? I'm glad you all see me as a girl, but my manhood IS fully-functioning."

"I mean...my breasts might be fully functioning..." Flora blushed. "I don't actually know, never having had kids to...well you know..."

She shifted uncomfortably. "But on the topic of unwanted pregnancies, my, uh, male part is kinda the more pressing concern. If we're going to keep having sex, are you girls planning on taking any birth control?" She glanced out the door at the living room. "And...is Marita?"

There was a light knock on the front door, too quiet for the girls in the kitchen to hear.

"Hello!" smiled a skirted receptionist clerk when the door opened. She was different from the one they'd met in the lobby. She handed Marita an unmarked envelope. "This is Miss Flora's testing schedule for tomorrow. Dr. Ven Der Merwe insists that she must be punctual in reaching the indicated stations, but tell her not to be shy asking for directions if needed!"

will do ' marita said taking the envelope. she had only opened the dood enough so the clrk could see her face and so she could grab the envelope. " i'll see to it she gets there on time. have a goof evening.' she shut the door bhind the clerk as she left.

naturally we will use birth control, to avoid unwante pregnancy. Marita as well. the only time we would stop is if we were trying to have a baby.' Rose said.' so starting now, we will start going on borh control. of course that doesnt eliminate entirely the possibility of pregnancy.

"That's true, but you could always get an abortion worst case scenario," shrugged Flora. She helped herself to a second sandwich. She looked behind her as she saw Marita coming for the kitchen. I wonder if they even sell morning-after pills in this country...

"Hi Marita! Come grab something to eat!" she smiled.

Abortions? are you nuts?' Marie exclaimed " No, if one of us gets pregnant by you, we're KEEPING it!
_ Abnortions are out Flora' rose said shaking her head." so put that put of your head. If I get pregnant, I'm keeping the baby.

"Okay, no abortions!" Flora agreed, alarmed at the degree of protest the suggestion elicited. Grateful for the chance to change the subject, she quickly took the envelope and opened it. "Hmm, tomorrow begins with a 'circulatory and muscular systems baseline assessment' at..." the hairs on the back of her neck prickled, "...9am...crap what time is it?"

The kitchen clock noted that 9 am was in seven hours. "Yikes, they aren't fooling around," she muttered, exiting for the shower without further ado. "I need to get to bed or I'm going to be exhausted for my first day of tests..."

Ten minutes later, Flora returned from the shower with her hair in a towel and her fur looking frizzy.

"So I just noticed," she grinned coyly, "that there's only two beds. We're gonna have to double up, who wants to be my cuddle buddy for the night?"

Flora's eyes lit up. "Sounds good to me!" She couldn't help but stare at Rose's curves, imagining what it must feel like to press her face into those breasts while warm under the covers. Flora had always fantasized of large-breasted women, and of the three girls Rose was the most well endowed.

"So long as you're okay with me being naked too," she said over her shoulder with a smile, exiting for the bedroom. "I'll be in bed getting comfy..."

Girl, i'm used to seeing girls naked. comes from being a former stripper. you see lots of tits and packages, and more than a few times those are on the same customer. you're not the first girl packing both guns, as we say in the business, that i've seen. those girls tipped well too, because they liked having a fling wth someone who wasnt flipping at at their member. if i hadnt been badly hooked on biproxytol at the time. i likely still would be doing that. biproxytol is not a drug you want to get addicted to, lets just say that ; Rose said getting into bed with Flora.

"Mmm, you lucky girl..." purred Flora, snuggling closer to Rose under the covers. She pressed as much of her body as she could into Rose's soft curves. "I wish I'd had that many lovers...of all shapes and sizes..."

She wasn't particularly interested in being subtle; already her hands were getting very grabby and her body was shuddering with excitement. "Do you ever miss getting to be so sexually active with so many people?" she asked. "A new person every night...sometimes multiple...?" Flora's hands bushed Rose's ample chest. "All the partners you could ever want..."

we had to have protection, of course ' rose said stroking floras butt and tail. didnt want any stds or pregnancies on the clock. we didnt have insurance for that sort of thing. sand truhfully i was drugged up most of the time. its not a job you can do for 40 years, once you get past 35, they dump you for younger models..' rose reached over and pulled out a condom and worked it onto floras member ' don;'t want to run any risks from our flng, now do we' she smirked.

Flora's eyes lit up as Rose brought up protection before she had to. "No, we don't," she agreed, climbing on top of Rose and pressing their lips together. For some reason, she felt way more comfortable taking charge with Rose. Maybe it was the older woman's level of experience; after having so many lovers, Flora knew there was little she could do wrong that Rose wouldn't have seen before.

Her pawpads pressed into Rose's breasts and her whole body relished the feel of Rose's skin. She trembled at delight from the feel of Rose's hand on her butt. "I think you'll be beautiful even after 35," she panted, taking only a breath's break from the kiss. "You're gorgeous..."

When Rose didn't resist, Flora slid her member in between her legs, groaning softly. For some reason Rose was a lot warmer than Marita was, and the soft bed and fluffy blankets only made the experience better.

Flora was also able to last a lot longer. Smiling unashamedly, Flora pressed herself against Rose and thrust away. She was too sleepy to really register the passage of time, but somehow that added to the dreamlike quality of their lovemaking.

rose kissed flora passionately as they made love, drawing moans from the folf as roses dark red lips locked with floras dark red lips continouosly. rose suddenly flipped flora onto her back and climbed on top.. rose softly ran her claws along floras back then moving to her front.

Flora panted heavily as Rose took things to the next level, increasing the pace and speeding up their thrusting rhythm. Flopping obediently over as Rose took control, the folf stretched her arms and let her tongue languidly loll out of her mouth limply as she felt Rose's hands play along her body. The blankets clung to her sweat-slicked fur and the friction was sending her nerves into overdrive.

Suddenly she felt it building up within her, the tightly-coiled sensations of release bubbling up through her abdomen and sending all of her muscles contracting. Unlike with Marie and Marita, Flora ignored it and merely continued enjoying the sex. She neither tried to achieve the coming orgasm nor delay it, and to her immense satisfaction this caused the buildup phase to prolong itself, simmering just under the surface until Rose's thrusts drew it out of her. With one final moan Flora had the longest climax of her life.

"Ohhhhh man..." Flora locked her knees instinctively when it was over. "Don't tell the others..." she muttered weakly, "but you were far and away the best..."

well ' rose smiled ' i've been doing this sort of thing for years..you're good, for someone who hasnt had much sex. very soft kissable lips- the redder the lips the more kissable they are- good sized tits, and you've got a decent sized pecker. not the biggest one i've had in me, but a nice size. now, for a cool down period. i'm going to kiss you in the lips, and hold it for awhile. you wanna french m,e. thats fine, whatever cools you down afterwards. now.. here we go. ' rose reached out, grabbed floras face and pulled her face close to her and kissed her fully and firmly on the lips.. for now.. Rose kept her nmouth closed as the liplock started. she would open it only i response to Flora.

Flora happily returned the kiss. She enjoyed the cooldown period greatly, letting her heart rate return to normal and just enjoy the sensation of her body pressed against Rose's. She didn't stick her tongue in Rose's mouth, simply because it seemed too much work for such a relaxing afterglow.

"Your breasts are the largest I've ever gotten to touch..." she whispered excitedly, running her fingers along Rose's cleavage to prove her point. She hadn't even pulled out yet; even her flytrap was relaxed and enjoying the warmth.

i've touched bigger breasts than mine' Rose saod softly kissing Flora again on the lips. yhe was a slight gush as their bodies untangled, and rose gently slid her tongue into Floras mouth and lovingly massaged the folfs tongue with her own. Rose had enjoyed the lovemaking, she thought flora, woth more seasoning would make a fine lover for her. Rose enjoyed romps with marita- for obvious reasons- and Marie- but Flora offered many new possibilities.

"Lucky..." murmured Flora sleepily. With Rose on top and taking more control, Flora was finding her brain less and less conscious. Without even noticing, her eyes were closing, her muscles were relaxing and the sensations of being pressed against Rose were slipping away to the similar contented feelings of a relaxed dreamscape.

Flora didn't remember dozing off, but her next conscious thought was the apartment phone ringing in a polite but shrill jingle. Groggily crawling over Rose, Flora awkwardly grabbed the receiver and mumbled a confused hello.

"Good morning, Miss Flora." The warm but authoritative voice of Dr. Van Der Merwe filtered through. "I apologize for disturbing your sleep, but it's 9:30. They're waiting for you in the circulation lab..."

Flora's eyes flew open. "Oh god, I'm so sorry!" she stammered. "I'm on my way over RIGHT NOW!"

"Well, don't hurt yourself in your rush," the doctor advised, but Flora had already leaped out of bed. Looking around the room wildly, she located her clothes in the living room and hesitated before putting them on. They were dusty, stained, and had been purchased for five dollars from a pawn shop. She'd literally make a better impression in a Sartonic bathrobe until she could buy new clothes.

Seconds later she dashed into the hall wielding the instruction pamphlet and clad in a fluffy white robe adorned with the Sartonic logo on the breast.

Several minutes later, she reached the circulation lab and, huffing and puffing, dragged herself through the door.

GOOD MORNING , greeted a robotic voice; Flora couldn't tell if it was automated or just heavily filtered. PLEASE REMOVE YOUR CLOTHING AND ATTACH THE NODES ACCORDING TO THE DIAGRAM .

It was referring to two printouts of a genderless human's front and backside. A number of circular sticky nodes were sitting on a small table beside a large treadmill, and Flora did her best to place them on her body to match the image.

VERY GOOD. NOW, PLEASE RUN ON THE TREADMILL, STANDING UP STRAIGHT AND ASSUMING A STEADY, MANAGEABLE PACE.

Flora was not in the mood to do more running, so her steady and manageable pace was pretty pathetic, but nevertheless after fifteen minutes the voice seemed pleased. It ran her through several other basic exercises, from push-ups to jumping jacks to cherry pickers. Then a television turned on and a smiling female trainer demonstrated different yoga poses for her to hold.

THANK YOU VERY MUCH , the voice finally affirmed, as Flora left downward dog for the last time and dragged her sweaty self off the mat. THE CIRCULATION BASELINE TESTS ARE COMPLETE. SHOWERS ARE AVAILABLE TO THE LEFT, PAST THE BATHROOMS. WHEN YOU ARE READY, PLEASE PROCEED TO LAB 31 FOR YOUR HORMONAL EXAM.

The shower was public, but luckily it was empty when Flora took hers. She wondered what sort of folk she'd see if she were ever to walk in when someone was using it. She showered the bare minimum and left for Lab 31 as soon as possible; after starting off late she didn't want to keep whatever staff member was handling her physical waiting.

But even though she was prepared for anything, it was nothing short of abject shock that crossed her face when she walked in and saw who was waiting for her. "Kojurro???" she gasped, observing him in a Sartonic labcoat and a nametag. "What are...how did you get here?"

Kojurro smiled at her ' Flora! what a surprise! its a lonmg story. these guys found me lying in an alley, and treated me while running tests on my body. turns out i have some weird disorder that stops the bleeding of cuts 5 times faster than a normal person. Odd that. so what bring you to Sartonic?' he smiled patting the open seat next to him.

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on February 23, 2016, 03:33:43 PM

Flora swallowed her surprise, not wanting to look flustered in front of someone she'd known from before. "My story's pretty long too...Kalis captured us, and tortured me in his warship, but Lily saved me. Marita, Rose and Marie found me in the desert, and the four of us have been trying to get by ever since. Sartonic is interested in my psionic powers," she admitted. "See...I never told you guys this, but...I've always had the ability to alter my appearance as it grows in. It's why my fur is such a weird color. "

She looked at his outfit. "Did they hire you? Cause they're treating me like a lab rat. Not that I'm complaining, of course; they've been super hospitable, some testing is a small price to pay. Speaking of which, how are we going to do this..." she read her printout of today's tests "reproductive system analysis anyway?"

Flora sat down in the proffered bench nervously. "18? That's...almost my age..." She looked around the room nervously, wondering if she needed to hold a catching container or something. I think I'll just leave everything to them... she finally decided before opening her mouth and possibly saying something dumb. They're employees, they must be prepared to handle everything.

She couldn't help but wonder about Emma. As an eighteen-year old, she'll be the first time Flora had ever kissed someone also in the teens. For some reason this made Flora all the more nervous that she might embarrass herself, not the least reason of which being that she'd never met Emma before. It was going to be a rather intimate interaction for Flora's first impression...

I'd love to talk!" She held out a shaking hand. "Hi, I'm Flora!" She already knows your name is Flora... her inner voice groaned. "Though you already knew that, didn't you?" she tried to recover, sweat pooling on her forehead and a toothy smile plastered on her face.

kojurro headed out the door and closed it behind him.

I've.. never kissed anyone, so i don;t know where i am on the spectrum sexually . i wont tell my parents the details, thats really my business.' emma said.
A Nurse was showing marita marie and rose atround campus, each of the girls was holding a large brochure compl;ete with map ' we've been testing special clients here for more than 10 years..' the nure said ' marie was starting to tune her out , she sounded like a tour guide.

"Wow, you're going to college?" breathed Flora. "That's so cool...I've always heard awesome things about college...drinking and partying all night." She couldn't draw her gaze away from Emma's face, especially her bright green eyes. "I, uh...never graduated any school myself...always been kind of off the grid."

Emma probably didn't need to know about the drug dealing, car stealing, or the laundry list of other crimes she committed while with Emilena's gang. Flora decided to switch gears and focus on her powers instead of her backstory. "I can change my appearance however I want just by thinking about it." She realized Emma would be expecting a demonstration. "It doesn't happen instantly, the new stuff has to grow in. That was how I became a girl though..."

Flora blushed. "Never kissed anyone, huh? Well, I hope you aren't expecting tips from me. I'm not super experienced myself, always been kinda unlucky..."

"A clothes model? That's awesome!" Flora smiled. "Um, I used to do nude modeling for Corona U on the side. It was a nice supplementary income. It was probably the closest I've ever been to being in school too, come to think of it."

Her head was spinning. Was Emma...asking me out? It sounded like she just asked me out. "Yeah, I'd love to hang out and go places!" she exclaimed. "And kiss! As normal people do! Wait, would people around here be okay with that?" she suddenly amended. "Never heard great things about Arabia's acceptance on homosexuality."

How was the pay? thats not something I'd.. um consider doing.. my girls are reserved for someone special, not just for anyone to ooogle or touch..' she said covering her chest with her arms.. "No nobody asked me out while I was modeling, they were all older than me. College kids you know..." Flora replied. "I just took my clothes off and stood really still and they drew me, sometimes painted. They weren't supposed to interact or talk with me cause it might distract me from staying perfectly still."

She checked her schedule. "I've got some more tests later tonight, but after this one I have the rest of the afternoon off! We should totally do something after!" she smiled.

"You're not normal, you're drop dead gorgeous!" Flora blurted out, then immediately turned an even darker shade of fuscia. "Er....um, I mean, to answer your question, it started when I was in an all-male boarding school. I was a grey wolf at the time, but I'd always wanted to be a vixen... then my body started responding to my inner desires and I slowly developed curves and lighter fur..." Flora bit her lip remembering the fear that had eclipsed that time. "It was terrifying. I got so scared that people would judge me, or hurt me...so I just...ran away," she remembered. "Really far away. I never saw anyone from my old life again." She forced out a casual chuckle to pretend she'd fully recovered from the old history. "Puberty's a bitch, huh?"

She listened as Emma spoke about her mother. "So you've really never kissed anybody?" Flora asked. "I mean, no offense but you're a bombshell. Guys must have been crawling all over you."

"I tried!" confessed Flora. "Right at the beginning, I fought my transformations as hard as I could!" She sighed. "But I had no control, so they kept operating off of my secret desires, ignoring how inappropriate their timing was. Nowadays I can control it a lot more, but there still needs to be an element of desire. And I don't ever want to look like my old self again." She smiled. "I like new me."

She continued on the subject of Emma. "So, you weren't a loner by choice? You're a sight for sore eyes now, how have you restrained yourself the last three months? Is that why you've grabbed such an...intimate...sort of job? It's just weird that a nurse who kisses people for sperm donations has never been kissed."

Flora paled when Kojurro appeared and Emma asked her to put her robe back on. "O-okay!" she stammered, face paling with embarrassment. She scrambled to dress herself and almost dropped the robe in her haste. "Sorry, sorry!" she squealed with embarrassment to the vixen. After so much time with Rose, Marie, and Marita, she'd forgotten that normal people were less okay with nudity. "Um, er, I...will just let you say when things begin from now on..." she apologized in a small voice, filled with shame.

"That's okay...I shouldn't have done that..." Flora blushed, still beet-red and unable to meet Emma's eye. "I've never really been with 'normal' people, I'm pretty uncultured. Living off the grid you know...don't know any manners at all...but I won't do it again, promise."

"Well, no I mean, there's only so much you can do when you're tweaking yourself from the inside, no surgeries or anything," Flora chuckled, relieved for the subject change. "Biologically I'm still completely male, just...curvier. But I'm okay with that, I more enjoy being treated like a girl when I'm walking around in public with clothes on, you know? The male role's pretty fun in the bedroom. Though it's a large part of my lack of success in that department," she admitted.

She bit her lip. "That doesnt...bother you, does it?" she asked tentatively. "I've met a lot of people who weren't okay with it."

you're not completely a guy though. normal guys dont have fully functioning breasts' emma pointed out. ' Guys have no breasts and a pecker. girls have breasts and no pecker. so.. you;re a girl, with both male and female sexual organs. hermaphrodite, in other words. i take it you like being treated as a girl etter, so for simplicitys sake, we'll say you're a girl. which would making the kissing we are going to do same sex- lesbian to precise. so.. you want to touch tongues pbefore we start kissing. you stick out your tongue i stick out mine and we rub them together. i'd.. like to try it out if thats ok. only ru;le is. no trying to slip your tongue in my mouth.well until I say you can.' emma said..

Flora realized the kissing was about to start, and eagerly nodded. "Okay! Sounds great!" She acquiescently stuck her tongue out. It felt kinda awkward, letting it hang there in open empty space, but she kept her eyes closed and tried to find some romance in the anticipation. Remember she's a professional...don't worry about looking embarrassing, it's not like you've been remotely suave up to now...

Emma crossed over to the bench and sat down next Flora, and smoothed out her thin prink dress. As she did so she saw Flora close her eyes and stick outt her tongue. emma took a deep breath turned her body to face flora and leaned in close. Floras face grew closer and her pink tongue stuck out from those dark red lips, as Emma lips came with range of Floras, Emma stuck out her tongue, at first Emmas tongue just lightly brushed floras sat the tips, but as Emma moved in closer, her tongue made full contact. this was not a tongue lashing as seen in some film, it was a nervous slow uncoordinated tongue kiss from two really inexperienced girls, they were actually licking each others face far more than they wre touching tongues. Unlike Flora Emma kept her eyes open

Flora jumped slightly when their tongues collided. Emma wasn't forceful or controlling like Rose and Marita were; she almost seemed as awkward as Flora was. Flora remembered that this was Emma's first kiss; with a jolt of shock she realized that she was actually more experienced than her partner for the first time.

But still, Emma had been very clear that things moved at her pace, so Flora kept her tongue submissively reacting to Emma's, and her hands stayed by her side. She made sure not to do anything to prevent Emma from progressing at her own pace.

as the tongue lashing continued Emmas lips closed upon Floras. at the first contact(and soft brush) emmas tongue reteatd into her mouth anmd she made stronger contact, feeling Floras mouth againmst hers. Emma keep her left hand in her lap but her right moved to touch floras left arm. emma murmured as she settled into the kiss.

Flora felt Emma progress to hand- and lip-contact, and acquiescently assumed a more active role in the kiss. She felt a subdermal thrill when Emma's hand brushed her arm and kept her lips pressed against Emma's, giving Emma complete unrestricted access to whatever part of Flora's body she wanted.

emmas moved her arm up to Floras shoulder to brace herself , and began kissing flora passionately, as the kiss moved past a minute, Emmas mouth opened while nibbling on floras lips and her tongue slid briefly into floras mouth. realizing what was going on., emma took a deep breath and began to massage floras tongue with hers inbetween locking lips with her.

Flora’s eyes flew open in surprise when Emma’s tongue entered her mouth. She quickly reciprocated, brushing her lips against Emma’s while still allowing the vixen to maintain control.

After nearly 3 full minutes, emma finally broke away, Floras tongue slidings out of her mouth I.. Uh' her face grew redder as she realized what had just happened. not only had she just had her first kiss, she had also french kissed for the first time ' so.. um.. how did i do? for my first , I mean/ She asked Flora as Emma moved away from her and to give the folf a bit of personal space. Emma clasped her hands together in her lap.

Flora panted loudly when the kiss broke. "You did awesome!" she beamed encouragingly. "Very receptive!" She genuinely did enjoy Emma's eagerness, not to mention the mental excitement at being Emma's first gave Flora her own motivation for the kiss to go well. "It's a shame you waited so long to start giving nookie, cause a lot of boys in your past missed out." She smiled crookedly, hoping Emma didn't think too hard about what she just said. "But its lucky for me, cause otherwise I wouldn't have been your first..."

She leaned forward. "If you're looking for tips, I think you should use your hands a lot more. Kissing is awesome, but it's just one aspect of foreplay. You should focus on exploring your whole partner's body, not just the tongue." It was kinda exciting for Flora, being the knowledgeable partner for once.

Flora liked that idea, and excitedly returned the kiss, making sure not to seem too eager. She had to let Emma retain control after all...it was interesting being with someone more insecure than the older women in the apartment. Flora wanted to make sure Emma had as good a first time as Rose had given Flora.

Emma settled into the kiss and began to passionately masage Floras tongue with her own. Her hands moved up to the hem of Flora's robe and began to untie the robe, gradually revealed the folfs breasts. once the breasts were partly visible Emma gradually began to caress them with her claws, feeling the soft, supple and warm breasts bebnath her claws. each passing second , a bond was forming between Emma and Flora, the king you form with a significant other.

Flora smiled and reached out to massage Emma's chest through her pink dress. Her fingers pressed into soft warm skin. Emma's breasts were springier than Flora's despite being much larger; Flora suspected it had something to do with living most of her life braless. "I never thought I'd kiss someone my own age," she whispered back, smiling, "you're probably the first teenager I've ever had as a real friend." Hands shaking, she slowly slid Emma's dress straps over her shoulders, letting her dress pool around her waist. Then she excitedly made to undo Emma's bra, excited to see her ample bosom in its full glory.

"Not as nice as yours!" blushed Flora. She'd always thought her breasts were smaller than average, but Emma would never have that problem. Her chest was huge, rounded and perky despite being weighted down by gravity. Trembling with excitement, Flora clasped her hands around them and pressed her fingers into their soft skin. She re-engaged the kiss, enjoying the multiple points of skin-to-skin contact. Without a robe to hide it, her erection fully betrayed her enthusiasm; she hoped Emma wouldn't find it too odd.

Emma threw her arms around Flora as the girls resumed kissing. Flora's hands trailed down to Emma's butt as the vixen pinned her against the bench. She was still consciously making sure her privates didn't rub up against Emma, since she wasnt sure if the girl would be pleased or disgusted by them, but otherwise Flora relished the feeling of their bodies pressing against each other.

She was amazed at how turned on she was right now; the anticipation of waiting for Emma to begin the "collection" act was tantalizing.

"Eep!" Flora yelped in surprise when the device was attached; it looked like a long thin tube, hinged lengthwise when open, but at the moment it was clasped around her flytrap and rapidly venting the air out. She gulped nervously as the suction got tighter. "Errr, what happens now?" she stammered. "Do we need to turn it on or...?"

All of a sudden the device began vibrating, causing Flora to pant in surprise. The sensation was unlike anything she'd experienced before, very subdued but increasingly impossible to ignore. Like Emma explained, Flora felt her orgasm brimming slowly, building in intensity at an agonizingly slow rate, and she slowly degenerated into her embarrassingly high-pitched yelps, squealing pitifully as the machine worked its magic on her. She was sweating profusely and clutching Emma for support when her climax finally reached its brimming point, sending her muscles contracting and lasting almost a full minute before the machine beeped that it has obtained a full sample.

The vibration stopped and Flora instinctively crossed her legs tenderly. "Oh my god..." she murmured, resting her sweat-soaked head on Emma's shoulder. "That was...intense..."

Do you know if there's a place I could buy a phone? Then we could reconnect at the Jacuzzi once my physical is over." She gave a sideways grin. "I'm glad you took my...unusual anatomy...as well as you did. Most people are surprised, or at least feel the need to comment on it, but you took it stride. "Fair enough", blushed Flora. She had shown no such restraint herself. "I'll check out the phone store. Thanks for everything Emma, super glad I got to meet you."

Flora wasn't sure how to keep her voice casual, and was hoping desperately not to make another embarrassing mistake as Emma was leaving. Is this what having a crush feels like?, she wondered to herself. Emma made her feel this weird desire, this longing to be accepted. It was something she'd never felt with Marita, Rose, and Marie. She wanted Emma to see her as an equal.

Flora smiled as Emma pressed closer. Emma had such an eager attitude, Flora loved how she felt like the vixen was just as excited as Flora to blaze new trails in her love life and mature into seasoned lovers.

Then she peeped in surprise when Kojurro entered the room just as suddenly and with the same unfortunate timing as last time. "Oh my, I'm sorry to keep you waiting doctor!" she exclaimed, standing up abruptly. "I guess I'll see you soon, Emma," she smiled warmly, migrating from the bench to the exam table which covered in a thin sheet of rolled hygienic paper.

Flora shifted uncomfortably as Kojurro palpated her testicles for longer than she thought a doctor would need to locate any warning signs, but when he announced they were healthy she felt a wash of relief. It had been many years since she'd had a physical, the opportunity not really presenting itself while living on the fringes of society, so she was quite pleased to hear nothing had manifested since her youth. "Awesome," she grinned. "Sounds like I get a clean bill of health! Thank you Kojurro!"

She glanced at her robe. She now has a few hours break before her next test, and she was suddenly feeling very hungry. She resolved to obtain a cell phone and some food before heading upstairs to see Emma. "Is there anything else, or can I see you later?" she smiled at Kojurro.

Flora signed them hastily. "See you later doctor!" she exclaimed happily, putting her robe back on and returning the the hallway. Her stomach had that hollow ache that sneaks up out of nowhere, and all she could think of was locating somewhere to get some fast food.

But to her surprise, her shortcut through the courtyard led her across Marita, Rose and Marie at the end of their tour. "Hi gals!" she beamed. "Say, can I interest y'all in some pizza?" she pointed at a small pizzeria with an outdoor patio. "It's such a beautiful day, we can eat outside and enjoy the sunshine!"

On the patio of the pizzeria, a fox-esque figure sat, barely distinguishable beneath a set of odd, fitted metallic pieces and a dark, sleeveless robe. At Flora's exhuberant outburst, the figure's ears twitched a few times, and he looked up.

He mused, getting up and walking over towards them casually...

The cloaked figure smiled a little, walking over to the others.
"Oh, hi there, Flora. A pleasure to meet you. Name's Yurei. But you can call me Rei. And I'd love to, if it's okay with the rest of you guys"

She quickly led the way into the pizzeria, arguably terminating the conversation less politely than she could have, but she was famished and wanted to at least get the seating and ordering happening ASAP.

"Sit anywhere you'd like, darling," the waitress scribbled something in her notebook. "I'll be by to get your drinks in a jiffy, yeah?"

"Oh, I'm ready to order now! I'll have a large slice of vegetarian pizza please!" Flora piped up excitedly.

The waitress shrugged. "Alrighty." She glanced at the others, in case they were ready to order before even sitting down as well.

Marita motioned to Yurei to take a seat at the stall first ' Hi Rei. I'm M.arita this is rose" rose smiled at him' and Marie. Flora here is our new roommate. full of energy, and very eager. comes with being a teen." she then turned to the waitress 'Ii'll have a diet coke if you have it, but as for pizza i'll need a few minutes to look at the menu..-
rose took a seat across from Flora, and set the brochures that she had picked up as part of the tour of the facility, down on the table in front of her.' she grabbed one pf the pizza menus and began looking through it.

Yurei sat down next to Flora, casually flicking a menu open.
"I'll have some mint tea, if you have any.".
He said to the waitress, leaning back in his chair.
"So, haven't seen you ladies around before. I presume that you just got here recently."
He chuckled, glancing around a little...

"Drink for you, miss?" the waitress turned to Flora.

"Hmmm, ooh yeah how about something stiff." Flora glanced at the menu but was not able to immediately locate the drinks. "What's the strongest thing you got?"

"Uh...beer."

"K, that'll do!" Flora turned back to Yurei as the waitress left to grab their drinks. "We got here super recently, just yesterday in fact! Hardly even know my way around. Already took my first tests though, and I'm loving what I've seen so far! This apartment and this gig was really a lifesaver;" she smiled sincerely. "We were in a bad place. What about you? Are you a test subject here?"

She hoped he said yes; she hadn't seen another test subject, and would love a chance to talk to someone going through the same thing as her. She resolved to try and become this person's friend.

this isnt 20 questions, Flora' Rose said ' let him get a word in edgewise' she laughed . ' Yes we are new to this town ' she said " we've moving from town to town, trying to find jobs.

Yurei chuckled a little, raising an eyebrow at Flora.
"Bad place, huh? Guess it's a good thing you made your way here. After all, the world would be a lesser place without such lovely ladies in it"
He joked, then seemingly faded and fell through his seat, disappearing for a moment before seeming to pop out of the ground behind Rose and Marita, then repeating the trick and appearing behind Flora.
"Am I a test subject here? Well, I suppose you could put it that way"
He said coolly...

"Eep!" gasped Flora in surprise when appearing behind her. "Holy crap that is so cool!" Her mind filled with questions and she had to mentally restrain herself from launching into an excited interrogation; as Rose had warned her, now was merely the time for initial pleasantries. She resolved to keep a lid on her natural curiosity to avoid intimidating potential friends.

The waitress returned with drinks. "Y'all need another minute to look at the menu?" she asked. Somehow Yurei's trick hadn't phased her; she'd been working here long enough to have witnessed the test subjects do plenty of weird things.

Yurei chuckled, slipping back into his seat with a small smirk.
"It would be, if I could actually keep it under control and not have to wear a device to keep me from falling through everything. Being able to wear clothes would be a nice change of pace, too."
He joked, then smiled at the waitress.
"Chicken Alfredo pizza for me. And whatever the ladies want, too. I'll cover it"
He replied glibly...

"Wow..." breathed Flora. "But it's so strong! Even if you don't have control over it, you're like an X-Man. I have the opposite problem; apparently I'm like, barely psionic, so I'm kinda lucky they're even interested in keeping me here."

She brushed the fur on her forearm. "My power is I can change my appearance, but it takes forever for the new look to grow in. We're talking months. But my pink fur, my body shape and...some other oddities...are all natural, I've never have any cosmetic surgeries or implants."

Yurei cast an appreciative glance over Flora's body, grinning a little.
"So, that's all natural, hmm? Well that's a pleasant surprise."
He joked, then, glancing around a bit, undid the upper chest of his cloak and pulling it open to reveal a large, black metal device implanted into the center of his chest, which pulsed faintly with red energy.
"See, you're lucky that your power is fairly minor. You don't have to worry about it going awry and possibly killing you."
He said, closing his cloak and looking away...

when did you get the implant? Marita asked , gazing with interest at it before Yurei covered himself. " i'm guessing it was to control your powers , huh?

"Hmmmm, didn't think about that," Flora mulled over. "That would be really scary. Good thing the scientists are watching over you."

The waitress arrived with Flora's pizza, and the folf tucked into it ravenously. "Ohhh, thank fuck," she gasped through mouthfuls of dough. "I am so hungry!" Downing an open mouthful with a heavy swallow of beer, she hiccuped painfully but with a sigh of satisfaction. "Oh my god, yes. This is the second-best pizza I have ever eaten."

Yurei nodded at Marita.
"They stuck this thing in me after one of the tests went wrong, and they had to cut me out of a ceiling I had gotten part of myself stuck in. Not a fun experience. And yeah, it inhibits my powers a bit, keeps them from kicking in involuntarily"
As the food arrived, he turned to his plate with a grin, looking back up at Flora.
"Only the second best, huh? Well, now you've gone and gotten my curiosity up as to what the best was"
He chuckled..

Flora grinned back. "Oh, that's quite a story."

So while they waited for the other's food to arrive, Flora told the tale of the time she visited a farm in the middle of nowhere.

As Flora recounted her story, Yurei had to stop eating several times, either to chuckle lightly, or occasionally simply stare at Flora with a fascinated grin.

"Hmmm, well I can see how this would come in second to that much fun...".
He smirked as she finished her tale. Under the table, his free hand idly sought Flora's lap as he grinned conspiratorially at her...

Flora's eyes widened in surprise at Yurei's touch, but she quickly composed herself and maintained eye contact with Marie. "They went perfect!" she replied happily. Under the table, her bare foot slithered forward to brush against Yurei's shoe. "I met this adorable girl named Emma! She's a fashion model but she's working at the facility to pay for school. I was going to meet her after lunch if you want to come along!" Her toes playfully snuck under the hem of Yurei's robe to tickle his bare skin, but above the table she paid him no heed.

Yurei chuckled a little, teasing his hand ever closer to Flora's crotch as he grinned at her.
"While I think I'd be hard pressed to find someone as adorable as the ladies in with right now, I suppose it would do me some good to meet a few more people, eh? I suppose my training can wait a bit"
He said smoothly, teasingly placing a foot on Flora's...

Sure, You can introduce her to us' marita said ' Let me guess she was one of those who administered your tests and yu two hit it off? You're getting bettr Flora!' the old saying goes " theres no better teacher than experience' and i'd like to learn more about her" How long has she been working there, for starters?"
- so thats what you mean by fun' Marie smirked as she heard floras story.' Well Well i certainly agree."

"I think she just started work here," Flora pondered. "At least, she said I was the first patient she ever worked with. She performed a very...specific function during my physical, but it didn't feel like one that would require special training."

The rest of her mind was trying to figure out how bold Yurei planned on getting with his hidden hand. He's certainly not one to beat around the bush, she thought with amusement, spreading her legs somewhat and letting the bottom of her robe come a bit undone under the table. Thank god there's a tablecloth...

"Uh, how did your tour of the facility go, Marie?" she asked quickly, fighting to keep her voice level.

Yurei smiled a bit as he felt Flora shift her legs, lightly tracing his hand along her inner thigh and brushing it gently against her balls.
"Yeah, the tours here kinda blow. Maybe after we meet up with Emma, I could give you guys a more interesting one."
He said with a coy smirk...

"That would be awesome, Yurei!" Flora nodded quickly but took a slightly irregular breath. "You can show us...all the secret places that they wouldn't on the guided tour!" Her stomach did a belly flop as she fought to mask any reaction to his ever-so-slight stimulation. Thankful that her pink fur masked a faint blush, she grabbed her beer and took a long swig, using the seconds to get her bearings.

"What were some of the places you saw on the guided tour, Marita?" she asked, as her foot rubbed the back of Yurei's leg.

Yurei chuckled a little, stroking Flora's shaft experimentally as he grinned over at her.
"Oh, you bet I'll show you the parts the staff would NEVER show on the guided tours. Not like I blame 'em. They're of little interest to the general populace, after all."
He smirked, shifting a bit to contain his excitement at the feeling of Flora's foot on his leg...

Flora's heart was racing and sweat was pooling on her brow. Under his massaging grasp she quickly felt herself getting hard. I hope we don't stand up to go on this tour soon... she thought nervously.

She shot a glance at Yurei and noticed his shit-eating grin. Having fun, are we? she thought mischievously. Enjoying making me squirm? Let's see how YOU handle yourself! Shifting her own hand under the tablecloth, she slid it between the folds of Yurei's robe to find out how much clothing he had on underneath.

it was just a general tour of the facility ' Marita said. " its a big place, at least several miles in area. Needed a beter tour guide though." She turned to Yurei. " and how long have you been here Yurei, if i may ask? And.. you can stop playing footsie with Flora at any time you know' She smirked.

Yurei chuckled nodding at Marita.
"A few miles? This place is the size of a small city, and that's just the above-ground parts! I've been here for...huh, almost six years now, and I haven't even seen the whole place properly!"
He smirked, then gave a small shrug with his free hand.
"And I have no idea what you're talking about with footsies. I'm not doing anything of the sort~".
He added, the well-fitted pants he wore tightening further at Flora's touch...

Flora brazenly kept up the footsies, though taking care to make less noise. Trying and failing to slip her fingers into Yurei's waistline due to how tight his pants were, she bit her lip in surprise when the waitress appeared from somewhere behind her without warning.

"Let me take those plates," the waitress commented, placing receipts on the table. "You pay these up at the register when you're ready. Any of y'all need refills?"

"No, I'm good," Flora said hastily. Did she see anything??? She returned her hand to her own lap, realizing that with lunch finishing, they were likely going to stand up soon. "Er, do we wanna do that tour now, then?" she said, smiling and hoping to maintain a straight face while Yurei continued stimulating her privates with impunity. She was getting more hot and bothered the longer it went. If he doesn't stop soon, I'm going to embarrass myself so badly...

"Flora, why dont you call your friend -- Emma, wasnt it?- and have us meet her at a place of her choosing. there should be a public phone near the entrance." marita said getting up and heading towards the counter to pay.
_ we're good thank you. the food was good .' Marie demurred to the waitress.

_ So Yurei what made you decide to come to this place? was it recommended to you? Rose asked him.

Yurei chuckled a little, using his free hand to pull out a small cell phone and hand it over to Flora, grinning.
"Here, you might want to use this instead. Little... Easier."
He teased, rubbing his foot against Flora's as he circled her tip with his thumb, smirking idly as the waitress left, turning to Marita.
"Recommended? Heh, you could say that. Got placed here by some doctors after my powers started going somewhat out of control. Guess they were afraid I'd get seriously hurt if it kept up."
He joked, tail flicking a bit behind him...

Flora took the phone. "T-thanks Yurei..." She didn't know if she dared calling Emma in the middle of being stimulated. But at least it'll give her an excuse to not stand up right away...

Taking the slip of paper out of her pocket, she shakily dialed the number.

"Hi Emma..." she said when the other picked up. "It's Flora! We're down at the pizzeria in the courtyard. We met another experiment called Yurei, he's going to give us a tour of the facility. Wanna join us?" She tried to sound chipper, but something of a moan got caught in her throat at the very end. She realized she was leaking pre-ejaculate on Yurei's hand, and the thought left her flushing ruby red, so badly she feared her pink fur wouldn't be enough to disguise it.

so, yurei, how much do you get paid to let them run tests on you? 1000 creds a month?' Marita asked..

"T-that sounds good! See you soon!" Flora hung up. Fifteen more minutes of this? I can't take that! "I, uh, need to go use the bathroom!" she stammered, wrapping her robe around herself. Cinching her belt tight, she hobbled to the restrooms, trying to keep herself from panting with pent-up lust.

Yurei shrugged.
"Closer to 1500 a month, plus they pay for my living here. Helps that I've involved myself on a project of theirs, though."
He chuckled, standing up and shifting his robe slightly to make sure everything stayed hidden.

"Anyhow, I think I'm gonna hit the can real fast before I give the grand tour."

(OOC: RP'd with Starfall via google docs)

Flora slammed the bathroom door behind her with a gasp. "Oh god!" she breathed, shuddering. "Oh fuck, I made it…" Her belt unraveled and her erection sprang forth to rest on the cold porcelain of the counter. Panting with relief at having escaped what was imminently going to be an embarrassing accident under the table, she took a look at herself in the mirror. Her face was flushed red and her fur was disheveled and sweaty. Crap, no fucking way the girls didn't pick up on Yurei fondling me under the table…

Well, something to worry about once she'd relived her pent-up heat. Staggering to the nearest stall, she shakily locked the door and began masturbating furiously, her breath catching in her throat with each pump and a turgid moan escaping her throat.

Yurei smirked, quickly peeking around to make sure he hadn't been followed, and, not seeing anyone nearby, quickly slipped through the door with an impish grin. "Hey, Flora? You in here?" He asked coyly, grinning as he spotted her feet under one of the stall doors. Leaning against it nonchalantly, he lightly rapped on it. "Anyone in there~?" He said lightly, ears pricked at the sounds from the stall…

Flora had almost completely retreated into her fantasies, and yelped in surprise when someone had completely silently entered the bathroom without warning. "Yurei! How did you...this is the girl's room!" In her shock she slipped off the toilet and skidded on the ground, one of her legs appearing underneath the stall and coming to a rest between his feet. "Owww...sorry, sorry!" she stammered, thoroughly embarrassed.

Yurei chuckled a little, slipping through the stall door with a soft grin, resolidifying and offering a hand to Flora. "Well, let's just say I've gotten pretty good at getting in and out of places unseen" He said lightly, casting a few looks at her shaft as he did. "Besides, nobody uses this bathroom ever. Hear it's got a few issues with some of the plumbing." He added with a coy smirk

Flora was sprawled on the floor, chest heaving and pupils dilated. Her robe was strewn out around her, fully exposing the lighter pink fur on her chest leading down to her crotch. But she quickly scrunched into a ball in shock when he phased through the door. "Jesus that's...that's really weird…" She quickly took his hand and laughed nervously. "Sorry, you just startled me." Also, you're totally a pervert coming into the woman's bathroom like that." Her tone was one of coy mirth, though, and she couldn't hide the twinkle in her eyes. "I could report you for being a sexual predator now, you know…"

Yurei gave her a rougish grin as he helped her up, then gave a slight tug, hoping to pull her into him. "Is that really all the thanks I get for coming to make sure you were alright? Geeze~" He retorted, lightly rubbing along her thigh as she got up. "And here I was, planning to do you a favor, too~" He chuckled, licking his lips slyly as he looked her over again. "You know, you should go without the robe more often…"

"Haha, keep hanging around me and you won't be disappointed...I'm a flaming nudist." Flora's chuckle caught in her throat as Yurei rubbed her thigh. "Oh god, you're gonna keep teasing me...please, you almost made me pop in the middle of lunch, I would have been mortified..." Her erection pressed pleadingly into his arm. She couldn't figure out what to say; she'd never been in a situation like this before, in a private place with a complete stranger who had her at a sexual disadvantage, struggling to control her urges while also unable to ask for the assistance she suspected he was more than prepared to give.

Yurei smiled lightly, tracing a hand along her length. "Keep teasing you? Mmm, wouldn't dream of it. After all, a gentleman never leaves a lady hanging." He teased, sliding his free hand down her back to appreciatively cup her butt. "And, since I can give you my full and undivided attention now~... Well, let's just say I wonder how much such a pretty girl can shoot." He said, voice gradually getting softer as he leaned in closer, practically whispering the last few words, his face almost touching hers..

Flora whimpered pitifully, her robe sliding unnoticed off her shoulders to pool at her feet. As Yurei backed her into the stall wall, she pressed her lips against his desperately, surrendering complete control of her body to him. Her buttocks tightened under his grasp and every muscle in her body felt coiled and ready to shoot. "I'm not gonna last long at all..." she warned as she took a deep breath, "you might want to aim it away from you..."

Yu chuckled, stroking her shaft slowly as his other hand teased its way between her buttcheeks. "Mmmm, true… don't wanna have to explain that, now do we?" He smirked, gently spinning so that the pair ended up against the other wall of the stall, with Flora's back pressed against his front. He lightly nibbled along her neck, grinding his hips against her backside. "This any better?" He whispered, his still-covered arousal prodding between her cheeks…

Flora panted excitedly as Yurei took over her masturbation for her, her squeals of lust all the permission she could muster. Still, when she felt his stiffie pressing up against her backside, she paused. "Yuri?" she asked nervously. "I know we're pretty far along, but...I don't feel comfortable with, uh...any sort of sex right now. It's just, we haven't been tested for STDs...I can jack you off next, I promise, but I think we should avoid mixing fluids until we've both been tested...if you don't mind."

For the first time Flora felt a trickle of worry tighten her chest. If Yurei didn't feel like agreeing, she was in a very very bad position...

Yurei smiled some, lightly sliding a hand down between the pair, letting it rest just under Flora's tail. "That works for me, Flora. If it makes you more comfortable, than I'd be more than okay with waiting. And you don't have to worry about taking care of me. I'll be fine, at least until later...that is, if you want." He murred, lightly circling a finger around her tailhole. "Though I'll warn you now...I can be quite the kinky pervert…" He whispered teasingly, once again lightly kissing her neck…
Flora felt relief wash through her as he acquiesced to waiting until they were tested. They lived in a laboratory, how difficult could it be to find STD tests? "Thanks Yurei..." she panted gratefully. "And I'm not one to turn down a fair exchange...I was laying it on almost as thick as you were out there you know..." To show she meant business, she leaned one hand back and lightly rubbed the bulge in his pants, teasing it for just a moment. "Also it'll give you motivation..." she smiled mischievously, "the better you give, the better you're gonna get..."

Yu chuckled, licking his lips as he ground against Flora's hand. "Well, now. You've certainly gotten me interested~." He teased, pressing his finger lightly into her as he circled her tip with his other hand. "And you know, there are lots of ways for us to...fool around, without any risk of actually catching anything…" He added, nuzzling along her neck lightly. "Oh, the things we could get up to…"

Flora yelped as Yurei slid a single finger into her tail hole, and she had to quickly brace herself with both hands against the wall. She'd never tried anything penetrative before, and wild trepidation quickly subsided as she realized it felt amazing, the initial pain quickly subsiding as he stimulated her prostate. Her moans became higher-pitched and she squeezed her eyes shut as she felt her abdomen tense up. "Oh god I'm gonna...I'm..." Her words died in her throat as an orgasm roared up that quickly engulfed her entire lower body in sensation. A deep cry escaped her throat and she arched her back, locked her legs and painted the wall with a hot splash of seed.

Yurei grinned and murred, continuing to stroke her as she rode out her orgasm, lightly wiggling his finger inside her as he did. As the last few spurts dribbled out of her tip, he slid his hand along it, collecting as much as he could, then made a small show of licking it up. "Mmm….my, my...you certainly can make a mess. But a very, very tasty one~" he practically cooed to her, smirking a little. "So, does that make up for the teasing earlier, or do I owe you a few more?" he teased, nipping her neck affectionately…

Flora's legs felt like rubber and she sank exhausted to the ground. She noticed through weary half-lidded eyes that Yurei didn't seem as worried about STDs as she was. "It made up for it..." she panted, "and then some." She laid her head against the unsoiled wall. "My legs need a rest before we go back out to the others. But actually..." her eyes flashed excitedly. "I think this puts me at the perfect height." Drawing him nearer, she unzipped his pants, excited to see what he brought to show.

Yurei blushed brightly, smiling a little. He liked to think he was slightly above average in size, but he hoped Flora would agree. He'd hate to disappoint her, especially since he was already beginning to grow a bit fond of her. "Mmm, well...Since you're so eager, and you look so comfy down there~" He smirked, reaching down and lightly ruffling her hair as he slipped his pants down a bit for her, giving her better access to his package. Oh, this will be fun… he thought to himself. Wonder how much kinky stuff I can get her into…

Flora nodded appreciatively and her eyes lit up when she saw the goods. My heavens, those jeans were hiding a lot... she quickly got to work massaging his scrotum, biting her lip playfully as she toyed with him, taking her time in revenge for all the agony he'd put her through. She examined every detail intently, relishing the chance to explore a more masculine element of sexuality than what she'd got to see with Marita and the other girls.

She couldn't stop looking in particular at his tip. At first, her mind wondered what made it look so different to her own, until she realized her was uncircumcised. How odd... she thought to herself, spreading the foreskin and revealing the glans underneath. As he hardened, she watched the skin disappear into the length of his shaft. So enrapt was she in her studies that she almost forgot to keep stimulating him, and with a start she traced his shaft with her fingers. "I can't believe how naughty we're being," she grinned up at him as she began pumping. "Here I am, sitting naked in a public bathroom, beating off some guy I just met...this was not where I saw myself when I woke up this morning you know..."

Yu chuckled a little, though it quickly faded into a soft, throaty moan as Flora started stroking him. "Really? Because this is exactly where I hoped to end up. Getting to fool around someplace just a little public, with the most beautiful girl I've ever seen. Only way today could get better would be if things got kinkier." He joked lightly, shifting a bit so he could rub Flora's shaft with a foot "But that can wait. After all, don't wanna force you into things or freak you out too much~" He added, giving her a warm, impish grin, humping against her hand a little

Flora increased the pace as her other hand darted down to massage his balls. "Sure, we're starting off a bit vanilla, but give it time," she grinned. "I'm not going anywhere, and I think we're a pretty good match. I bet you've got more than one session's worth of ideas to try out."

She leaned forward and licked his tip, just a single light brush with her tongue. "You better warn me now before you cum..." she cautioned, noting the position they'd assumed left her right in the line of fire. "As much as I bet you'd love to make a mess all over my pretty face..."

Yurei smirked, panting a little as Flora teased his balls. "Oh, I've got plenty of sessions worth of ideas. And maybe a few places to show you later~" He teased, licking his lips. "And as much as I'm sure you'd love to get a nice, messy facial, I'll be sure to warn you, lovely. Hate to get anyone too jealous of us, after all." He joked, running a foot along her leg…

Flora traced his tip with her finger, keeping her pace rapid and her attention transfixed on his crotch. She loved seeing his sharp intakes of breath, the bulging of his veins at her touch. She licked it a few more times experimentally. It was a bitter taste, more musky than what it had been like when she went down on Marita. She felt a deep desire to take him in her mouth all the way, and after a few more minutes she couldn't resist. "Let's put your chivalry to the test…" she teased, running her tongue along the length of his shaft before closing her lips around his tip.

Yu blushed bright red, letting out a soft, eager moan as Flora's mouth enveloped him. "O-oh, you'll see~. Still want that warning, or are you more in the mood for a taste~?" He teased shakily, reaching out and lightly rubbing her ear. His hips tensed some, resisting the urge to buck forward into Flora's warm maw. "Mmmmf, gods are you amazing~" He exhaled, tail thumping against the wall behind him…

Flora purred as she continued pumping his shaft. "Not until you've been tested, but after that you can look forward to finishing wherever you like...you'll find I'm a very willing receiver."

Resuming the blowjob, she hummed a low rhythm from the back of her throat, a tuneless sound that vibrated her lips and cheeks as she pushed his cock deeper into her mouth. It was a trick she'd always thought would feel amazing, and Yurei seemed like a good opportunity to try it out.

Yu moaned more passionately, hips bucking forward a bit into Flora's ministrations. "W-well then you're probably going to want to move pretty soon, Flora…" He murmured, eyes shutting a bit as he felt an all-too-familiar pressure building up in his core, his cock twitching in anticipation of his coming release…

Flora narrowed her focus and gave his penis her full attention. She was enjoying the blowjob, but should she keep going? How close could she predict the payload before it happened? Part of her wanted to feel the swelling of his urethra as it ejaculated, and another part was reminding her that oral sex had a very low chance of passing STDs...

A few seconds passed, and she had just made up her mind to play it safe and downgrade to a handjob when she felt the first spray of salty cum hit the back of her throat. Yelping in surprise, she pushed him out and received a faceful all over her face, splashing onto her forehead, eyelids and snout. "Yurei!" she spluttered, rubbing her eyes. Luckily she'd closed them just in time.

A few seconds passed, and she glanced up at him, not looking particularly upset. "Welp, you did warn me, but I wasn't fast enough." She wiped some off her cheek and watched it drip onto her breasts. Luckily semen in the mouth and on skin has a very low chance of transmission, so all things considered she wasn't too worried. "Looks like I might have to freshen up a bit before we go back outside..."

Yurei blushed, still a little shaky as he came down from his post-orgasmic high, noticing that he had unintentionally given Flora a facial. "Oh..oh damn, sorry Flora! I...you were...oh, wow, I am SO sorry…" He stammered, grabbing some toilet paper and using it to gently wipe her face off. Finally collecting himself enough to notice that she didn't seem overly upset, he made eye contact and gave her a small, earnest frin. "Heh, well, you still look beautiful to me." He said sincerely, blushing some…

Flora giggled. "It happens, no hard feelings." With his help she got to her feet and staggered to the sink. "It let me know for sure that you enjoyed yourself right up to the end. That was the goal, after all." Splashing water on her face and chest, she wiped herself down with a bunch of paper towels and took a deep breath. "Wish I had makeup, we need to look presentable for Emma and the others. Speaking of which, we should probably get going." She flashed him a grin. "It's been a hell of a bathroom break."

Yu smirked, walking up behind Flora and giving her a quick, one-armed hug around the middle, then a peck on the cheek. "Heh, that is true. Think we should come up with some kinda alibis?" He chuckled, keeping his arm around her midsection as he used his other hand to roughly fix his hair. "I mean, they might think something untoward happened~" he teased, grinning slightly goofily…

"I don't think they'll notice if we just play it cool," Flora winked. Grabbing her robe off the floor and shaking it, she slipped it back on and led the way out the door. "But hang back a bit, let's not return as a pair, K?"

Yurei grinned, giving her a knowing smile as the two left. Heh...what a girl… He thought to himself, grabbing his robe and slipping through the ground a few seconds after Flora had left...

Fifteen minutes later, Flora came skipping back to the table. "Is Emma here yet?" she asked excitedly. "It's around the time she was going to show up, right? I hope I didn't miss her!"

Flora grinned. "No trouble at all Emma! Glad you could make it! There's one more of us named Yurei, he's in the restroom right now, but he's the one going to give us an unofficial tour of the facility. You should grab a slice to go, their vegetarian pizza is to die for!"

She pinched the shoulder of Emma's dress. "Oooh you look so pretty in this! What fabric is that?"

Just as Flora mentioned him, Yurei made his way back over to the table, grinning broadly.
"Did I hear someone mentioning me over here?".
He joked, nonchalantly pulling up his chair with a small chuckle. He gave a cheerful nod to Emma, smirking a bit.
"And you must be Emma. A real pleasure to meet you.".
He added suavely, leaning back in his seat a bit...

Yurei smiled a little, giving a nonchalant wave of his hand.
"Oh, don't worry about it. It's the least I can do, honestly.".
He said lightly, grinning languidly.
"Now, what sorts of sights would you guys like to see around here?".
He asked, humming a small tune to himself.

"Hey, just wanted to know what sorta sights you wanted to see is all~".
He chuckled, then pulled his phone out and began thumbing through some things.
"Oh, hey, while we're on the tour, I think one of my friends would love to meet you all, so we'll take a quick detour, alright?"
He asked, sounding somewhat more serious...

"Awesome!" No time like the present to meet someone new. As they walked, Flora couldn't help but wonder what sort of person Yurei would choose to hang out with. He was such an oddball himself, she doubted they'd qualify as normal.

Yurei smiled at the group, leading them to a large, secured door.
"Right, so, I suppose I should warn you guys that this area's a bit off-limits to the general populace, so don't get too shocked by what you see."
He said, looking around for a second before slipping into the ground. A few seconds later, the door clicked open, swinging soundlessly to reveal a dimly-lit cement hallway. Yu smiled a little and gestured behind himself.
"So, uh... Welcome to the specialized containment wing".
He chuckled nervously...

The dreary cellblock looked like a prison-style hall, with reinforced transparent windows into each cell. The cells were nice but the atmosphere was sterilized and the lights were kept low.

"Wait, so there are test subjects in these?" stammered Flora. She crept close to one. "Subjects like us? Did they do something wrong?"

Yurei nodded a bit.
"Yeah. These are specialized holding rooms for psionics whose powers are considered dangerous to others. Among others, I know at least one in here's power is..."
A muffled explosion sounded through the cell hallway as Yu flinched a bit
"He can cause things to explode."
He said, gently placing a hand on Flora's shoulder.
"Trust me, it's for peoples safety.".
He said gently, as he made his way down the cellblock...

So these are the ones who'd be a danger to society if allowed out. Charming.' Marita said. rose got quick glances of the some of the various occupants through peepholes- one was drawing complicated formulas on the wall. another one was tossing a fireball between hands. as he caught it it turned into a snowball, then became a fireball again in the other hand.

Emma remained quiet as she walked alongside Rose " so which guy did you want us to see Yurei" Emma asked as they walked along.

Flora was looking at the cells, a feeling of apprehension trickling down her spine. She should have realized that a facility built to house psionics would require a wing like this, but it clashed so harshly with Sartonic's friendly resort-like image that it got her worrying. She was a test subject here, after all. What if her powers ever grew dangerous? Could she one day find herself in a cell down here?"

"Wotcha lookin' at?" sneered a rat when her eyes passed over him, making her jump. Unlike the others, he had a very oddly-designed metallic chair that he was resting in. It seemed to be made of spoons.

"Nothing, sorry!" stammered Flora, backing up.

The rat pressed himself up against the cell wall. "It's not polite, you know. These are our homes. Say you're sorry."

"Sorry!"

"I'll forgive you this once," he leered. "But only if you give me something. A pebble, a strip of tissue. Anything at all."

Flora shook her head anxiously, backing up quickly.

The rat observed Marita and the others. "Oh, I'm so lonely...All this old man craves is some material possessions. Could you spare me any objects at all?"

Post by: StarfallRaptor on April 26, 2016, 04:57:26 PM

Yurei walked back over, fishing in his pocket for something, finally producing a set of ball bearings as he stepped over to the window.
"Hey, old man, go easy on 'em. They're new here."
He chuckled, opening a small door and sliding the bearings into a small tray, which slid into the cell as he shut the small door.
"Here, pinched these for ya. Figured you'd appreciate them."
He said with a smile. Turning around, he gestured slightly towards the end of the hall.
"C'mon. She's down here."
He said softly, smiling faintly...

Title: Around the Folf

The rat's eyes lit up as he palmed the pair of ball bearings. "Aw yes, this will do nicely...thank you," he said gratefully.

Flora couldn't help but glance as he rolled the four (four?) bearings in his hand. Crossing over to his wash basin, the rat poured the eight bearings in and started lying contentedly in it. Dozens of bearings covered him, slowly forming a metallic pool of gleaming silver balls.

Flora finally tore her sight away when they'd gone too far down the hall, and quickly shifted her focus to the cell that Yurei was leading them to.

At the end of the hall, Yu stopped, knocking lightly on the window.
"Hey, Taga. It's me. I uh... Brought some friends down to meet you."
He said, smiling softly as the lights in the room flicked on, revealing a very old-looking female cat sitting in a large, plush rocking chair. She looked up at the window, and a large, warm smile crossed her features as she did.
"Ah, Yurei! So you found time to come visit little old me, did you? Are these the friends you mentioned?".
She asked, voice weathered and cracking a bit with age as she stood up and shuffled her way over to the window, her long shawl and dress making it look almost as if she were floating...

So why are you in here , mam? Emma asked " What sort of abilities do you possess? You have to shave some sort of ability or they wouldnt have put you in here.'

Flora swallowed her trepidation and managed a friendly smile. "H-hi Taga. My name's Flora, I'm the newest test subject here at Sartonic." She didn't want to make as bad an impression as she'd given the rat. Plus with Yurei being so friendly to each of them, they had to be decent people, right? "Pleased to meet you."

Taga smiled a little, looking at each in turn, settling on Emma once she asked about her powers.
"My, my aren't you the curious bunch~. I'm in here because my power causes me to devour the emotions of anyone who's around me. It can be... Very harmful. But you don't have to worry, this cell keeps me from affecting anyone outside it.".
She reassured, then turned her gaze towards Flora.
"Oh, child. You don't have to be afraid of me. Welcome to the facility. I'm sure you'll fit right in, and I think you'll enjoy your stay here.".
She said lightly, as Yurei opened the small window and slipped a few chocolate bars in.
"Here, Taga. Bright you a few of your favorites."
He said, and she gave him a warm smile in return.
"You're to sweet, Yu. You know you don't have to trouble yourself for me"
She said softly..

so you.. absorb the emotions from other people. so.. are you a vampire? emma asked ' Vampires suck blood.. not energy or emotion 'Marita said to her.' So how long have you been in here? She asked Taga' Curiosity, you understand."

Flora smiled and nodded, glad that she seemed to be making a good impression. But inwardly, she wondered whether Taga was as friendly as she seemed. Her power didn't seem that bad, and it felt to her like Taga should be allowed to live normally in the facility, and the fact that she didn't was unsettling.

Taga smiled softly, chuckling a bit.

"Why don't you just...control it then?" Flora knew she was being impolite but couldn't resist learning more about someone who had trouble with their powers. "Just don't manipulate people's emotions, and then you could live wherever you wanted instead of...trapped in this cell." She shifted her feet, hoping Taga didn't think she was insulting her home like the rat did.

Post by: StarfallRaptor on May 01, 2016, 06:49:07 PM

Taga chuckled softly.
"If only it were that simple, dearie. I've tried to keep my powers under control, but if I allowed myself to lapse for even a moment, then they would slip out and endanger people again. I decided that it would be best to stay someplace where I could work to minimize that risk. Most of the people here are much the same. We've willingly agreed to stay here until our powers can be kept in check and we won't endanger people. And miss, as to how many of us there are, there's a dozen or so of us. Each of us with abilities that can be very dangerous if unchecked. But we all are reasonably happy down here."
She said pleasantly, doing a small gesture around herself..

"So...most of you chose to come down here?" asked Flora, feeling relief wash over here. "You won't forced by the labs?" That was good to hear; her powers were very minor and she was prepared to be more than cooperative with Sartonic in every way.

She shifted her feet. This cell block still unnerved her, but it wasn't as bad now that she'd gotten to know some of the inhabitants a little better.

Taga smiled wryly at Marita's question.
"How old am I? Hehee, I've lost track, to be honest. I suppose your guess is as good as mine, isn't it?"
She said lightly, then looked over at Emma.
"Ah, of course. I didn't mean to keep you. You must have a lot to do and see, being new here. I'll let you get on with it! But thank you for coming to visit an old spinstress like me, all of you."
She said, making her way back towards her chair before pausing and turning back around.
"Oh, but, Flora, dearie? Could you stay a moment longer? I know you're a bit uneasy, but I promise you'll be fine. And Yu, no eavesdropping, child! I swear, you're just like a little boy sometimes.".

She teased, to which Yurei gave a coy shrug.
"Yeah, yeah, Baachan. I won't snoop this time. Sheesh, I do it once and you never have let me hear the end of it."
He retorted, leading the group back down the hall, though not before giving Flora's hand a reassuring squeeze...

Flora nodded nodding encouragingly as her friends retreated down the hallway. "What is it, ma'am?" she asked politely, walking up to the cell door and placing her face against the bars so she could get a good look at her conversationalist. Not knowing how sensitive the talk was going to be, she decided to give Taga the most privacy possible considering the situation.

Taga smiled softly, shuffling up to the door.
"Please, you don't need to be so formal with me. I just wanted to talk to you about Yurei. I think he's rather smitten with you.".
She said lightly, then looked a bit more contemplative.
"I just wanted to let you know that, as much as he acts cheerful and light-heated, the poor child's been through a lot, and tries to carry the burdens all himself. He means well, though. And he loves with all his heart. So please, do take care of him."
She said softly, her voice gentle and almost maternal...

"A relationship? Already? But we just met..." Flora answered nervously.

She bit her lip at the warning that Yurei wasn't as carefree and content as she thought. "Thank you for the advice," she continued, smiling softly. "I'll be careful around him, the last thing I want to do is hurt anybody." But if Taga was right (and as a psionically-powered empath, Flora was inclined to believe her), Yurei is going to have to be patient. Flora wasn't yet comfortable entering into relationships with anybody beyond the 'friends with benefits' level. And even then he's going to have to share with Marita, Rose, Marie, and Emma for Flora's time...hopefully she'd be able to make it all work.

Sexual relationships are complicated... she thought with unexpected despair, feeling a slight knot in her stomach.

Taga placed her hand on the bars, smiling gently
"Oh, dearie, I didn't mean it as something so serious. He cares about you immensely, but I don't believe he'll try to make anything more than that until you two know each other better. But thank you for listening to a doddering old lady like me. It's just that, when he looked at you, I could feel something from him that I hadn't felt in a long time. He's been so very closed off since... Well, it's not my place to say. I think that you two will be good for each other. So please, don't despair."
She said gently, giving Flora a small smile...

Flora headed back towards the exit, but stopped when she crossed the cell containing the old rat, who was still enjoying a ball bearing bath. "Ummm, hello again," she added, determined to make a better impression before she left. "Sorry about before. I'm new, learning how things work around here."

"Same deal as before," he said dismissively. "I'll forgive you when you give me something."

Flora rifled through her pockets and found only the scrap of paper containing Emma's phone number. Tearing a decently-sized blank portion off the bottom, she let that flutter through the bars. "How about that?"

The rat's eyes lit up. "I'll wallpaper my room with this!" He said excitedly. Leaping out of the bath, he grabbed the paper excitedly and began twirling as white confetti sprung forth from his hand.

Flora took that opportunity to leave while she was ahead. "Hi all!" she said brightly when she found them waiting outside the cell block. "I think I got the rat to like me. Now, where are we going next?"

She could hardly contain herself during the walk to the entertainment district. "What part should we go to first?" she asked as it drew close.

Yurei chuckled a bit, giving Flora a smirk.
"Well I was figuring I'd let you take the lead, shop around. I'll tag along, follow your lead and pick up the tab. I mean, if you'd like."
He said with a smile, doing a sweeping gesture towards the large, open promenade...

The receptionist looked up. "Destination?" she asked as she saw the sextet of them heading for the exit to the lab.

"Oh, we just wanted to see the city...if that's alright of course." Flora shifted her feet.

The receptionist looked at her bathrobe, which wasn't doing that great with all the wear and tear. "I hope you head to one of the clothing stores first," she commented, printing out 5 day passes in the form of little wristlets, like the ones in hospitals. "Keep the bracelet visible at all times; and if anyone asks you're legally required to inform them of your position at Sartonic Labs."

"Position? What's mine?" asked Flora.

"Test subject."

Flora nodded in understanding, and then left the lab to return to the city she'd only seen during the day. Despite this, she couldn't have been prepared for the flurry of lights and activity. Flora gasped at the thriving Indian nightlife outside the facility. There seemed to be more people on the streets now than during the day. The weather was chilled but the smell of food carts, the heat lamps in bazaars, and the bright sparks of glowsticks punctuating the gloomy streetlamp-lit streets turned the city into a haven of warmth and light among the endless expanse of desert.

Flora excitedly ran to the nearest bazaar to see what they were selling. She saw rows and rows of scarves; fine silky garments studded with gems and brooches. "Are these real diamonds?" she asked excitedly.

"They are 24-carat," the shopkeeper nodded. "Five dollars each."

"Five dollars for scarves with real diamonds?" gasped Flora. "That's insane! Ooh if only I had the money!"

The next shop has shish kebabs grilling behind a clear plastic screen. Flora's stomach rumbled, and she asked against hope if there were free samples. The kebab guy laughed and said no, so she moved on.

Her first actual purchase came when she bought a pair of shorts from a street vendor. "I'm feeling a little exposed out here in just a robe..." she admitted to her friends as she slipped them on in an alleyway.

Sounds further down the alleyway intrigued her, and she left the beaten path to find children playing Kick the Can in a more residential district. "Can I play?" she asked excitedly, but kids merely took their game elsewhere, giving her weird looks. They did forget a glowstick, so Flora claimed it and returned to the main streets looking slightly less out of place with her new acquisitions.

"Oooh let's get some fireworks!" she exclaimed excitedly when she saw some men holding out rows of them on a stand. "This is so cool, its like nothing is illegal! Can we get weed out here?"

While they watched, one customer who was smoking a cigarette picked up a firework and examined it. The shopkeepers urgently demanded he put it down, but the cigarette got too close and as he dropped it in fright, it ignited, causing the entire stand to go up in smoke. Flora and the onlookers cheered at the brilliant display of color and streaks of light that lit up the sky as the owners and customer ran for their lives, cursing loudly.

"Does this happen every night?" Flora wondered in amazement as she continued drinking in the activity and excitement around here. "It's like a completely different city at night. This is so incredible...."

They were almost back at the lab. She gave Yurei a crooked smile. "Well, I've pretty much led the whole night, like you were hoping. Was there anything you'd wanted to see before we head back?"

Yu chuckled a little, giving a small, noncommittal shrug, while keeping his hands hidden behind his back.
"Well, I come down here a lot, so I've been just about everywhere. Though, if you ladies are into arcade games, there's an especially nice one a few blocks from here. Free games, and some really cool music, plus a dance floor. Bu~t before that..."
He chuckled, showing that he had gone and grabbed a selection of the scarves Flora had been eyeing earlier, as well as a to-go box of kebabs.
"Figured I'd grab these for you. The scarves are for all of you, so I figured I'd let you four pick the ones you like."
He said lightly, smiling broadly.

Smooth, you idiot. Blowing money because you like a girl. AGAIN. And you know just how this'll end, too. You'll end up alone again, just like before. After all, she was right about you. You're not worth anything to anyone, and especially aren't something a person could love...

For a brief second, Yurei's grin faltered, but he quickly tried to brush his thoughts aside, returning to his normal smiling demeanor...

"Oooooh!" squealed Flora excitedly. "I want the purple one! No, the silver one, it's got garnets! Are these garnets?" she asked the seller.

"Since there is no refunds, I'm comfortable telling you that they're all glass," he replied with a snicker.

"Well purple it is then," Flora stuck her tongue out at him and threw it around her neck. "Goes with my fur. And let's do arcades!" As someone who lived most of her life completely broke, video games were always out of her budget, though she'd always been interested in them when she was a boy.

She entered the venue and quickly decided on the one with two burly men punching each other to death. "Who wants to get their ass kicked at Street Fighter 7?" she challenged Emma and Yurei, determined fire in her eyes.

 Emma was warching the game with interest' You ever play video games?' Marie asked her " No, not really, i would watch my brothers play though . what about you?' no, never was into video games, was more interested in dolls growing up."Marie admitted ' i'll just watch, if its all the same.

"You're on!" Flora agreed, as the game flashed: Round one...FIGHT!

Flora immediately leaped forward and punched...or tried to. Her character crouched, then ducked. She hit another button and M. Bison jumped. Ugh, how do I hit? she thought, hitting buttons intently as a bead of sweat formed on her forehead.

But unbeknownst to either girl, Marita had picked the easiest character to play in the game, and after three rounds M. Bison slumped to the ground a thoroughly defeated loser while the announcer congratulated Ken on his victory. "You got me..." admitted Flora. Stepping forward, she pressed her mouth against Marita's, lips trembling only somewhat at the injustice of how badly she'd lost.

As she came out of the kiss, she looked at Yurei and bit her cheek defiantly. "But I'm not gonna lose to you, Yurei! I was just warming up!"

Flora quickly dropped the coins in and picked a new character. This time she went with Poison; she wasn't sure why, but destiny was telling her she had a connection with this character. "I don't need luck," she challenged aggressively. "Pick your poison..."

He retorted, tail lightly touching hers for a moment...

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on May 06, 2016, 10:47:13 PM

Flora gritted her teeth as the game announced Round one...FIGHT!

Jamming the joystick forward, Flora growled as the character ducked and combat-rolled. "Goddammit..." she muttered as Poison tried some grappling move that wasn't the basic punch she was hoping for.

Occasionally she landed a kick or something, but for the most part the only real trick she figured out was dodging Yurei's attacks with a spinning jump. Flora had lived a teenage life almost void of video games of any type so even things as basic as movement were struggles, much less combos or timing counter-attacks. At times she suspected Yurei was going easy on her, but it didn't matter because after three painful rounds Posion lay crumpled in the corner while the announcer praised Yang for an almost flawless victory.

Flora couldn't stop a pent-up growl from escaping her throat. "Fucking christ!" she burst out, almost punching the machine in frustration.

Yurei smiled a bit, reaching over and giving Flora a friendly, one-armed hug.
"Hey, easy there. That wasn't half bad! You're a quick study, and I bet in a few weeks you'll be kicking butts and taking names. As a matter of fact, I think I'm gonna call this a draw and give you a free pass to do whatever you want to me. Plus, you and I'll take a tour of my favorite part of the city. Sound good?"

He said amicably, tail rubbing itself against Flora's...

As Flora felt her blood pressure return to normal she realized she was making a bad impression on all her friends. Taking a deep breath, she counted quietly to ten to get a hold of herself. "Sorry sorry...I'm kind of a competitive sort..." she admitted. "You don't need to pretend I wasn't awful. I got my ass completely handed to me."

She glanced at the exit. "Looks like we're going to that place you wanted sometime soon. Probably not tonight, I think everyone's getting tired," she glanced at Emma in particular, who was showing signs of exhaustion. "We should probably get back to the labs. Is there anywhere else on the tour, Yurei?"

"But I do mean what I said. You get one free "Yurei'll do anything you want" pass."
He added, straightening his hair a bit...

Flora's pent-up resentment from the game evaporated as Marita suddenly French-kissed her in front of everyone in the arcade. Her heart skipped a beat and time seemed to stand still as Marita gave her a much more passionate kiss than the one Flora gave after losing to her at Street Fighter.

Flora's face was beet red and she could only stammer gibberish for almost half a minute after Marita broke the kiss. "Guess you, uh, don't mind that I lost to you then?" she babbled, crossing her legs and wrapping her robe more securely around her. "Between you and Yurei, I just got all the prizes we bet regardless..." Part of her felt emberrassed at how openly Marita had just displayed their love in public, but she was right, there's nothing wrong with public displays of affection...was there?

Yurei had begun to make his way towards the arcade door before Marita had kissed Flora, turning just in time to catch the tail end of the kiss. For a moment, he froze, then turned and slipped out the door quietly. As he made his way back towards the labs, he chuckled bitterly to himself.
"Hah...way to go, Yurei. Way to set yourself up to fail again... Maybe she was right. Maybe I'm not worth anything..."
He said softly to himself, kicking a small stone as he walked...
"Maybe she was right"? No, there's no maybe about it. All you are is a freak and a monster. Not like anyone could ever love something like you. You don't even have a right to be alive, and definitely don't deserve happiness. You're nothing but a tool and a mistake.
Yurei kept walking down the path silently, quietly blinking back any trace of tears...

The man shook his head. "Sorry, the restaurants close at around ten. But you are welcome to use the kitchen to prepare your own food. The are pantries with basic foodstuffs like bread, rice, and pasta. Don't take too long though; eleven o'clock is curfew."

"Curfew?" asked Flora.

"All test subjects and unauthorized personnel are required to be in their rooms with the doors locked by eleven. Roaming the hallways is not permitted and there are punishments for being caught out after hours."

Flora gulped. "Thanks for letting us know." They had about 45 minutes to prepare their food and get back to their rooms.

In another part of the residential area, Yurei sighed and chuckled to himself as he stepped into an elevator, hitting the button for one of the uppermost floors. However, as the elevator began to move, Yu allowed himself to phase out, slipping through the floor and descending into a set of old maintenance tunnels beneath the facility. Making his way down the dark, cold concrete halls, he finally turned and stepped into a caged section, filled with a variety of broken parts and miscellaneous other things that had been tossed aside. Shutting the mesh cage behind him, he made his way over to the corner farthest from the door, where a thin, worn blanket sat. Laying down and curling up against the wall, he slumped for a moment before repeatedly smacking his head into the metal pillar forming the corner.

"Stupid, stupid, stupid! Thinking that I even had a chance with someone like that... What the hell came over me? Yurei, you goddamned idiot... Why don't I just learn? Some... Thing like me isn't something anyone could ever like, let alone care for!"
He muttered, head slumping down against his chest.
Heh... I hate to admit it, but I guess all my naysayers were right. That I'm just a damn fuckup who ruins everything... Guess that means my family was right about me being alive, too. Not like I ever really doubted that, though...
He thought bitterly, picking up a shard of glass from the floor near him, holding it and turning it over in his hands a few times, then tightening his grip on it until it drew blood from his hand. Still clutching it as tight as he could, he pressed the edge of it to his wrist, drawing it across and leaving a jagged gash along his arm. He stared at the crimson welling up on his wrist and chuckled a bit.
"Heh... Why not do that a few more times... Just end it all here with all the other broken, useless things..."
He said softly, staring at his reflection in the piece of glass...

Flora led the way to the kitchen. She wasn't particularly hungry so she simply poured herself a bowl of cornflakes with honey and sugar.

Flora was only a little hungry, but the sandwich turned out to be perfect for that since it wasn't very filling. "Sounds good to me," she smiled.

She borrowed Emma's phone to call Rose and Marita. "Guess you're gonna head back into town to find Marie and her hotel, right? You two have fun with that. Tomorrow we might head into town and find you, and we can all explore together during the day."

Flora followed Emma to her bedroom. She wasn’t 100% sure if she was about to get lucky, or if Emma was truly interested in just falling asleep. After all, it had been a long day, and the vixen seemed to be genuinely sleepy when they left the city to return to the lab, and Flora certainly wasn’t going to bring the question up and look like she was trying to force it to happen.

“I’m excited to see your room!” she said chipperly, cutting into her own thoughts as she wasn’t too pleased with the doubtful unsure direction they were taking. Let’s not overthink this, she told herself, forcing her mind back to the present. Just rely on Emma to call the shots, and see where this goes…

Well I could offer you something to eat” Emma said with a smile “You hungry at all?’ She asked giving the folf a broad smile. Sorry if my room’s a bit messy.

"No no, your room looks fine!" Flora quickly assured. It was indeed smaller than Flora's, probably because Emma was just a worker and not a psionic test subject. It looked a lot more like a typical extended-stay hotel room, though it came with a kitchenette and a full-sized fridge. "Do you have anything to drink?" Flora asked, glancing at the fridge. It had been some time since lunch, and beer wasn't particularly thirst-quenching in the first place.

Well you can look in there. I might have some sodas , like Sprite or something “ Emma said ‘ sorry If I don’t have much. Paydays on Friday, and I’m scraping by until then. Take whatever you like.’ Emma blushed. Everytime she looked at Flora , she flashed back to the “test’ she had run on Flora, the taste of Flora’s dark red lips against her own, the scrape of her tongue, the bounciness of her breasts in Emma’s hands... Emma shook her head, trying not to show Flora that she was very interested in her, and part of the reason she invited her to her room, was that she could kiss those lips and caress those breasts again..

Flora gratefully popped open a can of Sprite. “I can reimburse you, promise, I’m just so parched right now,” she panted, collapsing on the bed. Taking a few more deep swigs, she realized her robe had come undone and fixed it with an awkward grin. “Not gonna lie, your bed’s definitely a one-person bed,” she observed, rolling over and only managing a half-turn. “I take it you don’t have people spend the night often?” Her tone was more joking than anything else; a small bed certainly didn't bother her, she’d managed to sleep in a queen with Marita, Rose and Marie all squished in with her. But by broaching the topic she hoped she might get Emma to reveal whether she intended Flora to stay and sleep with her.

“No, you’re actually the first person I’ve invited up here since I got the place. I haven’t had it long, and of course money is always an issue. If I had more money, I could afford a bigger bed, or a second bed of similar size. But, right now I have just enough to pay rent and get some bare essentials. What’s left goes in that coin jar over there.’ she motioned to a jar on the dresser which was about a third full of coins.” don’t know much money is there exactly, Fifty bucks, maybe?’ She shrugged “ so, Flora… did you like kissing me during the stimulating test?’ She said nervously.

Flora’s heart skipped a beat. “Yes, I did!” she answered quickly. “And I hope you realize when I said about smaller beds, I don't mind.” She quickly scooted to make room. “It's way comfier than the bench, and we both fit on that, right?” she chuckled, masking her nervousness. What if Emma thought she was being too forward?

“Yes we did, although a bench isn’t exactly the most romantic place to get intimate. Flora. I think you’re beautiful, and I think you sell yourself short by being so shy. I’m guessing, just spitballing here, that it’s because you’ve tried other folks in the past, and things didn’t go well. I know the feeling, there was this girl in high school that I asked to the prom, when the few guys I asked first turned me down. And, well, I had a crush on the girl, and she seemed to reciprocate. 'Seemed' being the operative word. See Flora, if things had gone a bit differently, you wouldn't have been my first kiss. She would have been, and quite likely more than that. I think we would have had sex that night, two high school girls trying out other girls. And, had her feelings for me been genuine, I don't know, I would have introduced her to my family as my girlfriend and we would have started an open relationship.Full of lots of kissing, foreplay, and sex. Her name, in case you are wondering was Marta. Marta Crull.": Emma said said dabbing at her eyes, which had started to be misty.

Flora could tell Emma was revealing a very emotional moment from her past, and putting a lot of trust in her by being so honest. She put her arm around her. "I'm so sorry. Believe me, I know all about rejection and it's always gut-wrenching." Flora set her soda aside and slowly graduated to a full hug while she continued. "But I think you sell yourself short too. I can't believe you're still single, to be honest; you're kind, you're outgoing, and you're really beautiful," Flora broke the hug and smiled. "Marta's decision says everything about her, and you were lucky to dodge that bullet. You're worth more than someone who would do that."

Her heart was thudding because of how close she was to Emma. She felt every fiber of the robe on her body and ached to throw it off and snuggle with her under the covers, but still her fear of rejection kept her from doing more than giving reassuring words.

' I didn't know that at the time. You see, back then I looked nothing like I do now. My chest hadn't developed, and I was wearing braces. I was , well, considered a bit of a dork. Marta, well , she was one of the popular girls, always had a couple guys hanging around her, like moths flitting around a flame. Had a couple gal pals as well, one of them was named Staci. Staci was ok, she would wave to me whenever I would come by. Anyway, the first of the school dances was coming up, and i really wanted to go. I tried approaching a couple guys, they were in the band and choir- I went to the football and basketball games, but i wouldn't be what you would call a superfan, and the football players were pretty much lunk heads.- anyway I'm getting sidetracked. They couldn't make it. Marta had several boyfriends, none of them stayed her boyfriend for long, it would be on, then off then on again then off again. The guy she was seeing at the time was named Marcus, who was a football player, and who had all the charisma of cement. Then had gone through several breakups at that point, it was a joke among the gossip I heard at school. Who's ugly, who's nerdy, who's introverted , who's lesbian, that sort of thing. Girls can be as mean as guys, if not meaner. I mean if I looked like this then, well I wouldn't have been considered a dork.I almost certainly would have been treated better.and if I had to do that over again, I would have asked Staci to the dance instead of Marta. She was a lot nicer to me than Marta was, that for sure." Emma said

"I never really experienced any of that," Flora admitted, "because I went to an all-boys boarding school. I can't even say anyone was mean to me, I just mostly kept to myself. But it sounds like I dodged a bullet, because I was a pretty ordinary boy. Nobody would have looked at me twice either." She gave Emma a reassuring smile. "You do realize you were so much braver than me, right? You walked up to someone you had a crush on and you asked them. You were honest with yourself about your body and your sexuality. That's huge; that's something most people can't do, especially not in high school. Don't worry about what those people said."

"I cared. I wasn't thinking ' hey, i'm a lesbian. Let me find some hot girl to kiss in public'. I asked her, because i liked her, and I thought she liked me. I wasn't what I am now, had I been I would have received a lot more attention, from guys, and probably from girls as well. I mean, you. really really opened my mind to some things Flora..' Emma said reaching out and caressing the hem of Flora's robe. ' but 3 years ago. I wasn't very confident with myself. I asked her, on a lark, and because the guys had turned me down. It was chance , really. I think Marta saw it as way of rubbing it in her boyfriend's face, the fact that she was going to the dance without him. I was just a pawn really. But since I didnt have many friends at that point, i didnt have anyone to tell me to go with someone else, or to go with instead.."

"You opened my eyes to a lot of things too," Flora admitted, blushing as Emma caressed her robe. "I'd never really been with someone my own age...hell I don't think I've even carried a conversation with anyone but adults in years. After running away from school I got caught up in the gang scene where everyone was so much older than me. So it was nice getting to be with you privately. Even now." She knew she was rambling but she was relishing the chance to talk to someone who truly understood her and what she's been going through.

" Well you were into gang stuff huh? Well at least you weren't driving around shooting people for kicks and grins. And you didn't know any better. So Flora, how many girls have you kissed, besides me?' Emma asked. : if it's a lot, well you don't have to name all of them. But if it's less than 5, well, then I'm in a very select group' Emma blushed as she moved her face close to Flora's, their red lips inches apart. ""One I'm flattered to be a member of. So, how many, and what are their names?

"Just drug running," Flora added quickly. "Nothing violent. Usually." Her face turned red. "It was a tough crowd. Ummmm, as for kissing girls...well, I did kiss this one druggie at a concert that I'm mostly sure was a girl...but I didn't get her name." Flora's head was spinning; her instinct was telling her to stop talking and keep her sordid past to herself, that anything she told Emma was only going to scare her off. "And then one time I delivered to an island and one of the natives kissed me since it was their custom. Her name was Nuvia, and she was super hot. I couldn't even change into my bikini afterwards until my boner calmed down a bit, super embarrassing." Her brain continued to scream at her that she was horrendously dropping the ball, and finally it caught up with her mouth before she went into the night with an unconscious drugged-out Emilena. "And, uh, I think that's it, other than the girls I'm living with now. Marie, Marita, and Rose recently showed me a thing or two when we reconnected here in Iraq. So you're on a list of six. And if we kiss again, you'll be the only one who made the list more than once…" she giggled.

" Six huh? So you're comfortable kissing other girls then. Well You have more experience than I do, certainly.

"To be fair, four of you only happened in the last 48 hours," Flora admitted. "I wasn't exactly experienced before that…."

" still you have more experience than I do " Emma said ' besides, you seem to be confiding in me as much as i have been in you, even if it's been sort of a rushed ' I kissed this girl, then that girl.. That girl we got all the way' sort of stream of consciousness thing. Hey, I'm not one to judge. You lived your life the way you wanted. And I admire people who can do that. So, tell me more about your current girlfriends- Marita, Marie and rose. What are they like?. I assume, given the fact that you've kissed them, that they like girls.. Which i'm fine with. If I'm going to be an open lesbian, I need to learn from other girls anyway" Emma shrugged, reached forward and slipped her right paw under Floras robe and caressed her right breast.

Flora started to reply but her breath caught in her throat when Emma groped her. "Marita and...ohhh...the others? Well, of them, Rose is the bustiest, and has the most sexual experience, so she's a lot of fun in bed...Marie is very forward and likes to make love in different places like the shower or the floor...and Marita is into different sex acts like oral and boobjobs. So they're a pretty versatile bunch, and very open-minded, just depends on what you're interested in!" This talk and Emma's caressing had given her an erection her robe was doing a poor job of hiding. "Were you...thinking of sleeping with them too? I bet they'd be open to it."

"Well, if they are as good in bed as you say, then sure i'll sleep with them, as a learning experience. But you first Flora. You're in the batter's box and I want you to take your best swing at me. Now.. lets kiss' Emma threw hers arms around Flora neck and kissed her firmly on the lips the dark red lips locking together passionately.

Flora's eyes opened in surprise as Emma kissed her. Her hands quickly grasped at the vixen's shirt and pulled it over her head. "Mmmmmmm…" Flora purred happily, unclasping Emma's bra excitedly. She slipped her hands underneath and cupped the girl's breasts, reciprocating the massage. This time we don't have to worry about Kojurro walking in… she thought contentedly. Shifting her weight, she took over the momentum of their kiss. Her robe came undone, revealing her flushed lower body.

Emma slid her tongue into Flora's mouth, and pressed her breasts against Flora's moaning in pleasure as she did so. She allowed Flora to undress her, her eyes taking in the folf;s form.

Flora's eyes opened wide in surprise. Quickly finishing undressing the vixen, she returned the kiss passionately. As she realized that Emma was just as interested in at least cuddling as Flora was, she pressed Emma into the covers and laid fully on top of her. Spread completely across the bed, their bodies pressed into each other as the makeout got hotter and heavier.

Emma felt Flora climb on top of her and vigorously probed Floras mouth with her tongue. Emma reached for Floras breasts and began to intensely fondle them Emma had bigger breasts than Flora, in fact they were likely twice as big. The breasts colliding together were like an apple bouncing against a watermelon. Emma felt Floras privates scrape against the inside of her leg, she could tell the folf wanted to mate with her- and she wanted that as well " Emma finally broke the kiss- ' Flora.. Make love to me ' She panted " i want to feel you inside me, rattling around."

Flora felt her mind light up as Emma gave her permission to do what she'd been desperately yearning for since they'd entered the room. Part of her mind was wondering if Emma had any condoms, but she didn't want to kill the mood. Besides, she rationed to herself, they live in a high-tech laboratory, there's got to be advanced forms of birth control a available, right? Worst case scenario, she'd buy a morning - after pill for Emma.

Positioning herself between Emma's legs, she felt the vixens crotch and found it more than adequately lubricated. She really does want it, Flora wondered in surprise. All her worrying that Emma was faking due to being a virgin evaporated, and she slowly pushed in. Mmph...it's really--tight--, she grunted, trying to force it in but not wanting to hurt Emma. "Tell me if I'm going too fast or if anything hurts," she told her lover quickly. She wasn't sure what was blocking her...was it the hymen? She kept prodding, and suddenly with shock she felt the resistance break and she slid in fully. "Emma are you all right?" she stammered with alarm, hoping she hadn't hurt her. "I think I just...took your virginity…"

Yeah, because thats happens when a girl makes love for the first time' Emma said,' there's a pack of condoms in the desk drawer. I got them for protection, in case i found a guy who was into me and wanted to get intimate. Wasn't expecting to find out my first lover would be a girl with a working pecker. Ahh ' she tensed as she felt Flora move around inside her. She kissed Flora passionately, scrapping her tongue against Floras and moaning as the folf made love to her.

Flora shuddered but with great effort forced herself to pull out and walked over to grab a condom. One quick unroll later and she was back on top of her lover. Sliding in much easier this time, she pressed her hands into Emma's giant breasts, their soft supple flesh enveloping her fingers with room to spare. Moaning with every thrust, Flora shut her eyes and focused on the sensations of sex.

Flora could tell Emma was enjoying herself completely, and decided that her goal for their first lovemaking session was to last as long as possible. With no pressure to finish, she indulged in Emma's body and lost all sense of the passage of time. Minutes ticked by, maybe hours, and Flora pumped away contentedly, panting and full of lustful contentedness.

After about thirty minutes, Emma pushed Flora off of her, the folfs juices dripping out of her privates. Emma panted heavily, her mind racing as the full impact of what had just happened slowly sank into her. " Wow.. You were great Flora. Just, er, give me like 20 minutes or so, to shower and clean myself, i've got a lot of goo down there..mixed with blood and secretions

Flora was panting heavily from exertion, and gladly let Emma slide their sweaty bodies apart and leave for the bathroom. Flora rolled onto her back and breathed in deep ragged gulps. The lovemaking had felt more intense than any she'd experienced up to this point; her slow but steady tempo caused her orgasm to brew slowly, minute after minute of increasingly intense contractions that never even brimmed over; Emma was apparently not experienced enough to tell when an ejaculation hadn't actually happened. Flora didn't mind; she suspected they weren't done yet.

Her fur was glistening with sweat, and her arms and legs were so tired from holding herself up that she couldn't even think about getting out of bed. Still in her dreamlike trance, she contentedly lay on the bedcovers and waited patiently for Emma's shower to finish. She hoped that Emma would be interested in snuggling under the covers after they were finally done; Flora had always fantasized about snuggling with someone her age, and Emma's ultra-soft skin made her an ideal candidate. Thank god this bed's just big enough for two, she thought dreamily.

Emma felt the hot water ran down her body, between her legs the water was a shade of crimson as she bled into the tub. She ran her Claws over her breasts and sniffed her hand, feeling the smell of flora on her fingertips. She knew that Flora had ejaculateed into her, she had felt the internal release as her lesbian lover had climaxed."I'm no longer a virgin, and I'm going to have to tell my family that i found someone..another girl." Emma said softly to herself, wincing slightly as she lay in the tub and felt the water lap against her privates which no longer had the protective hymen.She wasnt bleeding as much now, and the cum had washed off as well.. Emma finished and got out of the rub, draining it. She returned to the room, not bothering to put on fresh clothes." ding, ding' she said upon seeing Flora" round 2. This time I'M on top, dear Flora. Tomorrow morning you're going to wake up to me kissing you.' she said with a grin

Flora looked excitedly at her lover. "I'm ready!" she exclaimed happily. Her erection was already at full mast, and she continued to lay spread out across the bed, beckoning Emma to take her position. She relished looking at the vixen's body; the curves of her thighs and legs up to the locks of hair framing her round soft face. She'd never looked at anyone this way before, even her past sexual partners; somehow Emma felt different.

Emma jumped onto Flora and began kissing her passionately on the lips, feeling Flora beneath her..' Thank you, for this night Flora. I promise, it won't be a night i'll soon forget. After all, I'm not a virgin, thanks to you." Emma said with a grin on her face between kisses.

Flora felt herself slide into Emma far easier than the first time and with a satisfied groan quickly resumed thrusting. She couldn't resist staring at Emma's breasts bobbing as she bounced up and down on top of her, and as Flora slowly settling back into the cycle, she felt time slowly lose meaning as she became lost in the sensations of sex.

After such extensive stimulation from their first session, Flora knew she wouldn't be able to last long. Keeping her mind as blank as possible, she quickly found herself battling her body to keep her orgasm at bay. It was an intense balance of wills with herself, one that she couldn't hope to win. Her breathing became higher-pitched and she let out uncontrollable tiny yelps as she neared her climax. "Emma--" she grunted, trying to warn her lover, but Emma was pumping her past the point of no return.

Flora's eyes flew open and a load moan escaped the back of her throat as her climax coursed through her. After bubbling up for so long, the resulting orgasm filled her entire abdomen and the ejaculation felt so long she suddenly worried she'd break the condom. But it held, and with ragged gulps for air Flora once again relaxed limply onto the sweat-soaked blankets. "Oh...man..." she breathed, tongue draped along the pillow. "Hope that was as good for you...as it was for me..."

"It was amazing' emma said as she wiped herelf off with towel, then handed it to Flora " go take a shower, and once you are done, its time for bed. I.. don't have any energy left' Emma said resting on her side of the bed."Just , dont use up all the hot water' She added.' Flora, it goes without saying that you were amazing" she smiled. I'll probably be asleep by the time you get out, just to forewarn you."

Flora winced as she eased herself out of the bed. "I'll be really quick," she assured Emma. She didn't want to miss the opportunity for some post-coital cuddles. Disposing of the condom, she scrubbed herself off with a quick shower, wincing painfully as her muscles wondered irritably why they were being forced to do things again.

Before 90 seconds had passed she'd toweled off and was back in bed under the covers. "Looks like you weren't asleep yet," she smiled, wrapping her arms around Emma and spooning her lovingly. "I didn't want to miss the chance to cuddle with you while you were awake…"

" Well, You caught me just in time" Emma Said taking Emma into her arm. Sleep rapidly took it and her last move before falling asleep entirely was to kiss Flora on the lips. The dark red lips locked together for the last time that night and both girls were soon fast asleep, still kissing.

After a particularly memorable night,Flora's eyes snapped open at exactly 5 am. She had no idea why she woke up that early; she never woke up that early, especially not after an insane workout like she'd gotten she'd gotten last night. And why was her heart beating so fast? Was it love?

No. It was anxiety. Flora sighed silently. Now that she'd had a full night for her thoughts to marinate and the fire in her loins had been sated, she needed to resolve the situation she'd found herself. She'd gone from zero lovers less than a week ago to five, a staggering multiplication she'd hardly had time to come to grips with. And already these various lovers were coming to blows out of desire to spend time with her. It was a less pitiable problem than her previous forced chastity, but she didn't want to make anyone happy. But how much more can one folf do?

Not much, she admitted wistfully. And that's when an insane idea popped into her head. For several minutes she lay perfectly still, chest and legs pressed up against Emma's, almost hoping the vixen would wake up and remove any chance Flora had of exploring this idea of hers. After all the bed was quite warm, and there's no chance Flora got a full night's sleep. But finally she gathered up the willpower to extricate herself from the covers. She needed to resolve this soon as possible, for everyone's sake.

Hoping Emma didn't mind if she borrowed some clothes (her robe was in dire need of cleaning), Flora slipped on a skirt and blouse, blushing somewhat at how feminine her outfit was. Emma was definitely more girly than Flora, she didn't own a single pair of jeans or a T-shirt.

Flora slipped into the hallway and quickly retraced her steps to the part of the labs where Taga lived. Quickly she located the elder rat, who had indeed made good on his promise and decorated the walls with slips of white paper.

The man was sitting in a meditative stance, and cracked one eye open. "Hi. You're...awake early," Flora remarked politely, smiling awkwardly.

"I'm meditating. And you're interrupting," he answered simply, reclosing his eye.

"I'm sorry about that. If you want--" Flora started, but the man cut her off.

"No, its too late. Meditation is like a souffle; interrupt it before it's finished and it'll deflate before your eyes." The man got to his feet. "But I'll forgive you if you've brought me another gift."

"To, uhhhh, duplicate?" Flora gulped. "I might have. But I wanted to know a bit more about it first."

The man frowned. "I am not an exhibit on a guided tour!" he protested, folding his arms.

Flora sighed and fished around the pockets in her blouse. Locating a spare button sewn into the hem of the skirt, she pinched it off with her claws and passed it over. "I just want to get to know you a little. What's your name?"

"Marly," he replied eagerly, snatching the button and turning it into a short stack within a millisecond.

"And Marly, is there a limit to what you can duplicate? What happens to the original?" she asked.

"Duplicated items shouldn't stay apart for long," Marly replied, spreading his arms around his relatively barren cell. "Else I'd have decorated this place a hundred times over. I always re-merge everything before 24 hours pass. I can always tell which is the original." To demonstrate he selected a specific button and used it to flip the others along the ground like a game of tiddlywinks.

"Have you ever duplicated a living person?" Flora asked, mouth going slightly dry.

"Oh, of course. I used to charge people for the privileged." Marly flipped a button into the washbasin. "Got a little too successful, that's how I wound up here."

"What used to happen to those people?" Flora urged.

Marly began to detect the urgency in her voice and cocked an eyebrow. "Something tells me this isn't just innocent curiosity." Flora shifted her feet. "Those days are behind me, I assure you. But to answer your question; there were no complications, most of them loved it and I re-merged each of them within 24 hours. I got a little bit richer, they walked away happy, and I never asked questions."

"Please do that to me!" Flora burst out. "I need to be in two places at once! My friends are counting on me!"

"Girl, don't be daft." Marly duplicated a new set of buttons due to flipping all his old ones into the basin. "Management would know it was me in a heartbeat. I could get in a lot of trouble."

"I'd stay away from myself," Flora urged him. "And I'll bring you a new trinket every time. Both of me would! You can even make requests!"

Marly chuckled and shook his head. "I desire no particular items more than anything else," he assured her. "If you're hoping to sweet-talk me into this, it won't work. And have you considered not splitting apart your very essence just for the benefit of other people? Surely you don't me to tell you that's a bad idea."

"There must be something you need," Flora pleaded. "Something you'd never told anyone. This is your chance. I'll help you. We can help each other."

Marly paused. "You're making a mistake," he grumbled. "But there is something you can do for me." He held his hand out. "Deliver a message from me to Taga. Don't tell her it's from me."

Flora stuck her hand through the bars. "Deal!" She expected Marly to shake it, but instead he tapped her palm lightly, and suddenly there was a blinding flash of light. Flora grunted and covered her eyes, and when she looked again she was staring right into her own eyes. Another fully-fledged Flora, dressed in the same blouse and skirt.

"Oh my god!" Both Floras gasped.

Marly nodded approvingly. "Damn, that was a good one. I surprise myself sometimes, even got all the clothes right."

"Wait--" said both Floras, planning to ask who was the original, but then both broke off when they interrupted each other. Both looked at Marly, then at each other, then their jaws dropped open as they realized they were sharing identical thoughts.

Marly chuckled. "Here. Let's get some talking turns down. It'll settle out after that." He held his button up. "Smooth side up, lefty talks first, bumpy side up, righty. capiche?" He flipped the button. All three watched as it landed.

"So I get to talk first?" one of them said.

"Wait, I thought I was left," the other protested.

"Then why didn't you talk first?" the first asked.

"Cause you're in the way so I couldn't tell what side the button landed!"

"Ladies," interrupted Marly. "You're welcome. The less time you spend together the better the memories will be, trust me. And you've got a deal to follow through on." He glanced at left Flora. "You leave first. Go do your things. Other one, you can leave in like fifteen minutes, after delivering my message. Meet back up here by tonight and I'll rejoin you and put this all behind us."

Both Floras nodded, and the chosen one headed back up the hallway. Returning to Emma's room, Flora removed her clothes, put them neatly back in the drawer, and resumed her spooning of Emma. I hope other me has fun with Yurei today...

Meanwhile, the other Flora walked over to Taga to see if she was awake. "Hello?" she said softly. It was far darker at this end of the cellblock, and Flora couldn't even tell where the older woman was, or if she was awake.

As Flora approached her cell, Taga's eyes lit up from the corner.
"Ah, it's you again, Flora. Or... Should I say doppelganger of Flora?"
She chuckled, gliding her way up to the glass with a smirk.
"What brings you to visit little old me today, hmm?"

Down in the maintenance tunnels, Yurei slowly cracked one eye open, glancing around for a moment before getting up, checking to make sure that the bloodstains from the previous night weren't too obvious. Finally satisfied nobody would notice them, he slipped over to the elevator, phasing into it and riding it up to the floor his room was on. Once inside his room, he quickly made his way over to the bathroom, pulling out a set of long bandages and some antiseptic, which he quickly used to clean the set of cuts along both his arms. Wrapping both arms from mid-forearm down in the bandages, he nodded a bit, heading to his room to grab a change of clothes. Flicking through his closet, he picked a red and black version of his outfit, slipping into it and nodding a bit as he made his way back out the door and towards the elevator...

"Hey!" protested Flora. "What's that supposed to mean? I'm still Flora, the other one's the duplicate!"

She balled her fists, then realized she was disrespecting her elder. "Sorry, sorry..." she amended hastily. "How'd you even know I was split? And, uh, I've got a message for you. From a...secret admirer. They say, 'Hi Taga. How are you doing?'"

Taga chuckled lightly, grinning at the folf.
"Oh, it's as simple as your emotions, dearie. They're ever-so-slightly different than when you're whole."
She said, humming a bit as Flora delivered the message.
"Hmm, oh is that so? Who'd have thought a little old spinster like me could have an admirer. You tell him that I'm doing well, and I hope he is, too."
She said, a faint blush on her cheeks.
"Oh, and Flora? Don't worry. Yu will never be able to tell the difference."
She added teasingly...

Flora committed Taga's reply message to memory. "You know I'm doing this for Yurei, right? He doesn't like how I'm spending time with other people, so now he'll have a Flora all to himself." Her eyes clouded. "You told me to help him, I'm a bit worried for him. Maybe he just needs someone who can literally give him constant attention."

Taga shook her head.
"Oh, dear. You should never do something for the sake of someone else. And I dare say you misread Yu. He's not the type for anger or possessiveness. Most likely, he was trying to avoid causing you trouble, and running scared because of it."
She said gently, shaking her head softly.

"Maybe..." replied Flora, not wholly convinced. Taga hadn't seen him last night. "Well, I'm off to see him now, so we'll see what happens. I've only got a bit before I get merged back, so I'll talk to you later."

She returned to Marly on the other side of the cellblock. "She says, uh, she's doing well, and hopes you are too."

Marly smiled dreamily from behind tiny stacks of buttons. "Thankye, lass. That'll be all, I'm sure you've stuff to do."

Flora quickly hurried to the upper levels. She was thinking of what Taga said. "You should never do something for the sake of someone else..." Well that can't be a hard and fast rule, otherwise nobody would ever help each other. She was convinced she was still doing the right thing.

Checking with the receptionist, she learned the location of Yurei's room and quickly darted over to it. She bit her lip. It was almost 6am, he was probably asleep.

She knocked anyway. She was pretty tired herself, maybe he'd be down to sleep together.

"Oh, yeah, the...uh, circulatory test went well!" Flora stammered. "Everything's normal. You got school, huh? That sounds cool. What classes do you have today?" She knew what Emma actually meant by her school comment, but it would distract Emma to have to supply a correction. Flora suddenly realized she was still wearing Emma's blouse and skirt. "Er, sorry for borrowing your clothes. I didn't bring a change of my own from last night." Grabbing a bowl from the cupboard, she poured herself a bowl of cereal; she'll reimburse Emma soon, but right now she was really hungry.

"Sounds good to me. Maybe they'll be interested in going swimming!" Flora finished her cereal and washed the dishes in the sink, including the ones that were there previously; washing the host's dishes is one of the ways a guest can show appreciation for their hospitality. "Yesterday's adventure in the desert has made me miss the water even more than before!"

Yurei's ears flicked as he heard the knock on his door.
Who could that be...? Not like anyone knows my room number... Or cares...
He thought to himself, getting up off his couch and making his way over to the door, peeping out to see Flora. He mentally panicked for a second, quickly straightening his clothes before opening the door.
"Oh, uh... Hey, Flora."
He said softly...

She shifted her feet, wondering if he was going to invite her in or simply answer her question and politely close the door. She'd left his options open so as not to intrude on his privacy.

Flora breathed a sigh of relief and accepted Yurei's offer. "Not gonna lie, had a tough time sleeping last night," she yawned as she stepped into his room. "Which is why I finally said screw it and came down here. Hope you weren't asleep or anything."

She glanced around his room. "Wow, it's...a lot neater than I expected, not gonna lie." she noted approvingly. "I've been in my room less than a day and it already looks worse than yours."

Flora smiled and wrapped her arms around Emma. "Last night was awesome," she replied, kissing Emma lightly. "It made me so happy, and I can't wait for it to happen again." She smiled. "As for swimming, guess I'll have to purchase a bathing suit. Bikini bottoms are kinda revealing for me, I might have to rock a Speedo and hope I don't look too silly."

She glanced at Emma's wardrobe. "Unless you've got bathing suits for me to borrow. If you do, would you be okay with my trying them on and seeing if they fit me?"

Flora placed her hand softly on his. "Hey, calm down," she smiled, "I don't mind. We all have our off-days, and this is really new for me too. I'm going to work on showing more concern for your feelings, so that won't happen again."

"Cause if I'm reading the signs right, I might slip out of these clothes soon enough so we don't make a mess on them."

The pool was indoors, a large white-walled rectangle that smelled strongly of chlorine. A Jacuzzi sat in a raised portion of the room, and a sign next to the empty lifeguard tower noted that the lifeguard came on duty at 10:00, an hour from now.

Flora knelt beside the deep end and nodded approvingly at the water's temperature. The pool was cold but not chilled, perfect for this sweltering desert environment. She resisted the urge to dive in immediately; she said she'd wait for Emma, Marita and the other girls to arrive. So instead she sat in the corner, watching the ripples and munching on a Pop-Tart from the vending machine.

"I want you to take control of me, have your way with me." Her hand slid into his pants. "Make me your plaything..."

At least she knew he was STD-free; before coming to his room, she'd had the labs test both her blood and his semen stains on her robe. It was pretty embarrassing, but worth it. Otherwise, there's no way she'd be allowing him to bareback her, especially this early in their relationship.

Flora's mind was whirling. Is he actually gonna give a rimjob? Maybe I'm reading the signs wrong. She had no idea that somebody could want to do that, but part of her had always secretly wanted to experience one. "Do you...want me to clean it out first or anything?" she asked, just to be safe. Even if she's overthinking how far he plans to go, it's a valid question even for anal.

"Awesome!" Flora grabbed a chocolate-frosted donut excitedly. "I'm going to take a quick dip in the actual pool first, then let's jacuzzi!" Considering her goal was to cool off after spending so much time in the sweltering desert environment, she wanted at least to soak her body in the refreshing cold water. After finishing her donut, she took to the deep end with a hypocritical "Remember not to swim right after you eat, Emma!"

Taking the diving board at full bounce, Flora careened through the air at a speed that surprised even herself. The elasticity of the board sent her arching dangerously into the middle of the pool, which was luckily still deep enough that she decelerated before hitting the floor, though it was close.

She came up gasping for air. "Cripes! Careful with that board, it's scary springy." Swimming for the ladder, she was halfway there when she realized her breasts felt a little...free. "Aah!" she gasped when she realized Emma's over-sized bikini top had completely slipped off her from the dive.

Flora peeped quietly, her brain having trouble handling the sensations. Unlike most of the other sexual activities she'd tried in the past few days, she had never really given much thought to this one, so she had no fantasies to compare it to, and so far it wasn't comparing to anything she'd felt before. It felt oddly uncomfortable, far more taboo than her past relatively vanilla activities, but it felt like that feeling of doing something forbidden was part of the allure.

"Guess it's nothing you girls haven't seen before," Flora grinned, slipping out of her bikini and into the jacuzzi. Keeping her hands outside the water so she could have a second donut soon, Flora directed her attention to Emma. "Hey, you should tell the girls a little about yourself. You haven't really had a chance to meet them without distractions like Yurei's tour." For her part, Flora planned to keep silent for a bit, let her girlfriends talk among themselves and get to know each other better.

Flora looked at the girls in the hot tub with her. Emma was getting the chance to really meet Marie,, Rose and Marita without distractions for the first time. She wondered what they'd choose to talk about, and planned to keep her own input to a minimum. After all, everybody knew Flora quite well by this point.
" so tell me about yourself Marita " Emma said " I'm guessing Flora's told you a bit about me. I'm 18, got a job here in order to pay for school, and well I havent had much luck with my personal life..' " Well, I'm 25, i graduated with a degree in Computers- Maintenance, upkeep, spam cleanout, that sort of thing. Puts creds in my pocket, and I'm very good at it.Flora's told us some things- like you're a bombshell' Marita smirked. " and if you forgive my frankness, she was understating it.You're supermodel level beautiful. We're talking Vogue or Cosmos." Emma blushed nearly as red as her lips." You Flatter me.' She said. laughing nervously."
"It's true, don't be so humble!" Flora teased. "Ask Rose, she has a lot of experience in her background when it comes to feminine beauty, you can take her opinion as professionally informed!"
" Well, not to put too fine a spin on it, but I was a dancer at a nightclub' Rose said " So I got to see the whole gamut, literally." A stripper?Emma blushed ' Yes, yes, and it was about as unglamorous as a job can be. But over the years I got a good sense about the sexuality of my customers. I found the lesbians tipped the best.' Rose reached forward and cupped Emma's face in her paw , and gazed into Emma's eyes intently for a few seconds. A smile slowly spread over Rose's dark red lips. "So, you discovered yourself in high school, huh? Pretty regular, if you are into girls. It was about that time I started noticing Marita over here, although we didn't start having a full-on relationship until college." "Um.. In High school. I wasnt anything like I am now' Emma said " I was a late bloomer."
Flora smiled at how forward Rose was being with Emma's personal space. The vixen is going to have to get used to the girls' more touchy-feely attitudes, especially with females they find attractive. "What do you think, Marie?" Flora asked, hoping to get everyone into the conversation.
" Marie chuckled ' Rose has the strongest gaydar I've ever seen. A short glance in the eyes, and she can tell which way you swing, even if you don;t know it yourself yet. It's eerie, really. Me, I was a co-worker with Rose at the club. Wasn't a dancer though, I served drinks, and occasionally slipped Rose some creds when she was low on them. Rose and Marita, are very open about what they are. They like girls, and aren't afraid to show it. 50 years ago or so, they couldn't do that, they would have had to cover up who they are, and marry some dudes for propriety's sake. As for me personally I'm 23, went to school to study art, believe it or not. But art doesn't sell unless you're Van Gogh or something, so I took what jobs were available. Flipping burgers, dressing up as a clown for kids parties, and finally as a ' waitress' at this bar." Marie said. " thats where I met Rose here.
Flora nodded. "I'm bummed I never got to visit the Electric Sheep, it sounded like a pretty pimping club." She regarded Emma. "Your turn to talk a bit about yourself! You've got such an amazing story, all you've accomplished going into modeling after high school." Flora was just making sure Emma felt comfortable talking about herself; sometimes shy people need help starting the process of coming out of their shell.
" Yeah, i'm studying to be a model' Emma said ", like you see in those perfume commercials snogging with a studly guy. But those model colleges aren't cheap, unfortunately . Which is why I signed up for the gig. I wore braces in high school and didn't go out much- i tried to go out with a girl named Marta- she ended up being a huge bitch, should have gone with my friend Cindi instead.. I have 2 older brothers Matt, who's 4 years older and Morris who's 3 years older. They're great guys, and I'm not just saying that because I'm their sister' Emma laughed
"You should invite them to visit Sartonic!" gasped Flora. "They sound awesome, I'd love to meet them!" she fiddled with the nozzle so the jets fired harder; she liked her Jacuzzis intense. "Let me know if it gets too hot for you girls," she grinned, increasing the temperature. "I usually prefer my water either scorching hot or frigid cold. Just a weird preference of mine."

" well, they are busy in school unfortunately. Matt is a senior, majoring in law, and Morris is a junior and wants to be a doctor' Emma said.' As for the water temperature, I like it warm, but not too warm.. Warm enough to be relaxing, but not warm enough so it's scalding. But whatever makes you comfortable, Flora, is what we go with, you are by the bath controls after all.

Flora smiled contentedly and shimmied down into the bubbles. Truth be told, she was feeling somewhat sleepy after waking up so early, but not sleepy enough to go randomly falling asleep in a public pool. It was just a languid drowsiness that helped her lose track of time, just immerse herself in the heat and let the water soak through her fur.

‟ So you have family ‵ Rose said. ‵ i was an only child, both my parents were miners in the Saratoga Mines. They managed to save enough money so I could go to school. I managed to get accepted to a college, and managed to graduate with a degree- art history.

Seconds turned into minutes, the bubbles cycled through every color of the rainbow and the water around Flora got ever hotter. It felt like days had passed while the young tired folf marinated in the tub, a folf who had lived through enough excitement for a week in the couple dozen hours since joining Sartonic. Despite her best efforts and the fascinating conversation her tub mates were having, Flora drifted off into a peaceful nap.

Rose approached Emma and took the vixen in her arms, giving her a winning smile.Emma blushed as she got a close look at Rose, who was, to her, stunning, upon close inspection.” are you going to kiss me, Rose?” Emma asked softly ‵ of course, my lovely . Just not yet. Lets see your chest, and in turn I will show you mine.’ Rose smiled, showing her canines in a broad smile. ‟ Marita took a brief glance at at the pair then moved over to the controls and turned the temperature down by 20 degrees from 110 to 90. Emma Took off her top with some trepidation, and set it aside. And Rose followed a half minute later. Rose then leaned in, pressing her breasts to Emmas and the dark red lips locked together as Rose kissed Emma firmly on the lips, 9drawing a murmur of surprise from the vixen.

Flora was completely missing the peep show happening right in front of her. Her head tilted back to lay on the concrete tiling surrounding the jacuzzi, her breasts bobbed languidly in the bubbles, and her arms floated buoyantly under the force of the jets. light snores escaped her throat thanks to the somewhat odd position of her neck, and a jet shooting bubbles directly into the small of her back was giving her the unconscious satisfaction of a dreamless massage.

Emma and Rose settled into a vigorous passionate and demonstrative sexual session, as both girls fondled each others breasts and butt, their lips locked together and their tongues ensconced in each others mouth. ‟ Marita grabbed Flora by her shoulders and shook her awake, one paw on her shoulder the other on Floras breast.

Flora let out a single snore as Marita gently shook her awake. “Whu…?” she blinked sleepily, then glanced at Rose and Emma scissoring passionately. “Oh, excellent, are we doing sexies right now?” she mumbled, recovering slowly from her disorientation. Drowsily stimulating herself, she spread her legs and pushed the bubbles aside. “Who wants to make love to the cute folf?” she asked sleepily.
You’ll get tag-teamed’ Marie said coming up to Flora and kissing her on the lips. Marita joined in as well, and began kissing both Flora and Marie. Emma and Rose made love passionately for nearly an hour until the sauna timer ran out and bubbles stopped flowing. Emma finally broke the kiss, and panted loudly as she lay limp in Rose’s arms ‵ Damn. Flora told me you were real good , Rose. but MAN, did she undersell it. ‟ Well, my dear Emma, i’ve been doing this sort of thing for several years now. I’ve seen just about anything, even guys packing female breasts. You get used to it in my line of work. For a girl just discovering the fair sex, you were real good Emma. Good body, nice soft breasts, wonderfully kissable lips. You’ll make some girl a fine wife, or if you wanna join our little group, you can have as much girl-girl sex as you like. We really enjoy these kinda flings.’ Rose said with a smile as Emma finally put her swimsuit back on.
Flora was panting loudly from being double stimulated. Marita and Marie had been giving her a double handjob along with the makeout session, and it was turning her on out of her mind. “Oh my god, you two are driving me insane, but I don't think I'm going to be able to finish inside this hot tub,” she confessed. “At least, not from a handjob…” Her eyes flashed mischievously. “Okay, if you girls don't want to do it, say so, but we’re in a pretty ripe position to tick a big box on my list of sexual fantasies. Emma, since you're not naked could you guard the entrance and warn us if anyone’s coming in, and the rest of you, could I have a tagteam underwater blowjob? I swear I’m so close to finishing already…” she shivered in excited anticipation.

Marita dove under the water and began performing on Flora passionately,while Marie, Rose and Emma, acted as if there was nothing going on. A lifeguard walked past ‘ Morning ladies. You just get in? The canine asked carefreely ‘ yes we’ve only been here for about ten minutes.” rose said ‘ well, then dont let me bother you. I’ll be over here by the diveboard.

It's a good thing the bubbles were completely covering Marita, because Flora turned red as a beet when the lifeguard showed up. Not even trusting herself to stammer a reply, she worked on suppressing a squeal as Marita worked her magic under the water. It was taking all her focus not to prematurely finish already, so she hoped somebody tagged Marita out soon so the girl could catch a breath. Gotta last at least two girls...so it counts as an underwater tag team… she thought with conviction.

Marita popped out of the bubbles a minute later ‘ your turn Marie ‘ she said, babbles dripping down her face. Marie smiled at Flora then dove under the surface, where she began stimulating Flora hard. ‘ Marita rested alongside Emma, with Rose now on the opposite side of the tub.

Flora was biting her tongue to keep her characteristic pre-orgasm peeps from starting up. It was her first sex act in a public place, and the excitement was pushing her over the edge, even if it hadn't been a fantasy come true. Just thinking about the fact that she actually achieved the impossible dream, an underwater tagteam jacuzzi blowjob...and then it was too much. With an overly loud squeal that caused the lifeguard to look over in alarm, Flora arched her back and shot her load into Marie’s mouth. “Uhhhhhhh, sorry, I stubbed my toe!” she stammered to the lifeguard, sinking deeper into the bubbles with embarrassment.

“Well just be careful. It can be slippery in the tub. There’s a first aid kit on the wall over there.’ the Lifeguard said, sighing as he looked away and watched as a small group of pool goers appeared and began using the larger pool. Marie popped out of the bubbles area a couple minutes later, spitting out water mixed with cum. “You’ve been holding that in girl.’ she smirked. Marita went up to Emma with a smile on her face ‘ Well Emma, You and Rose had a nice fling. Now, do you want to try me out?’ She said and Emma blushed visibly.. “ Well, I think just a kiss for now. People are starting to come in, and i don’t want them to see us making love in public.” Marita smiled, leaned in and kissed Emma on the lips.

Flora meanwhile was trying to slip her bikini back on while hiding under the bubbles. She remembered Emma had said bathing suits were required in the public pool. "I'm getting a bit overheated, do we wanna either move to the main pool or get out and go somewhere else completely?” she asked the others. They could even go somewhere more private, if Emma and Marita weren't interested in waiting. Flora didn't care what they did, she was still basking in the afterglow of her own sexual achievement from their time in the jacuzzi.

Marita broke the kiss with Emma and Turned to Flora “getting overheated? Well I think that means it’s time to get out.” I’m ready to go too ‘ Marie said, squinting as she washed her face with the treated and warm water in the tub. ‘ I’m starting to turn prunish, so i guess thats a majority’ Rose said as she got out and went over to the control panel. a button there caught her eye “ Clean Pool? She murmured, before turning off the bubbles and temperature, then pressed the “clean’ button. An opening at the bottom of the hot tub slid open, and water began to drain out slowly.

Emma was the next to get out, adjusting her swimsuit slightly and reflecting on the kisses she had shared with Rose and Marita. Both girls had been open about their sexuality, and very open about how much they liked her, Emma thought. And she appreciated that they thought she was pretty and a good kisser. They were just the second and third girls she had ever kissed, although she hadn’t exactly told them that, they had acted as if they knew she was a beginner. Emma thought both Rose and Marita were gorgeous, although her mouth had been way too busy with theirs to tell them that.

_ Marita and Marie got out next, feeling the cold from the surrounding air as they got out of the 90 degree water.” this was fun ‘ Marie said, dabbing her eyes with a nearby towel “ we should do it again sometime.

As the girls left the pool area, Flora ironed a kink out of the small of her back and grabbed the final donut out of the box. "Looks like I got a blood test coming up," she commented, glancing at her phone, "It'll only be a minute. Emma, are there any cool locations or events happening at Sartonic we should check out today? I'm feeling explore-y."

Flora's blood test went well, and thirty minutes later she emerged with a smile on her face. "This place has a garden? Let's do it!" She glanced at the map. "Oooh, a rooftop garden? How do they even keep that going in this climate? Let's go!"

Lots and lots of water I take it' Marita said as they began walking toewards the gardden which was on the 12th floor of a building, which sold earrings and other jewelry which was too expensive for the girls, so they could only look. Emma made her way to the stairs, as Marie looked longingly at a jade necklace.

Flora led the way to the elevator and hit the highest button. "Huh. This only goes up to the 12th floor. Guess we'll need to take the stairs to the roof," she commented. She glanced at Emma. "What sort of thing happens at a blueberry festival? Is it all about fruit or what?"

Yu murred teasingly, stroking Flora lightly.
"Mmmm, my goodness do you make cute noises~. Wonder what would happen if I..."
He trailed off, placing a slow, deep kiss right on her butt, tongue slipping into her a bit with a low murr...

Flora squealed shamelessly. It felt so...wrong, what Yurei was doing, but it also felt so good. She yelped in surprise as he probed deeper. She couldn't keep a furious blush off her face; it was embarrassing being so exposed to someone in such an intimate and taboo way. She didn't dare to talk, not sure what she could say. Instead she just curled her toes and closed her eyes, surrendering her other senses and focusing on the indescribable feelings Yurei was causing her to feel.

The rooftop garden festival was relatively subdued, due to it being midday; Flora suspected that as it got later and the desert cooled down, the festival would grow more active. On the bright side this meant they had almost unrestricted access to all the events and stalls, which were mostly showing off exotic treats like fruits, seeds, and delicacies.

Flora gasped in wonder at a speckled orange-purple fruit. "What's a...pluot?" she said curiously, reading the sign.

"It's a genetically-crossbred fruit!" the man exclaimed. His labcoat suggested her normally worked as a scientist at Sartonic. "It's a hybrid plum-apricot, first created genetically back in the early 21st century. Only recently have we created fertile self-sufficient orchards."

"It's...a hybrid?" Flora grabbed a pluot and studied it. "Like me..." she bit into it and her eyes lit up. "I think this is my new favorite fruit!" she exclaimed, causing the shopkeeper to chuckle. "How have I never heard of these before?"

because its a rare hybrid, and we don't have it back home ' Marie said, as she looked around at the various foods and plants, many of them strange-looking hybrids.' marita loked in her purses for some creds, but was only able to scrounge up about 50.

Flora squealed instinctively as Yurei continued pleasuring her. It wasn't a sexual activity that felt like it could end in orgasm, more of an experience to enjoy as she lost track of time. But as her fur became matted with sweat, she began to worry that her sphincter might get overstimulated and too sensitive for what comes next.

"I...think it's ready..." she murmured back to Yurei, casting an excited look over her shoulder. Her muscles felt loose, and despite his girth she felt like he'd more than prepared her for the upcoming penetration. "I don't want to cum, I think it'll be better if I'm still horny when you stick it in. Just please apply lube, and then it's all yours..."

Flora took another pluot for the walk and continued observing all the events of the festival. "Okay, I picked the pluot stand, your turn to choose an activity!" she said to Emma, throwing her arms around the vixen playfully. The pluots had put her in a particularly good mood.

Well we could go over to that fruit weighing stand ' Emma said motioning to a table wth an array of simply gigantixcc fruits. each one looked like they weighed at least 500 pounds- thats a lot of pies." waterberries? Marie asked skeptically as she read ' a micing of watermelon and strawberries..

Yurei smirked lightly, pulling his tongue out and lightly nuzzling up Flora's back, grinning.
"Mmm, well then, I'll try to make you cum too~."
He said lightly, placing a soft lick along the base of her ear as he reached over to the nightstand and pulled out a small bottle of lube, spreading the cool gel over Flora's butt...

Flora's heartrate quickened, and she prepared herself for the moment of entry. "Don't worry about me," she panted, "this is your reward. You can get me off after you've had your turn..."

"I wanna try a waterberry!' Flora exclaimed, stepping forward, but the booth owner stopped her.

"These are for the weighing contest. they are not for consumption."

"Do you have any that ARE?" Flora asked, eyeing the alien fruit with relish.

"They have been mostly made into pies," the man gestured to the table. "150 credits apiece."

Flora looked at her friends. "What do you think? kinda a bummer we can't try them first to be sure we even like them..."

the pies were huge, but emma pulled out her creds card ' we'll take 2' she said to the stall owner ' and he produced 2 big pies after the creds transfer went though ' Marita was handed the pies to carry and the girls continued walking around, looking at other stalls.

Flora wrinkled her nose after a single bite. She'd never been a watermelon fan, and unfortunately waterberries didn't have enough strawberry to cancel out the flavor.

A few hours later, they'd seen everything there was to see at the festival. Flora was feeling a little drunk from the number of booths offering alcoholic samples. "Thank god for--hic!--the drinking age being sixteen!" She grinned as she found somewhere to sit down. "This festival was awesome. I wonder how late it is, maybe we could go do something out on the town."

Yurei smiled a bit, leaning in to teasingly lick along the base of Flora's ear.
"Mmmm, now now. I want this to be a reward for both of us, sweetheart. After all, someone as lovely as you deserves nothing less~"
He teased, slowly pressing his tip into her as he reached around to stroke down her chest...

"Yurei, I'm glad you're thinking of me, but it's been..." Flora checked the time on his bedside alarm clock, "...almost three hours, and you haven't even stuck it in yet. I mean, if you're nervous, I don't want to pressure you into anything, but really, I think my body is as primed as it could possibly ever be."

Flora yawned as they left the festival. "I dunno, I might be tuckered out." She also didn't want to possibly see her other self with Yurei in the city streets. "Maybe we should head back to the room. See if there's any good movies on TV. Our bed can fit five, right?"

Well Flora does have good taste Rose said " she found you, Emma , after all." I take it Flora's not the only one interested in me, then?' emma said, and a smile pl;ayed on Rose's dark red lips. " OF Course not Love. I don't french girls that don't like frenching other girls, although truthfully Girls tend to be more open to same -sex relationships up through high school graduation than guys - "Gay until graduation" is a real thing" Rose said " with me, I really didnt realize I was gay until I started dating Marita, once we were in a relationship , it just.. felt right, you know?"

Well, Flora was my first kiss ever, and you girls are numbers 2 through 4. I'm glad you girls have been so welcoming and accepting " Emma Said." Who's next with the remote after you? Rose asked "That would be Flora " rose said. "Well emma, I think you and I will be busy during your hour with the remote." Rose said" oh, Flora and I have had sex before, so you wont be the first girl i've made love to" emma said shooting Flora a grin " But I've got a LOT more experience in making love than she does " Rose said."Once you've had a whiff of my flower, dear Emma, you'll want more."

Many months later...

Natalie Parker reached her massage parlor at 9am, as always. She quickly turned on the neon Open sign and crossed to the computer to check her appointments. She wasn't the most highly-requested masseuse in her area, but she usually got two or three appointments a day.

Today, however, she saw to her mild disappointment that there was only one appointment on the books. In thirty minutes, she'd be seeing three new customers, two female great danes and a vixen. The vixen was newly pregnant, so they wanted a massage that specialized in prenatal therapy. Well, she could certainly do that. They'd not specified an end-time either, so hopefully they would enjoy themselves and stick around for long enough to make her drive to work worth it.

Then Natalie saw the addendum, and one of her eyebrows raised. They want a happy ending? Not usually the sort of customer to ask for one of those, but I guess money's money…

Marita drove the car down the road. " almost to the massage parlor, girls " she said with a smile. " How's the back seat, Emma? Comfortable enough for you?' she said looking in the mirror at the beautiful vixen lying down in the back seat. "We got you a surprise as well' Rose said, a smile on her dark red lips. " It cost a bit more. But well, you're worth it girl"

Emma nodded, with a small smile. "I'm excited to see what it is. Thank you both so much!" Inwardly, she was wondering what they could have gotten her that would require such a far drive out of town. They weren't even in the same city as Sartonic anymore.

She focused on the desert environment outside the car as it zipped past. This could be a great chance to get to know Marita and Rose better. She'd get so caught up in work that she never thought to visit them at their apartment. But part of her worried she wouldn't have enough interesting things about her to keep them interested, considering they're into wild girls like Flora.

" You're very welcome Emma. Anything else you';d like? This is an " Emma gets whatever she wants ë day, because you always give expectant mothers anything they like. You know, to avoid pregnancy-fueled rants" Marita smirked." sky's the limits, love. You want to go see a flick? Dine out? Play scrabble? Name it, we'll do it for you."

"Hmmmm…" Emma thought for a bit. "Let's turn on some music. What's your favorite genre of music, Rose? I pretty much like anything except country and rap."

ë You and me both girl. Can't STAND country, with all the sappy stuff about the wife running off with the dog. Bleeech" Rose said.' But I love the oldies Emma. Eagles, Aerosmith, Queen. They get my inner karaoke going.' " She's got a damn good singing voice too' Marita said,. " Girl can sing opera, for goodness sakes." stop, Marita. I'm not Aretha Franklin' Rose protested." You get to pick the station Emma.' she smiled.

"You should sing Rose!" Emma urged, smiling. "I want to hear your voice!" She listened as Marita thumbed through the channels. "How about the first song Rose recognizes, we stop and listen to her sing?"

Deal" Rose said " as Marita stopped on a Queen Channel " Warm up the Pipes Girl. Next song is " Who Wants to Live Forever" Rose began to take a breath and began to sing - and she was.. incredible ë There's no chance for us .. It's all decided for us" Rose sang with a crystalline, clear and tender voice. Marita listened with a big smile on her face.

Emma smiled as she listened to Rose belt out the song. If she'd known the lyrics she'd have sang along, but as it was she simply enjoyed having their company. "You're a natural!" she laughed. "You should have been a pop star!"

"The opportunities just didn't present themselves when I was younger"Rose said. " Maybe one day, i'll take a chance to go into a recording studio and sing for them, but for now other things take precedence. I'm basically a housewife to this chick' Rose smirked as she pointed to Marita."Now, of course, there's caring for you Miss foxy" She shot Emma a grin." Flora's in no financial position to do it, and Marita's jobs pay well, even if they are hush hush."

Emma smiled. "Thank you both for all your support. Really, it means a lot to me." She patted her stomach, which was beginning to show whenever she wasn't wearing a baggy enough shirt. "It's good to know I have so many people supporting me!"

Well, you need the support, Emma' Marita said with a smile.." so, the day is yours. Anything goes. Literally anything. Whatever you want to drink or eat. We'll get it for you. Want to watch something on TV, our remote is yours.   Need that baby bump massaged, let   us know. And as Flora has likely told you, We are very open-minded about things of an intimate nature- let us know if you have any fetishes, we'll be glad to fulfill them. We'll do anything for a girl as lovely as you are Emma. Name it honey, the world is your oyster."

Emma flushed red as a beet at the forwardness at Rose's remarks. "I'll let you know if I really have a hankering for something," she replied hastily. "Um, I'm a little inexperienced in those ways...maybe you'd like to suggest something? I'm pretty open-minded myself, I'm prepared to try anything really."

Well, how often have you French kissed?" Rose asked.' Marita and I really enjoy it, it's one of the things we do when we begin a romp..and well, just because you have a bun in the oven , doesn't mean you stop being able to have sex. The desires, needs and passions are still there, along with all the extras that a pregnancy carries with it.' and if things get too hairy between you and Flora you are always welcome to crash at our place.'

So what do you say Emma? " interested? Rose said " if not, we understand. Totally up to you. " dont pressure the poor girl , Rose" Marita said, a grin forming on her face all the same. " you're an open book Rose. When you like something, you show it."

Emma couldn't decide, she was never good at making decisions...but after mulling over her decision, she decided that she could decide, and decided yes. "I decide...yes!" she decided loudly, smiling at her decision.

Yurei sat in front of his computer, resting his forehead on his hand. Staring at the lab results from the latest batch of the project he was working on. Sighing, he shook his head and slumped back in his chair.
"Ugh, damnit... Still causing unpredictable spikes in power activation..."he
He muttered, closing out the files...

From his bed, Flora stretched languidly. "Something the matter?" she muttered, blinking sleep out of her eyes. She rolled her head and looked sleepily at the bathroom. She kinda had to pee, but not enough to actually drag herself over there and leave the warm covers...

When Yurei didn't immediately answer she rolled back over to settle into the warm spot of the bed. With Emma and the girls on some sort of road trip to a masseuse, Flora was spending her nights in Yurei's room because it had video game consoles and a shorter walk to the dining commons. Before closing her eyes again, she spared a single glance at the bedside clock. 9 am? The fuck am I doing awake...

Yurei glanced back over his the chair, smiling at Flora.
"Ah, nothing. Project I'm working on has hit a dead end is all."
He chuckled, spinning the seat around and hopping up before joining Flora in bed.
"Just checking on it while you were asleep."
He said as he wrapped his arms around her waist from behind, tracing a hand up her leg...

Flora grinned and snuggled up close to him. "Mmmmm, well, welcome back..." she pecked him on the cheek. "Why are you wearing clothes in bed?" she teased sleepily, "We're not expecting company, are we?" Though that would be kinda cool...I should ask sometime if he's down to try a threesome...

He teased, pressing back up to Flora with a murr...

Flora grinned and climbed on top of him. Pressing her body into his, she wrapped her arms around his neck and pecked him again on the cheek. "I'd kiss you, but I think I've got morning breath," she smiled, "so maybe I'll put my mouth to better use elsewhere..."

With a series of kisses, she made her way slowly down his chest and stomach, before focusing her attention on her favorite part of his body. "You need to stop getting up before me," she joked before her mouth was full, "because I keep planning to wake you up with one of these..."

"Mmmm, you know that I don't mind that, Flora~. Your kisses are just about the best thing ever."
He said, moaning softly as Flora found her mark.
"Mmmm, and if you want to surprise me, you'll have to get up pretty...mmm... early. Besides, I've been planning a few...surprises for you, too~"
He murred

Flora increased the pace as her other hand massaged him gently. Hmm, that reminds me... She hummed a low rhythm from the back of her throat, a tuneless sound that vibrated her lips and cheeks as she pushed him deeper into her mouth. Marita saw the turnout for the treatment center and pulled off ' we'll be there in about 10 minutes girls. " there wasn't much out here, just a strong of fast food places, where you could get a quick bite to eat. ' You want anything Emma? We can get a burger if you want one..' she said kindly.

Emma thought. "Hmm...yeah, I think I could go for something," she smiled. "Are there any Mexican places? Flora talks about burritos a lot, and I've been meaning to see one for myself. I've never really understood what they're supposed to look like..."

Flora choked when Yurei's door suddenly came flying off its hinges. Three Sartonic guards marched into the room, rifles drawn. "You," the lead guard snarled, jabbing his finger. "To the brig. NOW."

"What?" She stammered, leaping out of bed and raising her hands in the air. "What did I--?"

"Move it!" One guard pointed his rifle pre-emptively at Yurei in case he tried to stop them.

Flora slinked nervously to the door, tail between her legs. "C-can I at least grab--?"

"I said MOVE IT!" he snapped, eyes bulging. Without further ado, their trio of rifles escorted her roughly out of the room.

remember that we aren't anywhere near Mexico" Rose said " Given the country we are in , and its culture, you aren't going to find any Mexican stuff here,as for burritos, they are similar to tacos, except they completely enclose whatever toppings are in them. beef, chicken, rice, etc. From what i see, these fast food places are mostly ice cream stops, which rather stinks."

"Aww, bummer. Maybe another day," Emma smiled. "Cause that sounds super delicious. Maybe we should just get Mediterranean, I know this city's full of those."

She checked her watch. "We've still got time before the massage. It's always nice not having to rush while eating. I wonder if Flora and Yurei are eating right now."

Flora was marched roughly down the hallway, the guards not even giving her time to make eye contact with anyone walking by.

"Flora?" asked Nash, a human test subject heading for the Circulatory lab. "What's going on?"

"I'm not sure, I--" she started, but the guard elbowed her roughly in the side. "No talking, no slowing down," he informed bruskly.

Finally they herded her into the brig and threw her into the first available cell. Flora took several seconds to catch her breath, and only once they'd assumed guard positions outside the brig entrance did she timidly stagger to her feet. Shivering in the drafty cellblock air, Flora debated the merits of once again asking for something of an explanation, before a fiery-haired raccoon scientist named Cherlins suddenly marched into the brig. "You've got a lot of explaining to do!" he snapped, rattling her cage bars and sending her leaping backwards in alarm.

"I will! I'll tell you whatever, I promise!" Flora stammered. “Just tell me what about!”

“You thought you’d deleted the security footage,” he leered. “And nobody would discover that you were the one who freed Experiment L1F3. (https://docs.google.com/document/d/1dAN9sL4zP1mWDmxmh0n0Ep-5SsWJNB-FwsapErnEPxU/edit)” He smiled grimly when realization played across her face. “But one of the new test subjects can restore damaged film, and now we’ve got it on video.”

Oh crap… Flora gulped. “I, um…” She took a deep breath. “Okay, yeah, I may have done that…” Her eyes widened and she raised her hands quickly when he drew a silver-barreled taser. “Whoa don’t shoot! I’m sorry!”

“Not yet you’re not!” Cherlins snarled. “Why? Why did you jailbreak the most dangerous experiment Sartonic has ever held? Do you have any idea how valuable she was?”

“Yes, yes, I know…” Flora couldn’t keep her heartrate in check. “I broke all the rules, I don’t really have any excuses. I just thought the way we were treating her was inhumane.”

"We're not paying you to think..." Cherlins growled. “Tell me everything from the moment the two of you left Sartonic, or you die right here, right now.”

“We escaped over the west courtyard wall,” Flora confessed, eyes still locked onto the taser barrel. “We were gonna head deeper into the desert, she promised to take me with her. We headed directly away from the city, hiked for a day. You should be able to follow our path, she kept growing flowers and stuff everywhere she stepped. That night, we slept on some sand dunes, and when I woke up in the morning she was gone.” Flora felt her face redden remembering how L1F3 had abandoned her. “So...I just came back. Pretended I’d spent all that time in my room.”

Cherlins had grown beet red himself. “You are so goddamn stupid!” he screamed in frustration. “We could have furthered humanity and gotten rich at the same time. She could have given us the cure for aging!”

“She wasn’t going to give you anything!” Flora snapped back. “We both know that. You were just going to end up killing her.”

“I guess we’ll never know…” Cherlins shot her in the crotch. Flora’s eyes widened and she screamed as she collapsed to the floor, losing control of all her muscles. “Unfortunately Van Der Merwe says we can’t kill you yet, so we’re just going to leave you here for now.” He didn’t bother to hide the threat in his tone as he deactivated the taser and left her crying and spasming erratically in the fetal position. “Enjoy it while it lasts.”

Gnashing his teeth furiously, he stomped out of the brig.

Marita stopped at the nearest fast food join, which was blamed icy Iraqi ice cream. there was a mix of classic flavors,-chocolate, vanilla, twist, met twist oreo twist- with new ones like ' camel's milk, crescent cream. tigris toffee and baghdad berry. " hmm " lets go in girls. they seem have a lot of choices here> Any preference as to flavor Emma?' Marita asked as she stopped the car and got out.

"Baghdad Berry sounds berry delicious!" Emma joked as they walked into the ice cream store. "I've been having cravings for fruit since hitting second trimester, that would hit the spot."

She let the girls go first in case they needed more time to decide what flavors to get. Huh, the sky seems a bit darker than it should be, she observed, looking idly out the storefront windows. Considering it's only 2 o'clock...

It was a long time before Flora regained enough motor function to crawl pitifully around her cell, and she spent most of it cradling her family jewels and trying frantically to come up with her next move. She'd always avoided Cherlins because she'd heard horror stories from any test subjects that worked with him, and now he was out for her blood. Can Yurei bail me out? she wondered, glancing at the pristine white walls of her cell. Odds are good they planned ahead for ghostform or any other psionic power. But if he can talk his way past security, he could slip me something...

Crawling to the front of the cell, she staggered to her feet using the bars as a crutch. She could see the guards were still standing at attention outside the brig, armed and stonefaced as before.

I don't think I'm going to be able to rely on Yurei this time. She looked around. Her cell contained only a sink, toilet, and cot bolted to the wall. Not a lot to work with...

Emma shook her head. "I'm trying to avoid sugary drinks or alcohol. Just drinking water until she's born," she patted her stomach. "Or he? The doctors seemed a bit confused on that part..."

The clerk handed Emma her ice cream and she started enjoying it. "Should we eat while driving to the masseuse, or keep eating here?" she asked. "We've probably got time for both, but we'll be cutting it close if we stay here..."

Cherlins glared at the cheerful wolf fixing the potted plant he'd knocked over while walking through the door. "Dr. Kojurro. What the hell are you doing in my office?"

"Walter! It's been so long, how are you my friend?" Kojurro beamed, showing a wide mouth of teeth. "You're always so busy working with your experiments in the quarantine section, you've haven't come to any of our department's good old-fashioned sitdowns in months!"

"I hated those; I just wanted the free beer, but eventually it wasn't worth listening to everyone's idiotic banter." Cherlins narrowed his eyes. "Speaking of which, please leave."

"Of course, I don't mean to bother you..." Kojurro turned to leave, and Cherlins had halfway refocused on his paperwork when the wolf abruptly spun around and continued "...BUT there was something Van Der Merwe wanted me to tell you. If I could request just a minute of your time…"

"Van Der Merwe is in Denmark meeting with shareholders," Cherlins raised an eyebrow. "As you damn well know."

"Exactly! And that leaves you in charge of the base! And Van Der Merwe explicitly told me to inform you if anything unusual happens in his absence." Kojurro bowed flamboyantly. "And, well, to that effect I must report that we're getting the strangest weather readings any of us have ever seen."

"'Weather' readings?" Cherlins checked his email, and only then noticed several panicked emails from other personnel at Sartonic. "Strange how? Are we talking humidity, temperature, atmospheric phenomenon?"

"Yes. To all of those." Kojurro leaned over his desk and pointed to a specific email. "I can't be any more specific because none of it makes sense. It looks like we’re about to be hit by a tropical storm, a mudslide, a tornado, a heat wave, a cold wave, an earthquake, and a snowstorm. At almost the exact same time.”

Cherlins’ eye twitched. “But--but--we’re in the middle of the desert!” He burst out. “We never get any weather. And it’s meteorologically impossible for all of that to even occur at the same time!”

Kojurro nodded in agreement. “It certainly requires urgent investigation. Hence why we’re all being rather pushy with requesting your orders.”

Cherlins read the document over again. “Don’t do anything,” he finally decided. “Sartonic is more than built to withstand any and all of these. I’ll have the maintenance crew reinforce windows, but otherwise I’d rather we focus our energies on finding out what’s causing this extreme weather to manifest.”

He hit the button to summon Sartonic’s elite security guards. “Because whatever it is, we need to capture it.”

Emma nodded, eating her ice cream as they returned to the car and pulled out of the parking lot. "Could you roll your windows up?" she asked the driver as they hit regular cruising speed and raindrops started soaking the upholstery. "This is just bizarre, getting rain at this time of year. But it might actually improve the massage, honestly. Rain makes such a peaceful, relaxing sound when it patters against glass."

Flora bit her lip as her claw scraped against something metal for the umpteenth time. She was trying to pick the jail lock like she'd seen Emilena do, but it was proving just as impossible as she'd expected.

"What the hell are you doing?" Cherlins glared as he appeared from the other side of the brig. Apparently there was a second entrance.

"Nothing!" she stammered, leaping backwards and covering her crotch defensively.

"M-hmm." Cherlins folded his arms. "I came for the complete list of Experiment L1F3's powers."

"Uhh, mostly just plant-growing stuff..." Flora curled into the furthest corner of the cell. "And making things older or younger. Oh, and growing all those vine-tentacles. Also she turned my nipples into flowers that one time, but somehow they got better--"

"What about weather alteration?" he interrupted. "Especially once you two were outside the lab."

Flora thought. "I don't remember anything like that. Why?"

"There's a..." Cherlins paused to think of the right word, "...very unusual tropical storm coming our way. Our sensors are detecting her psionic signature from it."

Flora's hair stood on end. "She's coming back?" She leaped up. "Let me talk to her! I might be able to get her to stand down."

Cherlins laughed. "Stand down? We don't give a crap about her standing down. Sartonic isn't worried about some measly storms. But..." He held a pen and short written agreement through the bars. "If you promise not to run away, we could use you as bait. You help us draw her out, and then we can re-capture her."

Flora's eyes widened. "I..." she took a deep breath. "Will I be fully pardoned?"

Cherlins narrowed his eyes. "Only on successful recapture of the specimen."

Flora gulped. "...Okay." She raised her hands to take the contract, then squawked in alarm when he took the opportunity to tase her in the nuts again. His laughter was still ringing in her ears as he walked out of the brig.

Marita pressed a button which rolled up both the front and back windows ' This is strange. Deserts usually dont get major storms, but this one looks like its gonna be a whopper ' Marita said ' We;d better get to massage place and pronto. Dont want to be caught on the road if part of it floods. ' So everyone eat your ice cream, quickly, theres a bag by Maries feet for garbage." Marita said, she had eaten most of her ice cream already. marie took a sip from her sida. Outside the rain began falling harder and harder.

Emma finished her ice cream and tossed the cup in the designated bag as they pulled into the massage parlor parking lot, right on time. "I'll go let the masseuse know--oop!" She gasped in surprise as she stepped out of the car door and slipped on the slick ground, but caught herself in time. Within seconds her skirt and leg were soaked with ice-cold pelting rain. "I'm okay! Good lord..." She covered her face and stumbled to the door.

Natalie Parker looked up from the receptionist's table as Emma entered. One look at her belly told her that this was the client. "Miss Maple! Welcome!" She hurriedly grabbed the girl a towel.

"Where on earth did this storm come from?" Emma wondered aloud. "It was bright and sunny this morning!"

"The weatherman's been wondering too," Natalie nodded to the silent television in the waiting room, where a panel of meteorologists was discussing the breaking weather alert. "Luckily the rain won't bother you in here." She smiled. "Head into the back. You get yourself dried off, feel free to remove as many clothes as you feel comfortable, and lay facedown on the massage bed." According to the booking, her handlers would be covering payment and negotiating the details of the transaction. "I'll be with you shortly."

The two Great Danes were parking the car. Natalie waited patiently for them to arrive; to avoid being stiffed, she usually requested that new customers paid half in advance.

Cherlins looked out the window at the darkened stormclouds closing in on the base.

"Sir," reported Kojurro, "every window in the base has been reinforced, as ordered."

"And not a moment too soon..." Cherlins murmured. He stood up and closed the blinds. "All personnel have been locked safely indoors. Now we just wait this out."

"Should we plant Flora in the courtyard?" Kojurro asked. "We're running out of time to use her as bait before the storm hits."

Cherlins shook his head. "First I want L1F3 to realize how fruitless her little storm is." His eyes steeled. "Get her really desperate and frustrated. Then she'll be ready to walk into any trap we set."

Kojurro nodded. "Assuming her storm is really as weak as you claim...she is the first experiment to escape from Sartonic in over fifty years."

"This time she won't have help on the inside," Cherlins growled. "I swear if that folf tries anything, I'll shoot her myself."

Kojurro gulped.

We're the Miss Maple Group. I'm Marita, I'm here to pay for the massage " She said to Natalie who was standing behind the counter ' Now you said half in advance, right, lets see, that would be 600 creds. " Marita said pulling out her creds card.

Natalie Parker to put a CLOSED sign on the door. "Absolutely not letting any walk-ins today," she quipped, locking the door. "They'd be insane to go outside in this weather anyway."

She smiled at the pair. "600 is fine, of course, with the other 600 upon completion. Pleased to meet you, Marita. I'm Natalie." Wiping rainwater from her shoulder, she activated the cash register and cleared the purchase.

"You know," she smiled. "With this weather, you might be stuck here a while. If either of you wants a massage once I'm done with Emma, I'll drop the price down to 950 per person." That was only slightly cheaper than her normal rainy day discount anyway, and it would make her trip to the office today slightly more worth it. "Heck, for only 700 flat I'll give you two an open massage room and you can take turns on each other."

The wind whipped the trees in the courtyard violently, uprooting several of the smaller saplings. The wind howled with anger as rain battered the beleaguered station.

Cherlins stood in the main lobby, watching the tempest outside through reinforced glass double-doors.

Kojurro walked up behind him. "Things are holding. For now..."

"What do you mean, 'for now'?" Cherlins asked, not breaking eye contact with the storm. "We should be able to hold this out indefinitely."

"Well, uh, the lightning seems to know all the right places to strike. We've lost our auxiliary generator, and the storm has completely disrupted outside communications. We can't contact anybody."

"We shouldn't need to contact anybody, goddammit!" Cherlins balled his fists and whipped around to glare at his fellow scientist. "Why are you all treating this storm like it's anything but our best opportunity to recapture--?"

His tirade was cutoff when the lights in the room suddenly flickered on and off. "What the hell?"

Kojurro quickly tuned his radio. "Ummm, not getting signal." He gulped. "I'll go check main power. The storm shouldn't even get that far."

"Yes, go do that." Cherlins sighed as Kojurro and returned his gaze to the windows.

And then it hit him in the cheek. A single solemn drop of water. The smallest of cracks had formed in the largest skylight in the lobby.

Natalie threw Marita a keycard and a bottle of oil. "Take the one down the left corridor. There'll be towels and extra lotion in the cupboard to the right of the door. And make sure you clean up after yourselves." She headed for the hallway to the back rooms. "Since y'all paid for a full four hours, I don't think you have to worry about finishing before I'm done with Emma..."

Emma found herself in a small room very similar to the one Marita, Rose, and Marie will soon be seeing. She blushed as she remembered what Natalie said about removing her clothes. Deciding to keep her underwear on, she slipped onto the bed and nervously lay down face first.

Cherlins bolted for the exit to the lobby as glass shattered from the skylights and frigid, pelting rain started pummelling the linoleum floor. The raccoon dove through the double-doors startling the maintenance worker performing routine checks. "Get this door sealed!" Cherlins commanded urgently, as the door waved erratically in the tornado winds.

Elsewhere, Kojurro was tiptoeing through the maintenance corridors. Most people were holing it out in their apartments, and he didn't hear anything except the pitter-patter of rain. He reached the primary power supply and quickly scanned the room. Everything seemed okay--

He suddenly leaped backwards as a heavy spark emanated from the primary generator. "What?" he muttered, drawing a flashlight as the room was plunged into blackness.

Another flash sent him covering his eyes. quickly donning rubber gloves and removing his labcoat, so that only his rubber-soled shoes would touch the sides, Kojurro leaped onto the generator and slowly climbed up the side.

His first sign of trouble was when driplets of water kept hitting him in the face. "We're far too deep for the storm to reach down here..." he pondered to himself. "What's else is around here anyway?"

His nose hit the ceiling far sooner than it should have. This close, he could see the ceiling was almost bowed with how much weight it was under.

He hit the radio. "Rico!" he asked the security guard on camera duty. "What room is right above the primary generator?"

"Mmm, let's see. Uhhh...a locker room." Kojurro heard fingers typing on keys. "Oh, my god! There was a rupture in the ceiling! That room is literally filled with water!"

Kojurro realized was Life's plan was at the same moment an earthquake sent the entire foundation rumbling. Jumping with ninjalike reflexes, Kojurro barely absorbed the damage of a huge fiberglass ceiling tile smashing into his face as an entire locker room's worth of water collapsed on top of Sartonic's primary generator.

Flora yelped in surprise as the room shook from a freak earthquake. What the hell is happening out there? she wondered, leaping to her feet as a massive crack in the floor sent her bed tumbling into the earth. Scrambling for the far wall, Flora tumbled to her knees as another shock wave rocked the entire room.

She could hear screams from elsewhere in the labs. It was becoming all too clear that Cherlins had under-estimated the effectiveness of Life's hybrid storm...

I'll Give rose a masage first , then Marie ' Marita said as the three of them gheaded t the room, listed o the keycard Natalie had goven them. Marie carried the large bottle of lotion in her claws as they reached the room. The Room door slid open with the use of a key and the heavy smell of incense wafter out , hitting their nostrils.

Emma looked at the bed and gulped. She'd never had a professional massage before, was she really supposed to remove all her clothes? She decided to keep her underwear on just for decencies' sake.

She had finally laid down facefirst on the massage table when she heard Natalie enter the word. "Oh my. Dear, you're supposed to put the towel on over your legs," she chuckled.

Emma peeped in surprise. "Sorry!" she tried to stammer, but the massage table pillow did a good job making it unintelligible.

"Not to worry," Natalie couldn't keep a playful tone out of her words as she draped the towel over her patient's backside and lathered her hands in warm oils. "You're in good hands. Just close your eyes, and let your cares drift away..."

Kojurro's vision slowly returned as he vaguely heard someone shouting his name. Groaning, he rolled out, and somebody started helping him to his feet.

"Doctor!" the technician repeated, splashing him in the face. "Wake up! We've got to leave this section!"

Kojurro stumbled to his feet. "Ugh..." His head was killing him. "What happened?"

This whole section is flooding!" the technician helped Kojurro walk. Behind them, the massive puddle from the now-ruined power generator was pushing them out of the room. "But careful touching any water; I saw two electrified puddles while making my way out."

Two floors later, Kojurro bid the technician adieu and met Cherlins outside the lobby. "Walter. What are you...?"

Cherlins was overseeing two workers soldering the door shut. "Lobby has been compromised," Cherlins reported grimly. "News on the primary power supply?"

"It's completely dead." Both men stopped talking as the lights flickered. "Walter, I think it's clear we don't have this storm under control. It's only going to get worse."

"To hell it is!" Cherlins growled. "We change plans, she'll think she has the advantage. We can't back down now."

"What? Are you insane? She's has the advantage!" Kojurro protested. "If we don't convince her to parlay, her storm is going to kill everyone in this base!"

"Your opinion has been noted and logged," Cherlins replied coldly. "but I'll be the judge of that. Now leave."

"You're making a mistake, Walter," Kojurro warned, but the raccoon angrily waved him out of the room, refusing to hear another word.

There were two guards blocking the hallway to the infirmary. They were Cherlins' most loyal of guards, and Kojurro knew it. They weren't going to listen to reason, so they needed to be eliminated.

"You ready, Nash?" he muttered into his satellite brick phone.

"I, uh, think so..." his partner in crime answered nervously. "I'm in position to extract her at least, if the guards weren't there."

"Well, I'm going to give you that shot. Start the countdown." Kojurro walked around the corner and revealed himself. "Evening, gentlemen," he curtsied to the guards.

They moved to block his path. "Nobody's allowed in the infirmary," the smaller one grunted.

"I am but a scientist," Kojurro pointed out. "What could I possibly get up to? I just need a moment to speak to the prisoner."

"Too bad." the larger guard folded his arms.

Kojurro sighed. "Very well." With lightning-fast reflexes, he drew a katana from under his labcoat and brandished it.

Both guards quickly drew their firearms. "The hell is that?" the smaller one snapped.

"This?" Kojurro grinned wickedly. "This is an Heirloom Kibagami katana. Its shattered blade was obtained through hard diplomacy with the American border patrol, and its handle through blackmailing a pair of old friends who never wanted to see me again. I reforged it through a painstaking process that required the most delicate and powerful smithing machines Sartonic could buy!"

He pressed a button on the sword's hilt, causing it to instantly shatter. "Whoops. Note to self; next time I reforge the Kibigami katana, avoid the vibrate function."

Both guards opened fire, and Kojurro sprinted as fast as he could back down the hallway, dodging bullets with the reflexes of a ninja.

The storm raged on. Critical systems were shutting down one by one. At one point, the lights flickered off in Flora's jail cell, and they never came back on.

Flora sighed. She'd spent most of her hours fitfully sleeping in the furthest corner from the no-longer flushing toilet and wondering if anybody was ever going to rescue her or bring her clothes or food. She had no idea what was happening outside beyond what little she could see of the hallway, but she could tell things were bad.

"Flora!"

She suddenly sat up in alarm as someone burst into the hallway. "Stay away from the door," Nash warned, pouring some sort of substance on the lock and handle. Lighting a match and tossing it at the coated metal, both averted their eyes as the entire chunk of door superheated and melted into slag.

"Nash, what are you doing here?" Flora asked, wasting no time in hopping gingerly over the molten puddle and escaping her imprisonment.

"Things are bad out here, Flora. But it's only going to get worse." Nash handed her a hooded bathrobe and peeked outside for sign of Kojurro. "Put this on and try to keep your identity hidden. Most of the faculty are siding with Cherlins, but Kojurro thinks you might be the key to convincing Life to stand down."

"Wait, that psycho plant lizard? She's back?" Flora felt her fur stand on then. "What am I supposed to do?"

"Convince her to spare our lives. If anyone has a chance at swaying her, it's you." Nash activated the flashlight on his cell phone and led the way out of the infirmary.

Nash and Flora didn't get far before reaching the gym. The room was completely dark, so both were sprinting at full speed not bothering to stay silent, when a zippo lighter turned on and both gasped in surprise. "Who's there?" a voice snarled.

"It's just me!" Nash stammered. "Nash Browns and, uh," he glanced at Flora, "Taga!"

"Taga?" the person stepped forward. Flora recognized a bull from the cleaning staff. "What the hell is she doing out of the quarantine cells?"

"She was evacuated, because of all the flooding!" Nash answered, grabbing Flora's arm and trying to keep her out of the faint light. "But she remembered something important she left in her cell, we're trying to retrieve it."

"You can't," another voice said, one Flora recognized as an older female bobcat whose name escaped her. "The roofs are collapsed up ahead. The hallways are too dangerous to continue."

Several more figures stepped into the light. Nash and Flora slowly stepped backward. "Welp, uh," Nash gulped. "Thanks for the heads up. I'll just, return her to the fortified apartments then..."

"Good call," the bull nodded sagely.

Nash exhaled in relief as they quickly backpedaled. "My bad," he whispered. "We still might be able--"

Suddenly Flora felt someone grab her bathrobe's hood, dragging her backwards. She felt a pair of hands grasp her robe and abandoned it with a terrified squeal. "That's what I thought!" The bull roared. "It's the rogue test subject!"

Flora sprinted into the darkness as the bobcat tackled Nash to the ground. A serpentine test subject came flying out of the darkness and wrapped itself around her head, but she wrestled free and threw him into an ab machine. A woman wielding a pair of weights cut off her escape, so she vaulted over the treadmills and stumbled for the locker room.

She slammed the door shut as somebody smashed heavily into it. The locker room was pitch black and Flora decided to keep it that way, though she paid for this decision when she slipped on a puddle and smacked her shin painfully on a changing bench. Knowing she only had a few seconds, she turned on every shower and climbed under one.

The door swung open and her assailants poured into the room. "Lights are down!" the bull announced to his posse angrily. "Spread out! She can't have gone far!"

"Why's it so...wet?" asked the serpent, checking the floor. "Is this area flooded?"

The bobcat checked in Flora's shower, so Flora pushed her and sent her smashing into the ceramic wall with a strangled cry. Hosing the bull down with the prehensile showerhead, she crawled for the door as the water drenched his Zippo and plunged everyone into darkness. Several bodies stumbled over her in the ruckus, but they slipped off her slick fur.

Flora was hyperventilating with panic when she slid back into the gym. "Nash!" she whispered desperately. "Nash?"

Her ally was nowhere to be seen, and she didn't have time to find him. Sprinting as carefully as she could through the gym, she reached the far exit and flung the door open.

A hallway full of hissing, sparking wires greeted her.

At the massage parlor, a falling tree suddenly smashed through the front window. The burglar alarm went off, but the storm was far too intense to expect the police to arrive. Not to mention the waiting room was flooding dangerously fast...

Flora heard her pursuers bearing down on her. "Don't even think about it!" The bull warned, realizing she was considering charging into a hallway full of live wires. "You'll never reach the other side alive!"

Flora took a deep breath, closed her eyes, and sprinted forward. Almost immediately she felt sparks whip across her legs, leaving blackened burns in her fur. Something snapped her in the chest, sending her fur standing on end. She swatted her arms desperately as the wires left scalding stripes across her body.

She barely made it halfway down the hallway before collapsing from multiple electric shocks. Her pursuers stood stunned, not daring to follow.

Just when Flora was sure she was going to die, the wires all turned off and fell to the floor lifeless. Weakly, she opened her eyes to see her pursuers fleeing. Wha...? Why are they...?

She heard another set of footsteps. Softer ones, coming from the flooded underbelly of the base. With all of her remaining strength, Flora rolled over to see a plantlike serpentine figure observing her with an unfathomable expression.

Life had found her.

Emma was enjoying a relaxing massage, but her comfort vanished when the masseuse looked down in confusion at the pool of water at her feet. "What the hell?" she muttered.

Crossing to the door, she opened it curiously, then cried out as it swung open uncontrollably with a torrential flood of water.

"Oh god!" Emma screamed in terror as the water filled the room. "Marita, Rose--!" was the last thing she could scream before the water filled the room with her in it.

"Life..." Flora muttered faintly, feeling herself slipping away.

The serpentine creature finished its walk and stared at the folf lying at its feet. "I hope you don't expect me to save you," it said. "Death is part of the natural cycle."

Flora shook her head. She smiled faintly. "I'm just glad...I got to see you again..." She coughed. "Why did you...leave me? All those months ago..."

Life sighed. "I'm sorry. But your place was not with me." The room shook from a rumble of thunder, sending plaster raining down on their heads. "I am one with all beings. But I cannot favor any one being over another."

Flora shook her head weakly. "That's not what you said before," she struggled to breathe. "You said we could go on adventures together. Be together for all eternity...as timeless friends."

Life looked away. "That wasn't exactly true," she confessed. "I don't lie easily, Flora, but I lied to you." She sat down next to the dying folf and took her hand. "The truth is, I've grown too old. It's been my time to go, for some time now. I thought...I thought the humans would help me transition."

"...Transition?" Flora murmured weakly.

Life's gaze grew dark. "To the other side. To where all beings must someday go." She waved her hand and tore the roof off of the hallway. Flora gasped as they looked at a brilliant summer sky. They were in the eye of the storm. "But your kind betrayed me. They locked me up and tried to study my powers, to claim for themselves what I'd hoped to give freely." She clenched her fist. "You were the only one who showed any compassion. Any promise. The only one who I thought could replace me..."

Flora teared up. "I didn't want to replace you. I just...wanted to be with you."

"I know." Life sighed. "I realized that. I see now that I must carry these burdens with me for the rest of time...my curse is to never see the other side. To never finish my cycle."

"Well..." Flora murmured, eyes dimming, "I think I'm about to complete my, uh, cycle...and I'd really like to experience the other side with you." She used the last of her strength to take Life's hand. "Relinquish your powers...Give them to nobody. Come with me..."

Life tried to yank her arm away, but Flora held on tight. "What? I can't do that!" she stammered. "This world needs me! It needs someone regulating the cycle of life!"

"Every parent thinks that..." Flora smiled, "but eventually you need to let your children take care of themselves." She closed her eyes. "Let go of your responsibilities. Trust the world to handle itself. Finish your cycle."

Life was silent for several seconds. "I..." She gulped. "I want to do that," she confessed. "I want to come with you. But I can't. The powers must go somewhere."

Flora held her hand tighter. "Then give them to me," she offered. "I know these powers can't be used to heal oneself. I'll die with or without them, and you and I can cross to the other side together...and we'll see what happens after that."

Life placed both of her hands on Flora's. "You would do that for me?" she finally whispered in amazement.

Flora smiled, and her eyes closed. She grew limp in Life's hands. Life took a deep breath and shut her eyes as well. Leaves started growing all over her body. Slowly, they traveled down Life's skin, gathering at her hands, and passed onto Flora.

With nary a sound, Life collapsed next to Flora's lifeless body.

Emma’s eyes fluttered open. “Rose...” she whispered, eyes wide with panic, when the whole floor gave a violent shake.

The massage parlor shuddered under the weight of the barrage of water. The walls started cracking. In seconds, the floors would collapse and the three girls would fall into a torrential and very dangerous whirlpool of splintery pulp...

Kojuuro backflipped to avoid a collapsing wall. The storm was getting really bad, and Sartonic's meager defenses were finally failing. The apartments were flooded, but the occupants had nowhere to evacuate to. Bucketing hailstorms and lightning clouds prevented anyone from seeking shelter outside the facilities, which would collapse in a matter of seconds.

Kojuuro recognized a hopeless situation when he saw it, and decided to die on his own terms. Surrendering himself to the storm, he kneeled down and pressed both hands together in a ninja prayer. He became an island of zen in the unforgiving chaos around him.

Emma returned the kiss, finding comfort in Rose's embrace. She understood how close they were to dying, but she placed herself into Rose's protection. In the end, it was enough to have someone to hold onto.

When Marie touched Flora, she suddenly felt imbued with a great power. Leaves sprouted from her hands, and the storm recoiled from her body. She'd gained miraculous abilities, among them the ability to control the storm and heal the sick or wounded...even ones as recently deceased as Flora.

Emma kissed Marita just as passionately as she'd kissed Rose. She may have found herself in more romantic situations with Rose over the time they'd known each other, but she loved them both equally, and hoped that Marita understood that in the end.

Flora found herself in a black void. Nothingness all around her. Where am I? She looked down. She couldn't see her body. She couldn't see anything. Is this what being dead is like? she thought, fighting to keep panic from rising in her chest. Wait...chest?

She could see herself again. And she wasn't alone. "Flora," smiled a strapping young fox, cleaner and more handsome than she'd known him in life. "Didn't expect to see you so soon, but it's good to see you again."

"Nairda?" Flora wondered aloud. "What are you doing here?"

"I'm dead," he admitted. "Died in Egypt, shortly after Foley. Who, speaking of which, is on the way."

"Wait, so is this the afterlife?" Flora asked, looking at the infinite blackness around them.

"Kinda, this is your afterlife. But you haven't shaped it yet." Nairda snapped his fingers, and Flora was suddenly draped in a fashionable white and turquoise dress that perfectly accentuated her fuchsia fur. "In time you'll make it into whatever you want. Until then you're welcome to live in mine. I'm a rock star, with millions of adoring fans." He bowed, generating applause from an unseen crowd.

"Honestly, Nairda, I don't know how you aren't bothered that the crowds aren't real," a young boy teased, appearing from out of nowhere. "At least my WoW guild is composed of other actual deceased souls."

Flora gasped, and the youth anticipated her reaction and quickly added, "I'm Foley, by the way. This was me before I got fat. You get to look like whatever age of your life you most enjoyed. I'm not surprised you just look like yourself, to be honest."

Flora's head was spinning from all this new information. "What about Hal and Emi?" she asked.

"Emilena hasn't died yet," Nairda shook his head. "But she'll be here some day. Hal's right behind you."

Flora turned around to see Hal, wearing his old bashful smile. Tears were running down Flora's face, and she hugged each of her old gangmates. "I never thought I'd see any of you again," she whispered joyfully. "I'm so sorry for what happened to you all—"

"No no, you don't need to mention it," Foley assured. "Forget about when we were alive. That was nothing compared to what we get now." He snapped his fingers, and a portal opened to his afterlife, where Flora could see a towering room containing the most high-tech gaming rig imaginable. "Perfect ping, tons of traffic for every online game, nothing ever breaks or needs reinstalling," he grinned. "It's fucking paradise."

Flora stepped forward eagerly. "Yes, let's play games together! Just like old times!" she exclaimed, but suddenly all four of them felt the same thing. Flora was leaving. "Uhhh, guys?" she asked nervously, as her body faded.

"Don't worry about it," Nairda assured as Flora felt herself being pulled away. "We'll still be here when you get back. And so will any new friends you make along the way."

"Not to spoil," Hal added, "But Marita, Rose, and Emma are coming sooner than you think. We'll keep them company for you!"

They waved goodbye as Flora returned to life.

—————————

Flora groaned as she opened her eyes. She felt the pain from her various wounds fade away, until her body was whole. It was an even more comfortable restoration than the times Aurora or Lily had healed her.

She opened her eyes to see Marie. "Marie..." she breathed, looking in awe at the Golden Retriever. "I was dead. You brought me back to life!"

She tried to recollect...had she seen anything while she was dead? The memory was getting foggier by the second...but before it was all gone she recalled a last-minute warning. "Marita and the others are in trouble!" she exclaimed, leaping to her feet. "I...can't explain...but I think they're in serious danger right now!"

Flora let Marie help her to her feet. "The garage..." she thought aloud. "I'm not sure if there'll be a car we can access in the garage. We won't have the keys."

She looked at the sky above. "The storm hit so suddenly...I bet there were drivers on the road who didn't make it home before it ran them off the road. If we could reach the streets, that's our fastest way to get a working car. When Life and I escaped Sartonic, she used her vines to help us scale the courtyard wall. Can you do the same thing to get us onto the roof?" She knew they could run through Sartonic, but the roof would give them a straight line to the parking lot and shave whole minutes off their journey.

"That's her name," Flora motioned to the deceased spriggan. "She died, but you've got her powers. And we'll need them to survive in the storm." She took off sprinting down the hallway, but it was slow going due to the collapsed walls and massive cracks in the ground from earthquakes. "Just, concentrate on growing leaves on your hands. "Thats it! Perfect" Flora scrambled up the makeshift ladder, shielding her face from the stinging rain as she climbed to her feet on the roof. "Oh man...the eye's closing. We need to get to the streets quickly!"

The wind picked up as she helped Marie onto the roof. "We can make it if we hurry!" she urged, beginning a delicate sprint across the pockmarked laboratory roof. "We'll drop into the parking lot from above the main--"

Suddenly a sheet of solar panels ripped itself off of the roof and flew right at both of them. Flora was blindsided and barely had time to scream as it bore down on her, but Marie had a split second to react...

Flora covered her head in fear, but Marie's rescue came just in time. "Holy crap, you're getting good at this!" she gasped, stumbling forward. "Sartonic might be paying you as a test subject and an employee after this!"

The two continued their journey across the roof, stopping only occasionally as Marie protected them from flying objects. The wind was getting really bad, and Flora occasionally felt like she was fighting to keep her feet from flying out from underneath her.

"Here we are!" She called out once her sense of navigation warned her theyd reached the garage. "Look around for a weak spot so we can oooop!" The ceiling collapsed under her weight, sending her plummeting into the completely-submerged garage with a splash.

She surfaced with a splutter. "Um, good news and bad news!" she called up to Marie as she tread water. "I didn't fall to my death, but that's because the garage is completely flooded! I don't think we can drive a car after it's been... actually wait, hold on..."

Taking a deep breath, Flora dove underwater. The water was murky with grit and concrete particles, and there was only a little light from the massive hole in the roof, but she got a glimpse of what she was looking for; the Turtle. An armored buggy designed to operate as either a car or a boat, mostly used for transferring supplies from Sartonic to offshore affiliates.

She swam back to the surface. "Sartonic's amphibious vehicle is in here, and it doesn't look damaged! If we could get the garage door open, we could drain it and drive the Turtle to pick up Marita and the others!"

She took another deep breath and dove back under. Most garage doors have an emergency release cord... she squinted, making the most of what little light she had. Luckily, the tip of the cord was glow-in-the-dark. Pushing a floating tool shelf out of her way, Flora tugged at the cord helplessly. It activated, ennabling the door to be opened manually, but despite her best efforts it was too heavy to life on her own.

She breached the surface and gasped for air. “I can’t get the door open,” she panted. “It’s not your typical garage door, it’s really heavy duty. Think you can give it a try? I saw Life once rip a wall out of its foundations with her vines.”

Marie gestured and vines shot of her hand , racing through the hole and into the water, vines wrapped around the pull cord asnd marie pulled on it from her position, straining with the effort, a crack appeared under the door opening, as it began to rise, water began to rush out, draining the level of water in the garage. cars moved around, carried by the water, as slowly the level dropped. Marie waited, for the level to reach a certain depth, deep enough to cushion her fall, yet low enough so she wouldnt run the risk of drowning.

Flora tread water, avoiding various debris as the current carried it out of the room. When there was enough room to breathe, she wedged herself underneath the door and helped push it upwards. "Okay...we're in the clear!" she panted as the water reached a drivable level.

Grabbing a sunken toolbox and staggering to the Turtle, she climbed through the sunroof and unlocked the doors from the inside. "Just give me one minute..." she murmured, working with a screwdriver and pair of pliers to manually activate the ignition. "There! We're in business!" She announced as the engine roared to life.

She drove the car under the hole in the roof so Marie could drop down onto it. "Let's go save our girlfriends!"

Flora peeled out of the garage as soon as Marie was in the Turtle. "So this thing's pretty armored, we should be able to handle the storm even without your--" she started, but abruptly yelped as a tree trunk hit the front windshield, leaving spiderweb cracks radiating outwards.

Flora swerved to dodge the tree itself, and they could hear the wind howling through the new cracks. They'd completely left the eye and were now suffering the full brunt of the storm. "Okay, never mind, I spoke too soon!" she gasped, shuddering as they careened off a mailbox submerged by the water. "We're probably still going to die."

Luckily it wasn't a long drive to the massage parlor, because Flora didnt even know where half of the bangs and collisions were coming from. She didn't see the upturned sidewalk until it was too late, and the Turtle crashed into it with the screech of grinding metal.

Pushing the airbag out of her face, Flora caught her breath and glanced outside. "There it is!" She pointed across the street at the pockmarked and waterlogged massage parlor. "Less than a minute sprint!" She tried the engine, but the Turtle was wrecked. "We'll have to run. Which is basically suicide, unless you can keep us safe." She took a deep breath. "Lead the way, if you think you can handle it. I'll be right behind you!"

marie staggered forward, her claws sending out vines which formed themserlves into a shield-like screen. the wind howleed through the screen, hitting Marie in the face, causing her ees to water terribly. marie managed to reach the entrance to the massage parkor, only to final glass bits of stair cases and debris all over. ' Gawds, what a mess ' Marie sniffed as she saw the sheer mess inside the building which groaned terribly.

Flora shivered as she followed Marie onto the flooded street. The water went up to their calves, and the pelting rain chilled her to the bone. She winced as something heavy glanced off Marie's screen. The storm felt it was winding down due to Life's death, but not quickly enough that either of them would have lived this longg if it weren't for Marie's powers.

The massage parlor was one of the only standing buildings still on the street, mostly thanks to leaning heavily on a chainlink fence to its left, but it was looking liable to collapse at any moment. The walls were bulging with water damage, the windows had fallen out of their frames and the floors were spongy and partially disintegrated. "Fuck, I hope they're okay in there..." she stammered, wrapping her arms around herself to try and conserve warmth. She really should have grabbed some clothes before they left...

She dropped to her knees as a dumpster bounced down the street and flew just over their heads. "There's no time to waste! I'm going after them!" she shouted, vaulting over the shattered front door and landing awkwardly in the flooded lobby. "See what you can do to keep the building upright till I've got them out!"

Sloshing her way into the back rooms, Flora yelped as she poked her head into a massage room and the wall crumbled into pulpy sawdust at her touch. I don't have time to search all these, she realized, biting her lip and calling out Emma's name.

Then she spotted someone; a body floating facedown, one hand draped along the stairs leading to the second floor. Flora's heart dropped into her stomach, but once she'd reached them she realized it was the masseuse. She was heading for the second floor! "Emma!" Flora cried out, taking the stairs as quickly as she dared. "Are you up here? We need to go!"

Outside, the massage parlor shuddered. With the additional activity inside, the building was losing integrity, and the walls started falling outwards before Marie's eyes...

Marrie sent forth vines from her fingers, catching the falling building as it began to lean, water sloshed out of the windows, a slurry of debris, glass and crumbled walls. the vines grew broader and higher spreading across the entire structure.
 Emma heard floras calling from in the corner where she, Rose and Marita were huddled ' Flora? We;re up here!' Emma calloed back down. ' we dont have anywgere to go! Marita said ' the entire place is flooded!

"Emma!" Flora cried, gasping as her foot went through one of the stairs and her leg got caught in the resulting sinkhole. "Auugh! Dammit..." Extricating herself, she limped slowly towards the sound of Emma's voice.

Finally, she rammed the door open with her shoulder to see the three girls safe and sound...at least for the moment. But plaster was raining down on them as the building started falling apart. "Follow me!" she panted. "There's an armored car outside. You're right, we don't have time to leave down the stairs...but there's another option!"

Staggering to the far window, Flora pushed it and winced as the glass slid out of its frame without further ado. This side of the massage parlor faced an alleyway, and the alley walls were high enough to completely submerge it with 10 feet of water. "Marie's keeping this place upright, but not for long! Jump!" she urged them, leading by example and vaulting over the alley wall with a heavy splash.

Emma reluctantly jumped, folowed by rose and marita. all 3 barely cleared the wall, as behind them the building beggan to collapse with a loud crunch, as the frame of the building (which wswas basically all that was left- finally gave way..
 Marie released her hands, and watches as the vines magically vanished leaving the building to finish imploding.

Flora covered her head as she surfaced, raindrops the size of golf balls stinging her face. "This side, over here!" she spluttered, swimming to the alley entrance leading into the street. It was blocked by a fallen awning, but Flora only needed to wrestle with it for a moment before it broke down and sent all four girls spilling into the street on a slalom of floodwater.

"Marie!" Flora shouted, staggering to her feet and waving frantically. She hoped her fuchsia fur stood out enough to catch the Golden Retriever's attention. "Everyone, head for the armored car!" she urged, helping Emma to her feet and pointing frantically in the direction of the Turtle. It had a concrete divider wedged into its front axle and certainly wasn't going anywhere, but it would serve as protection from the storm.

Marie waved the 4 girls over, and headed back to the armored car, which was not going anywhere, unless Marie's powers extended to fixing broken things. the turtle would fiot all of them but it would serve basically as an igloo, and igloo with armor plating.. Marie pulled the side door open and held it open for the others to climb inside. Marita helped Emma along the vixen wheezing as she reached the Turtle ' Hopefully the baby is ok.' Marita said ' Its fine. Its its small enough yet so it doesnt make its presence known. Otherwise i couldnt do a massage. That poor woman!' Emma said ' she didn't make it , did she?

Flora was the last one to enter the Turtle, slamming the door shut behind them and panting in relief as the freezing winds stopped battering her backside. "Nope," she shook her head. "I saw her body on the first floor. I'm sorry." Climbing over the seat, she hugged each girl in turn. "But I'm so grateful you all are okay," she cried. "I can't believe we got here just in time!"

She wiped a tear from her eye and smiled. "I don't know if you saw, but Marie's a little different from the last time you met her..."

Outside, the wind and the rain pounded against the armor, but the vehicle endured. They were finally safe.

Yeah, I er got these.. powers ' Marie said as she huddled across from rose and emma. ' Powers? as in those you might see in movies or comic books?' Marita asked " Yeah, kinda like that. she can can create vines that form into ladrs, shields, open doors.. think sorta like Spiderman ' Marie shrugged. ' Its a long story, and even I still dont fully understand it. Flora knows more about it than i do. Ask her."

"You don't have to keep them if you don't want." Flora was still hugging Emma with glee. "Those powers belonged to Life, an ancient being who'd held them for longer than any of us have been alive. They've been passed down for centuries, and their owner is supposed to protect the earth and everything natural."

She pressed her body against Emma; since neither of them were wearing any clothes, it was the only way to stay warm. "But you never signed up for that," she continued explaining to Marie, "and the powers can be transferred easily. You can either find someone else to carry the burden, or even just let them disappear. Maybe the planet's ready to take care of itself."

She gave Emma a loving kiss. "But on the other hand, it can be kinda fun to have powers. And Sartonic is the best possible place to be if you want to learn how to control them. It's up to you. "

"I'll keep my powers' Marie decided with a shrug. ' we wouldnt be here without them, and learning about then will be fun. " ' Anyway to turn on some heat?' i'm really cold" marita shivered. ' we were soaked in the upstairs area.

Flora extricated herself from Emma's embrace and tried the AC. "No luck, the damage broke the engine, and cars use the engine to generate heat," she reported sadly. "We're stuck here for the time being."

"Everyone should remove any wet articles of clothing and huddle together for warmth," Emma chimed in, thinking back to what she learned while studying to become a nurse.

Outside, the storm was getting worse. Something heavy pinged off the top of their armored vehicle, and the sides shuddered as torrents of water threatened to sweep the car further down the road; only the concrete divider rammed through their engine was keeping them in one place.

After several strained minutes, the Turtle shuddered in a way that sent Flora falling off her carseat. The force of the water had been slowly dislodging the vehicle from the concrete divider, and it was finally starting to give way.

“Hold onto something!” Flora warned before a terrible screeching sound heralded their chassis dislodging from the divider and sending their car hurdling down the road in a flood of water.

The occupants were pushed to the back of the car, which was a blessing in disguise as the shift in weight prevented the car from flipping and going into a deadly roll. Careening off a fallen telephone pole, the car fishtailed and popped all of its airbags before skidding with a loud crash into the side of a large concrete building.

“Is everyone okay?” Flora stammered, getting shakily to her feet. She glanced out the window. They were pressed against the main wall of the Morrell Financial bank. The water was slowly angling the car away, they had less than a minute before being swept further down the road into a newly-created faultline. “We have to abandon the car!” she gasped, glancing at Emma who was closest to the right door. “If we keep the car between us and the water, we can reach the entrance to the bank!”

emma pushed out the door to the car and it gave way causing her to spill out of the car landed inside the hole the car had punched through the side of the building. inside the smell of murky water was everywhere, above them water dripped in from the broken window " so much for getting dry ' Emma sighed ' Come on, we've got more wading to do girls ' Mariita scrambled out next, landing into the water with a splash ' Yuck!" she groaned as she poked her head out, green slime covering her upper body. ' i look like the ' thing from the Green Lagoon" " better that then dead ' Rose said simply as she was the next out, and took a look around. they appeared in to be in the lobby of the bank. rows of screened teller booths sat in the corner, where normally a teller would handle your banking. " " Ok' we'll needed to find a dry area to rest and recuperate ' rose said. " and we'll have time to catch up.. and hopefully, find some clothes. " even bank uniforms is better than strolling around in the buff. ' ' there are worse things to see then other naked ladies ' Emma said with a chuckle. ' this isnt the time for modesty girls. we literally have no clothes. might as well as used to seeing butts and breasts. and in my case, a vixen in her sixth month of pregnancy' Emma said "
- just get further in girls before i push the car away;' Marie saud as she waited for flora to get out. ' just head up the stairs obver there and we can take stock of the situation. she aid before reaching out her paw.

Flora accepted Marie’s hand and delicately slid out of the car, trying to avoid the green goop and sticking to the flooded portion of the lobby. “Oof...” She exhaled in solidarity seeing Marita’s state. “I bet we can find you a water fountain or a bathroom to wash that off.” She grinned at Emma’s comments about their state of undress. “You won’t hear me complain about us all being naked,” she teased. “I’m always trying to get you all to go to the nude beach. Who wants to wear clothes if you can help it?”

She shook her body like a dog, trying to dry herself off as much as possible. “Whew, we made it!” She exclaimed happily. “So long as we avoid the new hole in the wall, I think we’re finally safe from being swallowed up by the storm.”

She glanced around the darkened bank lobby, shivering in the cold. “That being said, this place was clearly evacuated before the storm hit. We’re probably not going to find anyone else here...”

Well.. thats done ' she sighed as a the vines vabnnished.. ' she turned to Rose ' ok, we need to give you a secret identity " Plant Girl , or Vinera.. actually vinera sounds cool. All you ned is a costume. ' Unfortunately these powers dont include creating clothes.thats a different magic line, apparently.

“Poison Ivy from the comics didn’t always wear clothes, did she?” Flora pointed out, leading the girls as they walked through the lobby seeking warmer and drier places. “She had like a leotard or a dress made out of leaves. Same with Zyra from League of Legends, her leaf bikini was part of her body. Actually, if you practice growing leaves on command, you could have one of the best possible powers to run around as a technically-nudist superhero.”

They reached a bathroom, and Flora tested the sinks to find they were working. “You’re in luck, Marita!” she exclaimed, setting the water to hot and squirting soap into her hand. “Anyone who wants to wash themselves off, this is the time to do it. My last shower was over two days ago, with Yurei, and I’ve been through a lot of unpleasent places since then...”

we need to find a shower ' Marita said, as she cleaned off her hands in the sink, seeing the green gunk slide off her claws and into the sinjk. Marie and rose did the same in the other sinks, relieved that this still had hot water, and that this part of the bank was dry. outside the gushing out of water through the hole created by their entry. the loud rush drowned out the water coming from the sinks. " hop in the shower flora ' Emma suggested ' like you said ' you've been needing it.'

Title: Re: Around the Folf
Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on February 24, 2019, 09:38:56 PM

"Thanks, but anyone who wants the shower can have it." Flora had finished scrubbing herself down with hand soap and splashing herself clean with the sink. "I want to explore the bank a bit more. There isn't room for all of us in that shower anyway."

She peeked outside; the lobby was still flooded, but the water level had equalized and the back rooms were okay. "I'll be back soon. Anyone who wants can come with!"

She tiptoed through the metal detectors and crept deeper into the building; there was still a chance other storm victims might be holed out here, and she was wary about encountering strangers. However, she grew bolder when room after room was abandoned. The kitchen was out of power, but she was still able to raid the fridge and eat several slices from an old cake. The staffrooms were deep enough to completely muffle the sounds of the outside storm, but she couldn't find any clothes in their closets. I guess this is one of those banks with a 'suits and blouses from home' dress code, she thought wistfully as she walked through another door...and suddenly her fur stood on end.

Sitting before her was a massive, gleaming vault. the door was sealed shut with a large circular lock, big enough that it would take two people to open. Holy shit... She tried it experimentally, but of course it was locked. Hmmm. You know, if we could break our way in, we could claim we were just trying to hide safely from the storm... The vault was on a raised platform, but the rest of the room was lightly flooded due to a hallway connecting to the lobby. A pair of glass-paned receptionist booths led to the safety deposit boxes. If they're gonna keep the keys somewhere, it'll be in there. Flora examined the gap between the glass and the counter; she could probably fit through that, right?

Wheezing and grunting as she stuffed her head and upper body inside, Flora exhaled with an "Oof!" as she arched her back and shimmied a few more inches...then another...then... "Uhhh, gals?" Flora wriggled helplessly, her feet kicking in the air as her hips were wedged in the window. "Someone came with me, right? I need help, I'm...kinda stuck..."

Marita entered the room where Flora was. ' what ARE you doing flora? Marita said . ' i dont think they left the vault keys in there. come to think of it, there isnt anyone else here.So i dont know why you are sneaking around.' marita added as she came up to where Flora stuck ' now the question is: in or out?Do you want to go in there, or get out"

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on March 02, 2019, 01:32:44 PM

"No, I can see them!" Flora protested, dangling her arm over the counter where a rack of keys hung just out of her reach. "They won't go to the vault, but I bet they open the safety deposit boxes. Push me forward, I just need a little nudge!" She struggled fitfully for a couple more seconds before giving up in frustration. "Look," she panted, "there's a killer storm outside and we're fighting for our lives. Maybe someone stored something useful in these? We're not stealing, we're scavenging for survival, like Tom Hanks in Castaway."

But despite her assurances, Flora knew the burden of choice was on Marita. If she wanted to help Flora loot the deposit boxes, or if she decided that was unethical and instead pulled her out of the window, Flora would have to go along with what Marita decided.

Flora huffed and puffed and sucked her stomach in as much as she could. Scrabbling her fingers for purchase, she gasped in surprise when her hips popped through the window frame and Marita's push sent her flying into the far wall with a crash.

"Nice...job!" Flora encouraged dizzily, stumbling to her feet and rubbing her head. She staggered to the booth's door and opened it, giving Marita access to the deposit boxes. "There are two keyrings, let's split up and see what we can find," she urged, tossing Marita the set for the near wall and crossing to the further one.

The keys were marked, but not with the number of the deposit box, meaning that it was a slow and laborious testing process to find the key that opens each box. The first three were empty; the next contained someone's will. Two empty boxes later, she gasped in surprise at the set of military medals in a fashionable case. "Okay, we're leaving this one here..." she muttered, looking in alarm at the different colored ribbons. "Last thing I want is to make an enemy of somebody with this much military history."

The next deposit box contained the first real score; a handful of glittering gold coins. The next had several rolls of foreign dollars Flora didn't recognize. "I wonder why they didn't store these in a bank..." she murmured, nevertheless retrieving and throwing them in a plastic bag with the coins. "Hey, wait, there's something else here..." With the bills out of the way, she fished out a metal rectangular device with four rows of nine blinking lights. Each light had a name next to it, and a thin black button sat in the center guarded by a removable transpart cover. "What the hell is this?" She raised her eyebrows, opening the cover and experimentally pressing the button.

The device beeped loudly and Flora almost threw it back in the deposit box, fearing it could be a bomb, but then it stopped beeping and died down. <"Results forthcoming,"> a computerized voice informed.

Flora blinked. "Marita, you have any idea what this thing is?"

——————————-

Kojurro was still lying in a crumpled heap somewhere in Sartonic. He would have been perfectly content to keep doing so, but his tontine augment suddenly activated. Detecting his semi-conscious state, it sent a pulse to his brain asking if he was dying. When the brain didn't respond, it flooded him with stimulants, causing him to gasp and roll over reflexively.

“Augh! Ugh...” Kojurro rubbed his forehead. “Where am I...?” He looked around. “Goddamn, the storm is still happening? I hoped to wake up in sickbay...drugged out on morphine...”

The tontine augment sent another signal to his brain, seeing if he was alive. This caused his fur to stand on end...every member of the tontine promised never to scan for a status update unless they knew another member had died. He’ll need to return to his deposit box and see which names remained; last he remembered only four of them were still alive after all this time. Tontine augment, he asked, which participant requested the update?

It reported his own name, and he gasped in surprise. Someone had access to his tontine status indicator? He quickly crossed to the nearest window, shattered it with a spinning kick, and fled into the torrential storm. If someone had broken into his deposit box, there was no time to waste.

"Naw, the door opens from the inside." Flora crossed and pushed the door aside so Marita could enter. She looked at the rectangular device again, then set it aside and continued unlocking deposit boxes.

About thirty minutes later, she'd found a fair amount of valuables among the mostly-useless contents (usually notarized documents or birth certificates) but had to leave a number of items that would be difficult to fence, like passports and land/property deeds. "That wasn't as successful a search as I'd hoped," she admitted. "Most of this is only useful if we find ourselves needing to purchase something. You find anything good?"

She glanced at the mysterious rectangle and jumped when it suddenly lit up. Each of the little lights next to the names was now red, except for one that was blue. She checked the name: 小十郎よしひろ. Hmmm, if we can find a working computer we could translate that to English. Glancing to make sure Marita wasn't looking, she slipped the device into her bag of money. "We should probably get back to the others, see if they're still showering."

"Kojurro?" Flora asked. "I wonder if he's related to the Dr. Kojurro at Sartonic." Now that they had a name to go off of, she decided to hold onto it. Hopefullly it wasn't actually a bomb or something... Then Marita mentioned food, which broke Flora out of her contemplative ruminations. "Ooh I'd found a room with food! There was a fridge back in the break room!" Flora led the way back down the hallway. "I wasn't brave enough to go rummaging through old forgotten lunches, but there was a partially eaten cake that wasn't bad."

However, when they entered the break room, the floor was now flooded. "What? That couldn't have come from the ground floor." Flora followed the source of the water and found herself at a stairway going up. she followed it, and eventually found herself creeping through concrete corridors straining and shuddering from the full brunt of the storm. The walls were badly leaking, and eventually she decided it wasn't safe enough to continue.

"Bad news," she told Marita somberly, returning to the flooded break room. "We won't be able to go much higher; the bank's ceiling is slowly eroding; water's flowing in from the top floor down. I think we're fine for the time being, but we have to hope this storm doesn't last forever..."

it wnont last forever, naturally. earths atmosphere is simply not stable enough to keep storms going indefinitely. jupiter which has storms that last for literally hundreds of years, is what you are thinking of. " marita said ' come on, lets go find something to eat. at this point "i'l eat just about anything.

rose had finished cleaning her paws as best she could in the sink. ' just dont hog all the hot water , you two. i'm going to need a shower muself pretty soon. " dont worruy' emma replied . marie and I are almost done..'

"We've got one more option," Flora nodded. "I saw a vending machine on the upper floor."

She led the way to the staircase. "Be careful," she warned, as water was leaking from the ceiling and the walls were showing signs of disintegration. "Things are a lot less stable up here."

The vending machine contained a decent supply of chips, pretzels, gum, and other snacks. "Oh man, that fish jerky would be perfect..." Flora panted, pressing her face against the glass. "Let's see. If we can find some sort of heavy object to break the glass..." She spotted a potted plant and lugged it over. "Help me with this. Three...two...one...HEAVE!"

The succulent smashed against the vending machine glass, bounced backward with alarming elasticity and making Flora dart out of the way with a startled cry. Simultaneously the floor collapsed from underneath them and sent the plant, folf, and machine plummetting down to the next floor.

"Marita! Are you okay?" Flora called out in alarm, rubbing her hamstrings from the sudden unexpected fall. She'd ended the tumble unharmed, albeit in a crumpled heap and covered in sawdust. "I think I'm okay--whoa!" Abruptly the floor gave out again, sending her plummeting into the lobby with a heavy splash. Luckily the water level was high enough that it completely dampened her landing. "Oof..." she groaned, paddling to the surface. "Good news, Marita, most of the snacks are okay!" she called out, gathering handfuls of the bags. "Get down here!"

just gran me some chips ' marita said as she came down..
Emma and marie locked lips in a warm and deep kiss, the golden retriever sliding her tongue into the vixens mouth as the pair brushed against the vine screen covering the shower. Maries claws moved down from emmas chin and down over Emma;s chest and finally to the bulge in her belly. Emma moaned in pleasure as she returned the kiss to Marie, feeling her tongue collide with Marie's inside her mouth. after about 5 minutes, Marie broke the kiss, and stared at Emma.. ' you've been wanting that for awhile, havent you? Emma smirked. ' y-yeah actually ' Marie blushed , as Emma stroked her cheek with her claws. ' well, consider this an open invitation for future kisses.' the vixen smiled. 'for now though, lets get out of the shower, because Rose will want some hot water for her shower. Marie moved the vine screen aside and the 2 girls exited the shower and Rose moved into the space they had just left." thanks for leaving me some hot water girls. just dry off as best you can while you wait for me.' she said with a smile, as Marie moved the vine across the opening to give rose some privacy

Flora swam to the safety of the stairs, clutching as many waterproof snacks as she could carry. "You're lucky the collapse missed you..." she panted to Marita. "That was terrifying! I may be soaked to the bone again, but all things considered I got off easy."

Collapsing on the marble tiles, Flora got a glimpse of the outside world from the ruined lobby. "It's nighttime...we might want to start considering finding a good place to sleep. That staff room had two couches we could push together to make a bed." She sat up. "Wonder if the others are still showering, or if they've gone off to do some exploring of their own. Should we go check the bathroom?"

no,we should get the beds set up first .' Marita shook her head. ' theres no question of finding clothes to sleep in, we will just have to get used to each others curves..not that i mind that ' she smirked. ' the sooner we get them set up the sooner we can we get some sleep. we would also get our choice of sleeping spotds as we were first, Emma, rose and Marie would just have to take what was left. last to come, gets whatevers left after all ' Marita said. she glanced at the snacks, which ran from chipds of various flavors,. to fgronala bars, to packaged fruit pages to pretzeks ' seems like we have a bunch of snacks to munch on, so thats something at least."
emma sat near the sink, lettinmg the warm temperture in the room dry off the watr on her fur. Marie was looking at herself in the bathroom mirrir, trimming some over-long eyelashes. Rose wss humming softly to heself in the shower washing off all the gunk. which swirled around the bathroom drain.

"Okay, let's do it!" Flora agreed, hoisting herself to her feet. "We're certainly getting our cardio for the day, going up and down these stairs."

Carrying the snacks back to the second floor, Flora walked into the break room and nodded approvingly at the pair of couches. "It's gonna be a tight squeeze, getting five of us onto this double-couch, but at least that'll help keep us warm." It was getting colder as the sun set outside, Flora felt a chill travel through her fur as she and Marita dragged the couches into the corner and pushed them together into a decent makeshift bed. "Actually, this looks pretty big," Flora corrected herself, flopping onto the center with an exhausted sigh. "Oh yeah, I can fall asleep on this. Give it a try!" she encouraged Marita.

marita climbed in in next to flora. ' yeah this isnt that bad. ' Cushions are reasonably soft, all we are missing is a blanket to cover us. otherwise we'll just snuggle together and use each others body heat to stay warm.' Marita said as she settled in. ' i dont know about you, but i'm too wired to sleep at the moment. we could have some of those snacks you brought, as whatever passes for dinner.' She shrugged as she reached for some of the snacks flora had piled up. marta picked out a pack of sour cream and onion chips

Rose finished her shower then pushed back the vice screen so she could dry off in the relatively warm room.

Flora grinned and grabbed a bag of salt-and-vinegar chips. "This is kinda fun..." she admitted, stuffing her face. "I mean, now that we're not in imminent danger. Just sitting in bed together, eating junk food...it almost feels like a sleepover." She sighed. "Sorry, I know that sounds weird. It's just, I never got to have those when I was young. My parents didn't even let me have friends. This is firing some dendrites I'd long forgotten about."

She flashed Marita a warm smile. "You've kept a really level head through all this. I've seen the other girls looking to you for emotional support. Thanks for helping us all get through this ordeal in one piece."

you never had a sleeopver?' marita said ' really? Ok, okj, then we'll have a sleepover. so, flora what do you want to do first. Games, chat. or gossip? i would have some sleepovers with my friends growing up.. we would basically use it as an excuse to play games talk hair styles, and fashion. it wsnt until i was 11 or 12 that we started french kissing each other at these sleepovers , the first time i ever did that was with a girl i knew named Kora. she was a lionesss, liked to tell jokes, was real good at video games, and she and i were best friends until we graduated high school.   she went west for college i stayed local. then i got hooked on biproxytol, and that was not a good time for me ' Marita sighed as she fished inside the bag for some more chips,. ' biproxytol is serious stuff. very expensive, very addicting, usually takes loads of treatment to detoxify you. sometimes, however, you can get clean cold turkey. i .. was one of the lucky ones that was able to quit. its not a proud time in my life and i've only rarely talked about it ' Marita said. '

"You french-kissed your friends?" Flora gasped. "Is that normal?" She'd noticed that Marita's circle tended to live rather-open-minded lifestyles, but she'd never thought she was encountering people like that at an early age. "Do people normally kiss each other at sleepovers? No wonder my parents wouldn't let me have them." She sighed. "I guess I shouldn't be too hard on my family. I never saw either of my parents, both spent days and nights at work. I have more memories of the maids and cooks than either of them." She finished her bag, crumpled it into a ball and flung it at the trash can, where it fell far short. "Homeschooled, no church, no television or video games allowed... it was just me alone in that mansion all day. Except for my demon of a younger sister, and my older sister who was kicked out of the family before I turned five."

She shook her head to stop the flashbacks. "But enough of that. What sort of games do you play at a sleepover? Let's play some!" she bounced excitedly.

yes we did. usually as part of truth or dare. we would only go to that, after all the other games were done.' Marita explained. ' and yes theres some of that stuff at sleepovers. its innocent stuff really, its not like we were fondling each other and strippingoff our clothes or aqnything or anything. at 11 or 12 you're still innocent about the ways of the world. and I was and we were.' marita said. ' As for games we could play.. hmm. 20 questions. you think of something, it can be a name of a person place or thing, and i have 20 questions to guess who or what it is.. other games we could play are charades or pictionary or guess that wordf. those were always fun at our parties..Kora usually won the pictonary games, come to think it she usually won just about every kind of game we played.. so. we made her a judge so that others could play and win ' Marita said with a grin..

Shes single, too busy with work to tie herself down. now lets see, when was the last time i talked with her? hmm. it was prior to all this.. so, a couple months ago. i have her number in my cell phone, we've been meaning to reunite but after this recent disaster thats gonna be awhile..' marita said shaking her head. “Sure!” Flora crawled over and laid her head on Marita’s shoulder so she could listen. She couldn’t contain her excitement; this was such a sleepover thing to do, calling friends on the phone to gossip! Maybe sometime in the future, after everything settled down, Marita could take me on a trip to San Diego to see Kora, she thought. Flora had always wanted to see California, but drug-running with Emi’s gang rarely had involved enough time or money for vacationing.

maritsa dialed the number and the uimage of a gorgeous lioness with bright blue eyes appeared on screen. she was seated at a table with a stack of papers in front of her ' Marita! kora laughed as she responded ' so nice to hear from you.. its only been 5 week s 5 days 12 hours andf 17 minutes since you last called.. what exactly have you been up to..' its a long story ' marita began. ' you do realize that is a timeface call. i can see you;'re in the buff ' Kora laughed as Marita blushed . " thats a long story too. the entire town has been trashed, and our clothes fell apart.. ' and its not like theres a surviving department store in town. " yes i heard about some weird storm out where you guys are. some 'act of god', they were calling it. it doesnt surprise me that you're involved somehow, you were always the adventurous type.. ' she stopped as she noticed Flora resting her head on marita.. " Oh! a frioend! Marita why didnt you introduce us? Manners dear.. “Hi Doctor Kora!” Flora waved. “My name’s Flora, I’m Marita’s roommate. And yeah, normally I’d be wearing something when I meet someone for the first time, but as weird as this sounds, this storm actually did destroy our clothes. It definitely isn’t a normal storm, we’re still getting to the bottom of it.”

She blushed. “I heard you live in San Diego, that’s so awesome! Have you ever done archaeology work in the Middle East? There’s a bunch of ancient ruins out in the desert near where we live, not sure what culture they’re from though.”

hello flora nice to meet you. yes the Middle east is filled with ruins. Mesopotamia was after all the first major civilization that we know of. the entire region is covered with ruins from the various kingdoms and cultures that lived in that region throughout history. Babylon for instance was one of the ancient worlds 7 wonders, well at least the gardens were. I've been fortunate enough to do some excavation work at Nineveh, which is mention in the bible , all the residents of that city put on sackcloth and sprinkled themselves with ash to show repentance of their sins before God, so that he would not destroy the city.
anyway my connection tells me you are in the Nubian desert in northern Sudan.' Kora said ' the Nubians were great pottery makers, some examples of their work are in the Louvre in France . it was part of the ancient Egypt kingdom in antiquity. " you could talk like this all day ' Marita cracked. what are those papers on your desk. ' Kora sighed ' final exams for my class. ' I'm about halfway through them, some of the kids get it, some dont. flora, you're a folf, aren't you, a wolf- fox hybrid? that's so unique, and i love love, love that shade of pink in your fur! its gorgeous!' Kora said.

Flora beamed. “Why, thank you! Can you believe it’s natural?” She swept her pearl-white hair back, as if playfully modeling. “Marita’s met all sorts of odd characters since coming to live at a psionic research institute. I’m one of the more normal ones, if I do say so myself!”

She grinned. “Best of luck grading those final papers! I bet you’re excited for the quarter to be over, you’ll get a bunch of time to relax and enjoy San Diego. This is the perfect time of year to visit the beach!”

this isnt quarter papers, this is end of year papers ' Kora said ' in some cases these grades may determine if kids graduate or not. so theres pressure there. this college is quite prestigious and i make good money teaching there.and yes San Diego has its scenic attractions. I love the Zoo here for instance."" she said. ' so flora, how did you run into Marita here? I would imagine she's talked about me a bit, we were after all best friends for many years." Kora said.

"She did! I've heard all sorts of great things about you!" Flora beamed. "Hope I get to meet you in person someday." She decided she'd better lie than go into detail about meeting Marita while saving the world storming a flying warship. "Marita and I met at Sartonic! I'm also from the United States, actually, but I moved from Cornova to become a test subject. The pay's not great, but the free lodging and chance to immerse myself in a whole new culture has been more than worth it."

She perked her ears at Kora's mention of a zoo. "I've never been to a zoo! What sort of animals do they have at yours?" she asked.

they have all kinds ' Kora smiled ' lions, tigers elephants, monkeys, some of the rarest creatures on Earth call the San Diego zoo home, and its one the leasding zoos in the world for animal habitat conservation. " she smiled ' it really is a sight to see1" marie left the bathroom heading out to find where Marita and flora were . this left rose and Emma alone together to finish cleaning up which they soon did, and followed Marie out the door.

“Rare species like lions and tigers qualify for zoos, huh?” Flora’s eyes lit up. “As a folf, I’m one of the rarest on the planet, in fact I might be the only one in existence! How much do you think a zoo would pay to have me as an exhibit? I think I could get used to that life!”

She looked over as Marie and the others walked into the room. “Hi gals, we’re on FaceTime with one of Marita’s friends! Kora, this is Marie and Rose, they’re Marita’s girlfriends, and the vixen is my girlfriend Emma!” She scooted to make room on the bed. “I know that’s a lot of names to just dump on you like that.”

Post by: Nick22 on April 25, 2019, 11:45:28 AM

I've heard of rose before' Kora said. " Marita talks about her pretty regularly. " Hi Kora! Rose smiled ' Hows California treating you? and Is there any chance we could finagle, like, two weeks to crash at your place? we'd gladly pay.." Kora laughed. ' as guests, sure! as renters, thats another story. you'd need good money to live out here ,even for a month. Housing prices just keep going up and up. and a months rent, at my place, is easily 10000 bucks. i can afford it, because my university pays me very well and covers some of my housing costs. t As fort San Diego, the scenery is beautiful the folks are beautiful even if most of them have had ' work' done, and its sunny nearly all the time. unfortunately all that drives up the cost of living here. as for how i am doing, i'm doing well. '

She then turned to flora ' well unique specimens are treated differently , its why they spare pink lobsters, and other rare colored lobsters when they find them. .its a question of whether they would treat you as an outlier within your species.

There are other folfs in the world, Flora , you arent unique in that regard , but your coloring is definitely unique. folfs usually range from brown to black to grey in darker colors, and white to yellow in lighter colors, although there are few that are red or orange. . with folfs, usually theres magical or psionics abilities involved, it comes with the combination. There's actually a folf at my university, he's a professor of chemistry, and hes pushing to ban animal testing. things like dogs, cats, other creatures and the like. Professor Fennis is his name. nice chap, his a mixture of gray and black and cream fur." Kora said. " hes been at the university close to 20 years.

"Other folfs?" gasped Flora. Her mind was suddenly alight with possibilities. "Others like me?" She's never thought to do any research into her kind, since she'd assumed she was alone in the world. "Yeah, if we ever visit I'd love to meet Professor Fennis, or any other folfs!" This last sentence was punctuated with an uncontrollable yawn; the adrenaline of their action-packed day was finally running dry, replaced with a weariness stronger than any she'd felt since her first night after arriving in the desert. "I hope you three like the bed..." she mumbled to the three newcomers, blinking sleepily. "It's not much, but it's what Marita and I could make considering the circumstances. We don't have a blanket, but we can snuggle for warmth... also, there's some pretzels and other snacks if you want a bit of food before you fall asleep."

I'll be in touch, and it will be far sooner than the nearly 6 weks it took you to call me. Ha Ha. Have a good night, girl. Pleasant dreams. "She seemed really nice, Marita!" Flora yawned. "Oh man...I don't know about the rest of you but today is catching up to me." She almost drifted off, but then nature called and she staggered off the bed. "Actually, if you're all done with the bathroom, I gotta pee. I'll be right back."

Kojurro vaulted over a flying car. A tornado was hot on his heels, threatening to drag him to his doom, but he found evermore-hidden energy reserves to increase his pace. Vaulting over a collapsing building, he combat-rolled under a sparking powerline and skidded down a fallen billboard. His labcoat had been long shredded to bits, leaving only his tattered ninja catsuit.

He winced when he landed on a diesel truck and almost slipped on the oil leaking from the ruptured engine. I'm getting old... Gritting his teeth, he twirled with inhuman reflexes to avoid a lightning strike and gasped when the lightning ignited the gasoline and sent him flying from a terrible explosion.

He hit a snowbank and spared himself only a 15-millisecond power nap before backflipping to his feet and continuing his sprint through sheets of stinging hail. It's possible I should have waited until after the storm to rescue my tontine box... He deflected a flying chunk of sidewalk with his fist, ...but too late to turn back now.

His estimated he'd reach the bank by early morning.

Flora returned, a bit too quickly to have made the trip all the way down to the first-floor. "I'm back!" she announced, looking guiltily at the potted plant in the hallway. Washing her hands in the staff room sink, she glanced at the sleeping arrangements. "Is everyone settled for bed? Cause I'm knocking out."

It was early afternoon when Flora felt herself rousing from her dreamless stupor. Stretching lazily, she blinked in surprise when someone's calf got in the way of her foot. "...Whu?" She tried to turn over, and found Marita’s chest in the way.

Finally her thoughts started settling as her brain recollected the events of last night, and she remembered she was crammed in a bed with four other naked women. ...Maybe I don't need to get up just yet. Snuggling back in, she settled herself into the curvature of Emma's back, closed her eyes, and just enjoyed the warmth of the morning sun shining through the office window.

Then she heard Emma's question and realized she'd woken her girlfriend up. "I didn't see sour cream & onion," she yawned, "but unless somebody else ate it, there was a bag of cheddar & sour cream Ruffles." Assuming Emma was hoping to leave the bed, Flora rolled over and snuggled with Marita instead. "'Morning," she smiled. "How did you sleep?"

"Awesome," Flora yawned. She snuggled deeper into Marita's side. "Do we have to get up right away?" she murmured. "I'm actually rather comfy in the middle. And you're all keeping the bed so warm..."

Abruptly the window shattered as someone rappeled through it, sending a rainbow of glass skittering to the ground and punctuating Flora's startled scream. "Hands off the tontine box, you thief!" Kojurro commanded, combat rolling and coming up to a perfectly balanced Yoga tree pose.

"I don't know what that is!!" Flora scrambled backwards under his murderous gaze, bulldozing over Emma and Marie as fell off the bed with a startled whoop.

"Girls?" Kojurro asked, tilting his head in surprise. "I certainly didn't expect to see you here. Nor to be the best-dressed person in the room..." His nighttime sprint had done a number on his equipment; other than his subdermal augments, his shredded ninja catsuit was the only article of clothing to survive the trip, and it wasn't leaving many of his scratches and surface wounds to the imagination. "Whatever transpired to leave you five in this state?"

“Most buildings I saw were leveled, your best bet would be the underground floor of the shopping mall. The mall itself was demolished when I passed it last night, but I know it had clothes stores in the subterranean level. Can’t tell you much more than that I’m afraid, I was a bit pre-occupied surviving the storm,” he apologized. “However, we have something far more important to sort out!” He swiveled an accusatory finger at Flora, who peeped in surprise and fell back on the floor. “My sensors indicate you have my tontine box! Hand it over!”

Flora shakily grabbed her sack of valuables she’d looted from the deposit boxes. “Um...would it hold up in court if I claimed I just found this bag on the floor and was totally going to return it?”

“I have no interest in what you do with the rest,” Kojurro assured, withdrawing the black box. His name remained the only one with a green light next to it. He pressed his thumbprint against the same button Flora had before, and the box whirred and opened up. Flora gasped as the box projected a 3d hologram.

“During the Scorched Earth war, I served in the Vulture Scavenger Corps,” Kojurro explained. “I was part of Lt. Raleigh’s squad, we usually competed with the Kibagamis to be the most successful scouting unit in the corps. And we’d probably have beaten them more often if we hadn’t all been backstabbing scumbags. But one day, my squad discovered this map in a ruined museum.” He skipped around the map by flicking his finger. “It showed the route to a fabulous treasure, here in the Middle East. Of course, we were in the middle of a war, and nobody had time to go chasing treasure. Plus, we weren't in a line of work with great life expectancy."

He closed the box down. "So we formed a tontine. We would all keep a digital copy of the map, only usable when a single one of us remained alive. It's been so many years...but I am finally the last one." Tears stained his eyes.

"Is that why you came to this region?" Flora asked.

Kojurro nodded. "And it appears I wasn't the only one; it's highly unusual for this many members of the tontine to die so quickly. Apparently this storm hit much more than just Sartonic." He regarded the collected girls. "But this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for you all. I'll need assistants on this expedition. If you will come with me, we can follow this map and all become rich. A fabulous treasure awaits us!"

Treasure?' Count us in " marie said " only .. well we'll need clothes and supplies.. and someoine who is good at geograhpy, landmarks and all that.." Marita started to laugh. " We have just the gal for that. or should i say, professor?' She grinned ' Kora is an expert in this field, although I dont think she's been on too many "treasure hunts" she knows a LOT about ruins and artifacts. . I'm sure she'll help us out. we'll need to get some stuff for her while shopping, and well, a general idea of when and where to meet up with her..' She pulled out her phone.. " ok, we are currently in North Kush.. theres an airfield in the north of the city.. hopefully its not completely and utterly trashed. ..'
"Lets go shopping.. or more accurately, looting ' Emma said ' because much as I have gotten used over the past day or so to seeing your bare forms , ladies, we do need to cover up..not just for modesty's sake, but from protection from the heats sake. This is a city in the desert after all."
Lead the way, Kojurro" rose said " I'm in the mind for a purple drress and umbrella combo. not quite southern belle, but one with ample coverage of most of my body." The group began heading down the stairs toewawards the bank enterance. Opening the door, however, bropught a quick remindfer that it was about 30 degrees warmer outside than it was inside the bank.

"Yeah, I'm all for nudism but this is getting ridiculous." Flora scarfed down a bag of stale chips as they descended the stairs for the back door. "There've been other times I spent a whole day without clothes, but never when this much shit was going down around me."

"To be fair, many wartime infections come from dirty cloth getting in wounds. You might be doing yourself a favor considering how many minor cuts and bruises you've suffered," Kojurro pointed out optimistically. "And as for your suggestion Marita, an expert in local archaeology would be a welcome addition to the expedition. This map takes us through several ancient sites, some populated and some not, and I'd love to have an experienced academic telling us what to do."

Flora staggered back when the door opened and a blast of hot air hit them like a truck. "Holy cow! The storm turned into a heat wave overnight!"

"Indeed." Kojurrro held out his hand. "At least the rain stopped. And we all have fur, so nobody will get sunburned."

Flora marveled at how badly the town was destroyed as they hiked towards the mall. At times she spotted a few other people, but everybody was evacuating the commercial district for the residential neighborhoods. Nobody paid the group any heed.

Thirty minutes later Flora was drenched in sweat and her legs felt like pudding. "Can I please drink some groundwater?" she panted, climbing over a collapsed highway fence and shaking her fur like a dog to get soaked hair out of her eyes. "Just a bit. I'm gonna pass out."

"As your doctor, I could never allow that! Don't worry, it's right there," Kojurro declined, pointing at a massive pile of rubble and waterlogged concrete. "I could carry that bag of valuables you stole from the bank, if that would help."

Flora only clutched it closer to her chest. "How can you even tell?" She squinted at where he was pointing. "It looks like every other destroyed building in this town."

"It's easily thrice as large as anything around it." Once they'd passed the faultlines spidering across the parking lot, Kojurro tried to move a boulder without any luck. "I don't think we'll be able to excavate a way to the lower levels," he confessed. "Not without specialized equipment, or a bulldo--"

"Over here!" Flora called, waving. She'd found the entrance to the underground parking lot. "This is a lot more open. Dunno if it goes all the way inside, but we can at least escape the sun!"

emma sweltereed as she made her way into the parking lot enterance, or more accurately, what was left of it. the temperature inside was roughly half that of the outside, so the sweat dripping off of her quickly cooled and becsame sticky to the touch. ' we;; this is a lot better' Marita said as she entered ' the temperatuire, not the state of the garage. we're lucky its intact enough to hold up the lower flooors . ' we'll need to get inside the mall, and hope like heck the stores are intact enough to sell stuff. " " i dont know about you girls ' marie said , " but i could go for a nice stuff drink right about now.." she said wiping swat off of her chest.

Flora tiptoed her way through the rubble. "Keep your eyes peeled!" she warned. "There's broken bottles there, and I think that's shattered windshield fragments around that upturned car. Lotta crap was blown into this parking entrance and couldn't go anywhere else."

Covering her crotch for protection as she waded her way delicately through crashed I-beams, splintery tree trunks and other waist-high debris, Flora sighed in frustration when she reached the inner double-doors to find they were shut. "Ugggh..." she sighed, collapsing against them. "We're locked out!" she shouted back to her allies after trying in vain to push the door open. "The doors open outward, and all this crap is blocking it!"

"...Hello?"

Flora's fur stood on end when someone replied from the other side of the door. "Hello?" She asked, dropping to her knees and attempting to peer under the crack.

"Oh god, someone's out there!" the voice shouted deeper into the mall. "Please help us! We're trapped in the mall, there's no way out!"

"Um, I think we might be able to clear the way out..." Flora bit her lip. "Gonna take forever, though..."

"Well, no time like the present!" Kojurro dug his nails into a telephone pole and rolled it sportingly out of the way."

"I guess there are six of us..." Flora sighed. "Hang on in there!" she called under the door. "We're paving the way!"

Hours later, Kojurro and the girls were covered in grime and trash from their dirty work. Flora panted with exhaustion as Kojurro held an I-beam out of the way as she forced the door open. "Come on, come on!" she growled through gritted teeth as a small party of mallgoers and employees rushed their way into the parking lot.

"Oh, thank you and thank Providence!" an armadillo raised his arm to shake the hand of their rescuer, then decided not to when he observed how filthy she was. "We took shelter from the storm, but there was nothing to eat or drink! Do you have any food or water?"

"We don't even have clothes." Flora admitted. "You're gonna want to head for the residential neighborhoods, we saw medical and rescue personnel there." She glanced back inside. "Is this all of you?"

"No, we had...a minor situation." The armadillo shifted his foot and some of the others traded guilty glances. "There was a lizard who kept somehow finding fruit and seeds to eat...but she didn't want to share. We got...desperate...and she fled into the air ducts. We searched for her all night, but she kept slipping away."

"What, were you trying to kill her?" Kojurro gasped.

"Survival brings out the worst in anyone!" a panda defended herself. "I wanted to live. On that note, I'm not spending another second in this hellhole!"

Flora wrinkled her nose as the townsfolk left without further ado. "Well, we better find that lizard girl..." she muttered, taking her first step into the dark and abandoned mall. "Though hopefully in a way that lets her know we come in peace."

well offeruing her the peace sign isnt going to help. " marita said, shaking off as much grime as possible. here and there light fizzled off and on. some of the lower floors looked almost pristine, but the higher up you went the greater the damage. ' looks like this place had a food court' marita said looking at a still standing kiosk . ' Lets see if anything there still works. ' even if it is only a soda machine. Flora gulped as she tiptoed into the food court. “Erm, Miss Lizard…?” she called out. “Please don’t hurt us...we’re not here to kill you. You can come out!”

“Should we split up?” Kojurro asked, grabbing a mop from the ground and brandishing it like a sword. “We can cover more stores that way.”

“Mrrrph.” Flora grumbled, looking at her grit-stained fur. “Honestly, I’d rather find a way to wash off first. They said there’s no running water, so I dunno how exactly we’re supposed to do that…”

"There might be pots or buckets of water in the kitchen,” Kojurro suggested, steeling himself and his improvised quarterstaff.

“I’m not sure you’re sending the right message by arming yourself…” Flora gulped and hopped the counter. But all their trepidation was for naught; she couldn't even access the kitchen. "The ceiling straight-up collapsed!" she gasped. "And there's water leaking from the ground!"

"That might explain why the water lines are down," Kojurro nodded. "That means we can probably repair it, if we bypass the busted pipe...what are you doing?"

Flora was scaling the collapsed ceiling. "I don't care where it's leaking from, I want this crap washed off me!" she answered. Delicately, she reached the apex of the blockage and tried to begin her hike down into the kitchen...and slipped on her grease-stained paws and tumbled into the blackness.

"Flora!" Kojurro called. He darted around, but there was no other way into the kitchen. "Are you okay?"

Flora hit the ground with an "Oof!" and a heavy thud. Groaning softly, she blinked and lay still, catching her bearings.

She heard Kojurro calling for her. "I'm fine!" she replied dizzily, rubbing her head. "Just a bit of a tumble." She staggered to her feet. "I...woah!" She'd stepped in a wire snare; before she could take another step, a makeshift pulley system flipped her upside down and dragged her into the air with a terrified shriek.

"You assholes want water that bad?" a voice snarled from the blackness. "Then take this!!!" Flora screamed in terror as a hose nozzle shot her in the chest with stinging water. She spluttered for mercy, shielding her face desperately as her assailant stepped into the light and cut the stream. "Wait...Flora?"

The folf gasped as she recognized the blue-skinned desert lizard. "Sharal'tar! What the hell are you doing here?" Sharal'tar was another test subject at Sartonic, and Yurei's ex-girlfriend. She was one of the few test subjects with more than one psionic power; she could control plants and affect their growth rate, and she could shrink down to the size of an ant.

"Me? I'm trying not to die." Sharal'tar glared, lowering her hose. "Why are you naked in the mall again?"

"I've been fighting for my life too, outside in the storm!" Flora protested, flushing red. "I didn't get the luxury of camping in a basement the whole time."

"Wait, Sharal, what exactly did you mean by 'again'?" Kojurro asked from the other side of the blockade.

"Oh, she never told you that story? Her dress got caught and eaten by the escalator." Sharal'tar smirked. "Is that why you came back? You hoping to maybe find what's left of it down here?"

“Sure, yeah, laugh it up,” Flora folded her arms, trying to maintain her composure despite being bound and hung like a captured animal. “You just tried to murder me!”

“Forgive me, my last 24 hours haven’t exactly been peaches!” Sharal’tar snapped. “It was fucking Lord of the Flies in here, just because they couldn’t understand I was growing the food fast as I could, not hiding it!”

“Wow. Personally, I’m shocked that your award-winning personality couldn’t clear that up,” Flora retorted sarcastically. Then Sharal’tar shot her in the nuts. “Ow, fuck! Hey! Stop it!” she protested, trying and failing to protect herself as Sharal’tar blasted every part of her body in succession. “Jesus, that hurts!”

“What? I’m cleaning you up, just like you wanted.” Sharal’tar dropped the hose after turning Flora into a sopping chandelier of frazzled fur. “Who else is here, anyway?” She pushed the stove aside from where she’d barricaded the side entrance to the kitchen, letting anyone else enter if they wish.

"Hey Emma. And yeah, I've seen you three around Sartonic." Sharal'tar blinked in shock at everyone's state of undress. "Seriously though, where are all your clothes?"

"Can someone let me down...please?" Flora muttered weakly. "All the blood's rushing to my head..."

Sharal'tar ignored her. "You'll all want to follow me," she said. "There are clothing stores deeper in the mall." She glanced in surprise at Marie's vines. "Wait, you're a plantbender as well?" she gasped. "How did I not know that before? I thought I was the only one at Sartonic!"

If you have similar powers, Sharal'tar, perhaps you could teach her to control them? the last time she tried opening a door with them, she tore the door off the hinges>"

Well in the meantime, we do ned to get some clothes and suppplies. oh, and we neeed to get Flora down from there ' Marie said. She gestured with her clwas vines wrapped around floras legs and with a pull flora was sent sprawling to the ground.

Sharal'tar winced as Marie's vines snapped Flora's snare trap and dragged Flora into the linoleum. "Yeah...you could definitely benefit from some training. It looks like you're not thinking of them as an extension of yourself; you're wielding them like a whip when they're closer to an extra arm." She waved her arm, and a pair of vines grew from the floor and dangled Flora in the air from both legs. "Like this. Treat them like limbs. I like to imagine I'm an octopus and they're my tentacles, it helps get my brain in the right mindset."

"Come on, girls, do I really have to be the guinea pig for this?" Flora begged, grasping desperately for the ground as Sharal'tar bobbed her like a hook on a fishing line.

Sharal'tar smirked as she acquiescently dropped Flora back to the ground. "Don't worry, Marie, you've completed the hard part, which is summoning and controlling the vines. Now it's a matter of perfecting your technique. Stick with me, and soon you'll be threading needles with those things."

Kojurro crossed to the refrigerator and opened it to find a collection of fruit, seeds, and other organic edibles. "Sharal'tar, I hope you don't mind, but we've had a long day, and I could do for some lunch." He threw some sunflower seeds into his mouth and swallowed them, shells and all. "All things considered, fruit and soda are far better than I expected to find," he noted through a full mouth.

How close are we to the clothing department?' Marita asked Sharal'tar. " because I seriously nered some new clothes. " i need something that covers up my pregnancy" Emma chimed in. " Something that says ' warm and comforting" something in light blue or pink.' she said.

"This way," Sharal'tar lead the group delicately through the mall once everyone had eaten their fill.

The mall was wrecked around them. Flora looked in awe at the destruction as Sharal'tar led the way through the ruined buildings. "I can't believe the storm caused as much destruction as it did," she breathed aloud. "How long do you think it'll take to recover from all this?"

"Who cares?" shrugged Kojurro. "We'll be traipsing across the Sahara chasing fabulous riches!"

"You'll be doing what now?" Sharal'tar looked over.

"I said, 'We'll--'" Kojurro started, but Flora covered his mouth and pulled him aside. "We don't want her to come!" she whispered urgently.

"Why not?" Kojurro pushed her aside. "She already mentioned she's going to train Marie in plantbending. How's she supposed to do that if we're off on adventures?"

"But that means...we need to split the money another way!" Flora protested. "I don't want a seventh of my riches to go to her!"

"As the one who owns the map, I get twice as much gold as the rest of you. It's only fair. Except I'll bequeath that bonus share of the loot to Miss Sharal'tar! Now come on, no more of this." Kojurro returned to the group and explained the upcoming expedition to collect his winnings by following the treasure map.

"Whoa. I mean, of course I'm down. Better than sticking around in this hellhole while they rebuild," Sharal'tar shrugged.

"Oh please, don't act nonchalant! You once worked as a mat sprayer to make rent, this is not shrug money!" Flora spat.

Sharal'tar ignored her. "Here we are," she spread her arms in presentation at a destroyed clothing boutique. "Help yourself. Whatever you find's gonna be a bit dusty, but it's better than--literally--nothing."

the bountique was , as stated, in ruins, and most of the clothes were trashed as well. pieces of fabric were strewn about, half of the blouse here, the upper part of a dress there. " Yeah theres nothing here for us.' Marita said picking up what once was a fetching red dress, but was now shredded into strips. ' We'll need to keep looking. i imagine theres several dress shops in the mall, hopefully between them we'll piece together some outfits..where is the next closest store?' she asked Sharal ' tar.

"Hmm, I wasn't really able to sightsee, was a bit busy trying not to die," Sharl'tar admitted. "But there are plenty of stores, we should be able to find something."

"Why don't you donate your pants to someone?" Flora challenged. "You've got underwear on, right? You gonna make a pregnant girl walk around naked when you've got an extra layer?"

"Fuck you, Flora, I don't need to do anything," Sharal'tar flipped her off. "We'll find pants for all of you soon enough...I hope." She glanced down the hallway. Even ignoring the rubble, nothing in the immediate vicinity looked like a clothing store.

"We might find something quicker if I go at my own pace," Kojurro suggested, suddenly zipping down the hall at lightning speed. "You all go left, I'll go right..." his voice echoed down the mall as he disappeared from view.

Marita peaked into the clothing store and shook her head. ' nothing left of the c;othes but pieces here and theree, plus there debris everywhere." she sighed as they went further and further into the mall, as they went further in , they found tiis part of the mall was intact, even the lights still worked. ' funny this part of the mall looks like it wasnt even toiuched ' Rose said as they entered a clotrhing store. beautiful dreeses hung on racks, in all the colkors of the rainbow, and best of all, they were untouched.

"Oh, thank god, we finally found an intact store." Flora sat down without further ado. "I don't think I can take another step." Even Sharal'tar seemed relieved to take some stress off her calves, and found a nice-looking leather coat. "You aren't worried you'll bake to death in that thing?" the folf asked. "It's blazing outside."

"I'm a desert lizard, we vent heat like nobody's business," Sharal'ar reminded. "I need protection from the light, not the heat."

Kojurro returned. "Ah, this is much better than the bath supplies place I located," he remarked approvingly, shedding his fluffy pink robe and locating a dashing white suit.

Sharal'tar couldn't help staring as Kojurro changed clothes. "What happened to his...uh..." she muttered to Flora.

"They were blasted off during the Scorched Earth war," Flora whispered. "Don't ask me how I know that. (https://docs.google.com/document/d/12HOp83zQg_Y9FpR0FxNTEXNbiCOcSBEZPPYYfDwsSew/edit)"

Kojurro glanced over. "Are you ladies talking about me?"

"Er, yes...about that massive scar on your abdomen!" Flora stammered quickly, and Sharal'tar flashed pale. "Did you get that from your run through the storm?"

"What, this?" He flexed his stomach proudly. "Don't make me laugh, this storm was nothing. I got this while caught in a tornado in Chancellorsville. It was so strong that a roofing tile literally embedded itself in my gall bladder like a knife!"

"Well, um, enough about that!" Sharal'tar interrupted. "Once everyone's dressed, including Flora, what should our next step be?"

"I guess continue rummaging through the mall, gather supplies for the expedition." Flora stripped a mannequin wearing an athletic jogging outfit. "Also we should call Kora, get her to arrive maybe next month. I don't get signal this deep under the ruins."

"Erm, actually, maybe she should arrive as soon as possible..." Kojurro muttered, looking in alarm at his tontine box.

"What's wrong?" Sharal'tar asked.

He showed it to her. "This box was only supposed to activate when one member of my squad remained alive. But look!"

The lizard squinted, then realized the problem. "There are two lights active."

"What?" Flora gasped. "There weren't two before!"

"I know what happened," Kojurro explained, tracing his finger across the newly-lit name. "Presley August was the team field surgeon, and he went into anagathics after the war. He's now a well-respected cryogenicist, an expert at preserving dying bodies with the hope of reviving them in the future when technology has advanced to the point their cause of death can be cured. I'm positive he's doing something to extend his lifespan as well, the guy was old even back in the war days."

Sharal'tar blinked. "So you're saying...?"

"He cheated," Kojurro explained. "When he saw we were the last two survivors, he temporarily put himself into cryogenic arrest. This flagged him as dead, and caused the tontine boxes to spit out the map to the treasure. Which means, ladies, that we are now in a race." His vision steeled. "Dr. August has always been impatient, and now he's rich and connected to boot. If he reaches the treasure before us, I guarantee he will not be interested in sharing it." He glanced over at Marita. "How soon can Kora arrive? We're now on something of a timeframe if we want to see that money."

" marita gaped " Hold on, theres someone else going after this loot? Well that would have been info that we could have used some time ago Kojurro.' first though, we need to get some clothes for everyone then I'll call Kora. Do you have any idea where this guy is ? Ok, hes rich, and connected, but that doesn't help us in countering him, if we dont have an idea of where he is. Plus we have to have a good look at your map, in order to know where to start. Otherwise, its the definition of a wild goose chase." she said. Emma had found the maternity section and found a nice billowing blue dress that covered her belly bulge in a taseful manner. Rose and Marie also found nice dresses, in light green and orange colors. Marita for her part , picked out a bright red dress with ruffles. ' Feel almost like a Southern Belle in in Gone with the wind ' She smirked.

"You look good, Marita!" Flora congratulated, donning her new jogging outfit.

Sharal'tar clicked her tongue, glancing cringingly at the yellow and white aesthetic of Flora's polyester. "Not to be rude, Flora, but your fur clashes brilliantly with that color scheme."

"Perhaps, but I swear you're all delusional if you think you're hiking through this heat wearing those suits and dresses." Flora adjusted her waist strap. "You all look like you stepped out of JoJo's Bizarre Adventure."

"I didn't know Presley August survived until the tontine box reactivated his signal," Kojurro apologized to Marita, flipping the device upside down and reactivating the map. "The cryonics facility he works for is in Montreal, so he's on the other side of the planet. He's probably recovering from his artificial slumber as we speak."

"OK, so how soon until you think he flies here to Sudan?" Flora asked. "Also, is he just gonna fly directly to the treasure?"

"Can't, it's more complicated than that," Kojurro explained. The map generated itself into a hologram, and he moved his finger to trace the route. "You can't just hike directly to the treasure because it's underground. First we need to cross the Sahara Desert until we reach the tiny city Thumarsus. We'll need to collect additional supplies from there, then hike through the blastlands until we reach the ancient ruins of Prusea. From there, we'll need to enter the ruins."

Sharal'tar manipulated the map herself. "It doesn't seem to 'zoom in' to show the ruins as more than an X. How do we use this map once we're inside?" she asked.

"We can't," Kojurro admitted. "Whoever made the map either knew the route from memory or had a separate one for the interior of the ruins. And my squad never found it if there was one. You're going to have to trust my navigational skills and Kora's knowledge of Prusean architecture once we go inside."

"Well, that's just great..." Sharal'tar sighed.

"You're welcome to drop out if you don't want to go anymore," Flora reminded, sliding over the store counter and trying to force the cash register open.

so, you are telling us that we're going to travel hundreds of miles to find this place?" emma said. We're gonna need different clothes then. as while this drreess is nice, it will make me seat something fioerce..' andf the Sahara can get up to 130 degrees in places.' Marita said ' i'll call kora once we get out of here. knowing her like I do, She'll be on the first flight to Khartoum. It'll take about a full day and cost her about 2000 bucks, but frankly she can afford it. ' She smirked. " How long do we have before your old chum finishes his recuperation? I'd like to know so we can make the most of our head start."

(OOC: Should we do a time skip to when Kora arrives and they can head out?)

"Well, you should have seen a bit of a hike coming, fabulous treasures don't tend to hang around the backyard," Kojurro noted jokingly. "And I have no clue; I'm not an expert in cryonics."

Flora glanced at Emma. "Did they ever cover cryonics in your nurse training? You're the only one here who has a chance of knowing this."

Sharal'tar returned with some backpacks from a back-to-school store. "Here, in case you find any supplies you'll want to bring on the trip," she informed everyone, tossing Flora, Marita, and Rose her extra packs. "Honestly, I suggest we spend the night here, gather supplies, and meet Kora at the airport tomorrow. As much as I'd like to do traditional shopping during the day it takes Kora to arrive, everything within walking or driving distance will still be recovering from the storm and I doubt any shops are open."

"There's a hiking shop near the escalator, right?" Flora mentioned. "It's called 'Alpine Ventures' or something like that. That'd be a good place to get specialized traveling gear and good boots."

(sure we can do that)
Cryonics, a little bit. the longer you are frozen, the longer it takes to fully awaken. rule of thumb was for every year frozen, it took a week to recover. 20 years, 20 weeks. a year is 52 weeks, so 20 weeks would be 5 months or so. How long was he frozen?" Emma asked Kojurro. I agree with Sharal'tar that we get our stuff done before Kora gets here.

"He couldn't have been asleep for more than 24 hours; his light had gone out yesterday night and reactivated in the morning," Kojurro answered.

"So I didn't major in math, but that sounds like it'd be a ludicrously small recovery time by that ratio," Sharal'tar chimed in.

(24 hours later)

"Flora, stop sticking your tongue out at the TSA," Sharal'tar chastised.

"They deserve it! I get stopped and searched every time I board a plane!" Flora flipped off a blonde uniformed bunny who resolutely ignored her. "Once I was smuggling narcotics, do you realize how quickly and how deep I had to stuff them up my--"

"Ah-hem." Kojurro cleared his throat and checked his pocket watch; an overly-fancy fashion statement he could never have afforded if he hadn't stolen it from a ruined mall. "That should be the 1:10 arrival from San Diego," he reported as the latest plane ground to a halt and passengers started disembarking into the terminal. "Marita, have you heard from your friend that she made the flight and arrived safely?"

"She better; I paid triple for this caramel ribbon latte." Flora glanced at the only coffee place that wasn't under construction in the aftermath of the airport's reparations. "Prices in airports are outrageous even before everything's only halfway rebuilt."

Yes ' Marita replied, as she held a ' Welcome Kora' handmade sign, from a large piece of cardboard she had swiped from the mall. " she was in the middle part of the plane, seat 60B. she brought her notes on ruins of the region, which are quite extensive. one look at your map piece kojuuro and she'll have a pretty ggood idea of whee to start looking. ah, here she is now!Kora! over here!' Marita beamed as Kora came up to them wearing attire suitable for the hot desert. ' hi everyone. sorry I'm a hour late. Layover in Milan took a lot longer than first anticipated.. anyway lets see this map of yours Kojuuro I should have a good idea of where to start after getting a good look. " Kora said setting her suitcase and knapsack down.

"Not out here," Kopurro glanced around suspiciously. "The map is a hologram projected by this black box; it'll draw too much attention to itself in public. Follow me."

"Hi Kora!" Flora extended a hand excitedly. "Nice to finally meet you in person. Let me carry your bag!"

He led the group out of the airport and to their transportation; a pair of covered wagons driven by two camels each. Leading Kora into the closer wagon, he tapped the activation button and the map materialized into form in front of him. "You can move around the map by tracing your finger, and zoom in or out by pinching your fingers like this," he demonstrated.

"I hope she knows anything about the extinct Prusean civilization," Sharal'tar muttered, folding her arms. "Cause I grew up out here and I've never even heard of them before."

thats not surprising. the Purseans existed over 2000 years ago ' Kora said "their kingdom was taken over by neighboring kingdoms and their temples and pyramids repurposed, the average person wouldnt know that a previous kingdom had built them.' she said taking in the map..' this is only the exterior of these areas. i take it that the other part shows the interiors?" she said her eyes twinkling with excitement. We are going first to a ruin called Mur Alshul, it was a major Pursean city, built 2200 years ago, like with other great cities of antiquity, it was built on the banks of a river. In the desert, water means life, especially since the desert receives so little of it"

"There is no other part, sadly," Kojurro admitted. "This map was found in America by a team of Scorched Earth scavengers. We're going to have to puzzle our way through interiors to locate whatever we need to find at each location."

"Is there anything you need to purchase in the city before we head out, Kora?" Sharal'tar asked, mounting a camel. "I dont know if Marita told you, but there's another group racing us for the treasure. They're flying in from America just like you, so we should be neck and neck right now."

no, i've got all i need packed away in my luggage. spelunking equipment, notebooks for record taking, and an camera to record the ruin interior. you know fellas this sounds like something straight out of Indiana jones" kora laughed ' now what is important for everyone to know is this: the purseans were moon worshippers. they believed the light from the moon was a gift from the divines. you'll find crescent, half and full moons in the glyphs, the full moon meant that area was extremely favored by the gods, half moon meant there was some favor, crescent moon was little favor and the black or new moon meant disfavor. you did not want to anger the gods as they would punish you both in this life and the after life as well. ' Kora said " Lets get going then. the quicker we get to Mur Ashul the better. . "

The camels acquiescently started trotting off.

Sharal'tar glanced over at Marie, who was driving the second wagon. "Hey Marie, is everything sticking mentally from last night?" Sharal'tar had spent a good part of their evening in the mall training Marie on controlling her new plant powers. "We covered a lot of ground quickly, so it's okay if you've forgotten some of it. But we're heading into arid desert, and our plant powers become super useful since we won't find many real plants out there. Growing food, creating rope out of vines, creating shade..."

"What sort of gods did the Pruseans worship?" Flora asked Kora. "Did they worship part-animal beings, like the Egyptians?"

Post by: Nick22 on August 29, 2019, 07:38:16 AM

No, they worshiped the heavens, the moon, most prominently." Kora said " you'll see lots of carving showing them with their faces towards the moon in a reverential manner. as i said before, the place that wre most favored by the gods will show a full moon, the places that were considered as cursed will show a new moon or black moon. "

I'm doing ok" marie said ' i think i have the rope and shade parts down, the growing food will be a bit tricky. particularly since in the desert most plants require deep roots to reach what water there is.

It wasn't too many hours before the last vestiges of civilization disappeared over the horizon behind them.

"Now, we need to all be vigilant in rationing our supplies!" Kojurro reminded everyone. "This is a long initial hike through the desert, and we don't want to run out of water or food because it will be very hard to find more. Stay in the wagons whenever possible, because it's going to get very hot."

"Hotter than it is now?" Flora panted. "I'm missing that rainstorm from before already..."

"You say that now, but the night cold will likely be even worse than the daytime heat," Kojurro chuckled. "The desert is one of the most unforgiving biomes, behind the tundra. Which yes, I know, is by definition still a desert."

Outside on the horses, Sharal'tar nodded at what Marie said. "Even I don't know how to procure food out of nowhere," she admitted. "I need to have a few seeds beforehand so I can grow them into a full plant. But with how precious water is out here, it's more likely we'll be using it for combat or exploration purposes more than survival."

hours passed and soon the ruins of Mur ashur appeared on the horizon and Kora pointed at them' we'll stop at that central . the skies were turning darker and forboding' I suggest we hurry as it looks like a sandstorm is headed our way. Sandstorms in this region are both massive and deadly. Marita and Rose folowed quickly behind her. " we need to find shelter before we get hit" Martita said , turning and looking the others in tthe group..

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on October 05, 2019, 04:28:53 PM

Flora went pale at the mention of a sandstorm. Her arrival in this region was marked by a terrifying sandstorm that nearly killed her before her adventures even began. "Let's get those puppies moving!" she gasped. "Mush!"

"They're camels!" Sharal'tar snapped back, clapping the reins to no effect. "They move at the exact speed they want!"

Luckily, even the camels noticed the sandstorm and kicked it up a notch. As the caravan crossed the border into the ruins, Kourro gasped in amazement at the wonderful stone structures towering above them, collections of bricks and stones that had been eroded through generations of wear.

"I'm taking us straight into the big entrance!" Sharal'tar yelled into her wagon as sand started peppering her face. They were bearing down on the most impressive structure, a towering ziggurat whose mouth instantly sloped downwards into the earth. "And we're gonna be stuck in there until this blows over!"

"That's perfect!" Kojurro exclaimed. "We're looking for a golden urn! It'll be deep within the temple, and inscribed on it is a map showing where we need to travel after this!"

Flora covered her mouth with her shirt and climbed out of the wagon once it ground to a halt. She squinted into the darkness. "We're going to need light sources if we're going in there," she noted. "Kora, do you have the torches?"

Post by: Nick22 on October 21, 2019, 05:45:53 PM

of course i do" kora said " i have lighter fluid for them as well. This central room, is going to be deep in the center of the pyramid, well underground. plus, theres likely to be intact traps, designed to foil looters. The sands have kept the thing intact, which is a good thing. better watch your step, handrails were not a thing in those days.' She said as they reached the entrance. sands whipped around them, driving visibility down to a handful of feet.

The interior of the pyramid was musty. Torches lined the wall, but they'd burnt out millenia ago.

"This is incredible," Kojurro breathed, holding his torch closely to the walls so he could observe the intricate reliefs showcasing moments in Prusean history. "They really respected the moon, it appears in almost every mural." He stopped when he witnessed an unusual one showing what appeared to be the sun being eaten by the moon. "Kora, can you read these hieroglyphics? What's happening in this one?"

Sharal'tar used her vines to brush cobwebs aside as she led the way deeper into the recesses of the pyramid. "It's getting steep, watch your step," she advised as the route abruptly tilted downwards.

Before long, they reached a large stone door. "Anyone see a switch, or maybe a puzzle to solve?" Flora asked.

Kojurro shook his head. "There is window up there," he pointed above the door. "We brought rope, right?"

"Yeah, but Marie and I have something better." Sharal'tar shrank down to a miniscule size and scaled the wall. It was slow going, but she reached the window and shot her vines down into the beyond room. "I'm detecting floor," she reported, growing back up to her normal size. "We can keep going. Marie, shoot me a vine, then everyone think they can climb up here?"

"...Maybe?" Flora bit her lip as she gathered Sharal'tar's abandoned clothes and stuffed them into her backpack.

that image is that of an eclipse' Kora said. see the moon passing in front of the sun? This depicts a full eclipse' Kora said moving over to a nearby relief " the pureans believed that the moon would periodically take a bite out of the sun, sometimes swallowing it whole before spitting it back out. "

Marie focussed and sent a vine tendril up to Sharaltar, in the proces creating a vine ' rope' lader. ' how far does it go, Sharal ' tar?' marie asked as she began climbing. ' in any event, with the sanbdstorm out there, we're not leaving this place for awhile anyway."

(two weeks later)

"We're not 'in public,' it's a statue garden after hours," Flora countered. She, Sharal'tar and Emma were taking advantage of their only night in Nebri, a sleepy Egyptian desert town and the last tourist trap on their current route. "We're surrounded on all sides by giant obelisks. You'd need to be using night-vision goggles from a stealth jet to even see us."

"I know, but it's a pretty pointless risk to take...especially just to stare at some chiseled stones." The desert lizard thumbed her nose at a prehistoric rendition of the Prusean lunar goddess. The other members of their crew were holed out in a hostel, while the three of them had gone out to purchase supplies. But Flora insisted on taking the scenic route home.

"People travel for miles to see this garden!" Flora twirled in a show of awe. "And we'll be seeing nothing but desert for another week after we leave, so I'd rather spend tonight admiring some green. What do you think, Emma? Aren't these beautiful statues worth the detour?" She couldn't fully repress a grin at Sharal'tar's disapproval; she was partially putting on a show just to annoy her.

Roughly 500 feet above them, a flying man in a Sartonic jumpsuit scanned the rock garden with night-vision goggles. "Yurei, come in," he whispered into his earpiece. "I may have spotted something."

He fiddled with a knob to activate an infrared setting. "There are three trespassers straight below my position, moving northwest. Can you get close and let me know if they're among our targets? I have a stun bomb standing by for dropping."

Post by: StarfallRaptor on October 24, 2020, 10:46:29 PM

On the ground below, not too far from Flora, Sharal'tar, and Emma, Yurei phased silently out of the ground, his old, confortable clothes replaced by a black Sartoric jumpsuit. Quickly glancing around to ensure he wouldn't be seen, he phased quickly into one of the statues, then quickly slipped to another to get closer to his marks. Once within eye shot, he looked at Flora for a few moments, a small grin crossing his face before quickly phasing back into the ground and withdrawing out of their earshot.
"This is Yurei. Those three readings...are not our targets. Nothing more than some kids out for some private fun."
He whispered into his earpiece, glancing back towards where Flora was for a moment...

Title: Re: Around the Folf
Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on October 30, 2020, 10:37:45 AM

"Understood," the man sighed, closing the flap on the bomb pouch. "This is the only city for miles...they've got to be here somewhere. I'll check the slums again." Hitting a thermal, the flying man silently angled towards a different part of the city.

Below him, Sharal'tar sighed with relief as a familiar stony wall appeared in front of them. "There, we're done with the stupid garden. Now get up there." Splaying her fingers, she shot several vines up and over the top, connecting to the nearest rooftop. Flora took the ropes first, peeking to ensure nobody was wandering the street as she shimmied her way to the rooftop. From Yurei's position in the rock garden, he'd easily be able to see her reach the balcony to their hostel room and shimmy through the window.

"Whoa!" Kojurro jumped as someone abruptly appeared behind him. "I'm never going to get used to that. How was the supply run?"

"Went great!" Flora took off her backpack and dumped several pounds of nonperishable goods on the table. "Hope y'all like seal jerky. And they only had a single signet ring, how's this design?"

Kojurro examined it in the flickering candelight. "Hmm. I'm not sure Presley would believe I'd use a beetle for my symbol, but if it's the only option..."

"Wait, what are you doing with Presley?" Sharal'tar asked, following Flora through the window. Presley August was the rival treasure hunter racing them to secure the fortune at the end of Kojurro's map.

"I'm sending him an offer for parlay. Several thousand miles from here." Kojurro shrugged. "The offer is false, but if he accepts it might slow him down."

"Sounds worth a shot," Flora shrugged. "Now, if you'll excuse me, I want to freshen up before we hit the desert again tomorrow."

Heading to the bathroom and locking the door, she quickly shed her clothes and started a shower. The water likely wouldn't remain hot for very long, if previous desert towns had been any indication, but a rinse of any length would be relaxing after so many days of travel.

Kora was hunched over a map of the area whicdh she had marked the locxations of ruins on them, both known as suspected. ' the trip had included broefs stops so she could sketch ruins and take notes, she was a professor after all. " After we leave Nebri, its pretty much desert the whole way west. ' she said. Marie ws using her vine powers to try and grab a drink across a table without spillingg it, it was a work in progress. '' my vines get weak about halfway to me ' She sighed. ' you'll get it down Marie, dont worry, Kora said.

"You're doing good, trust me," Sharal'tar urged Marie, walking over. "This early in my development, I could barely even grow them, much less grab things."

She sent her own vines trailing over to gently grasp the drink. "You have to remember that vines have mass, and tensile torsion. They're not energy like most psionic powers; they take up real physical space. You have to put extra force and energy into them to compensate for that." She gently put the glass back down on the table and withdrew her vines. "Just keep practicing, it's the only way to get better. Don't be like Flora, who never practises and is just as bad at shapeshifting as when she first showed up."

As soon as his "partner" was en route to the slums, Yurei silently phased into the ground, silently tailing Flora and Sharal'tar, watching as they climbed through the window to their hostel room. Hesitating for a moment, he looked up after them, then back at his own hands, now wrapped in the black Sartoric attire he wore.
"What am I thinking...? I... can't face them like this...Not as Sartoric's...pawn..."
He thought bitterly, before clenching a gloved hand resolutely.
"No. They need to know what they're dealing with.
They need to be able to prepare themselves. And... if nothing else...I need to be able to say goodbye. After all...not like they'd want me after everything..."
With that thought echoing in his mind, Yurei phased into the wall, making his way up after his former friends, and incidentally making his way right into the bathroom where Flora was...

Sure enough, the shower turned tepid far quicker than Flora would like, but the hot water had done its job relaxing her before their long trek tomorrow. Quickly rinsing the soap out of her fur before the water temperature graduated to cold, Flora stepped out of the shower...and abruptly squealed with a startled "Eep!" and almost took the curtain down with her. "Yurei? Is that really you?" she gasped, quickly scrambling to her feet. "What—how did...what are you doing here??" Stumbling to her feet, she quickly darted forward and buried him in a sopping wet hug. "I was so worried!" she exclaimed, pecking his lips repeatedly in between her excited babbling, "I hadn't heard anything since fleeing Sartonic! And with the storm hitting, and all the damage to the base, I had no idea if you were still alive—!"

"Flora?" Sharal'tar knocked on the bathroom door. "Who the hell are you taking to?"

"I...nobody! I was...just reading the ingredients on the shampoo bottle!" Flora stammered. Dropping her voice several octaves, she cut to the heart of the matter with a single-sentence whisper: "Yurei, how did you get here?"

Yurei smiled gently, hugging Flora and lightly stroking her back.
"Heh, it's good to see you again Flora."
He whispered softly, kissing her back with each peck on his lips, blushing a bit at her unexpected enthusiasm. Momentarily freezing at Sharal'tar's voice, he turned back to Flora as she whispered her question, expression quickly turning serious.
"I got here with Sartoric. Long story short... they're after you. And getting closer, too..."
He whispered in reply, glancing aside...

"What?" Flora gasped, eyes dilating. "Sartonic's coming after us?" She glanced in a panic out the bathroom window, though of course all she saw was the darkened city. "Who are they sending? How many? How close—?" Questions filled her mind, so many that she realized she was hugging Yurei even tighter than before, from equal parts excitement and newfound trepidation. "Are you staying with us?" she whispered. "Please don't leave! The others need to know, and...I don't want to lose you again..."

Yurei nodded, holding Flora close and reassuringly stroking her head.
"Unfortunately, yeah. They're after you guys... I don't know all the details, but... if you get the others together, i'll fill you in on what I do know."
He whispered gently, giving Flora a gentle squeeze to reassure her.
"And... if everyone's okay with it, I promise I won't leave"

"I'll vouch for you," Flora promised, giving him one last passionate kiss. "Sharal'tar and Emma will as well," she added after finally breaking away with a smile. "Let me introduce you, there's one newcomer you haven't met before."

After quickly drying herself off and wrapping the towel around her waist, she led the way back out of the bathroom. "Everyone, don't panic, but we've got another friend who just showed up," she started.

But Sharal'tar cut her off. "For god's sake, Flora, put your damn clothes on first," she snapped, before the second figure suddenly exited the bathroom and her words caught in her throat. "I...you...what?"

"It's Yurei!" Flora dragged him into the light. "Most of you have seen him around Sartonic. Yurei, this is Kora, she's an archaeology professor from America." She pointed out the blue-eyed lioness reading maps at the table.

"--Hold on," Sharal'tar interrupted. "Not that I'm not pleased to see you, Yurei, but...what are you doing all the way out here in Nebri?"

Yurei glanced around the room at the group, nodding his head at them and shooting a small, shy smile at Sharal'tar.
"It's... good to see you guys again. As to why I'm here... well, it's not good news, i'm afraid."
He reached into one pocket on his suit, pulling out an identification badge emblazoned with Sartoric's insignia.
"I'm here as an official agent of Sartoric. They're after you guys, and they're getting close. I've managed to throw one off the trail for now, but..."
He shook his head.
"I'm hoping you guys have a plan"

"Ummm...at least on the topic of why Sartonic wants me, I think I can answer that better than Yurei." Flora took a deep breath. "So, that storm that did so much damage and destabilized the entire facility? That was...kinda my fault. A few months ago, Van Der Merwe assigned me to work closely with a test subject #L1F3, code-named 'Life.' She had resurrection powers, and she wasn't cooperating with the research staff trying to study the nature of her abilities. My job was to get her to open up more." Flora bit her lip. "Things got...complicated...and I ended up busting her out of the facility. And then later she came back with a massive storm to take her revenge on Sartonic."

"Jesus Christ, Flora," Sharal'tar smacked her palm against her forehead. "And you weren't going to even mention this?"

"I thought they'd have more important things to worry about, like rebuilding!" Flora protested.

"Well, this changes things," Kojuuro nodded. "And thought it was going to be hard keeping ahead of Presley August's treasure hunters. Now we also have psionic hitmen on our trail."

"Can we afford to wait till morning, or should we set out now?" Flora asked.

"Wait, hold on," Sharal'tar interrupted, standing up and pointing directly at Yurei. "How do we know you're really Yurei? You could be a shapeshifting test subject trying to infiltrate the group." Her eyes flashed. "I need you to tell us something only the real Yurei would know."

Yurei chuckled, raising his hands a bit.
"Heh. Good thinking, Sharal'tar. While I could embarrass everyone here with more intimate details, i'll say this much. During the storm that took down the facility, I helped a few experiments escape. Marly and Tagaso say hello. And by the way, Flora, he still has that wrapper you gave him the first time you met. And Sharal'tar, my parents say hello, and are hoping you're still as responsible as ever"
He said, smiling a bit at the two as he did so...

Sharal'tar flushed red at the mention, and Flora snapped her fingers triumphantly. "See? It's him!" she crowed. "We promised we'd never tell anyone or talk about that god-awful visit (https://docs.google.com/document/d/1vit8lGhpgsWot0EfDA6W-4JZO-tNiESCL9Toj628VXQ/edit#bookmark=id.u6zbrwiwb7ix) ever again!"

"Wait, you've met Yurei's parents?" Kojuuro asked.

"--ever again," Flora reaffirmed, and for once Sharal'tar seemed in agreement.

Kojuuro shrugged and took the hint. "So what do you think?" he asked Kora. "If Yurei came this far, there are almost certainly others who have already reached Nebri. Should we brave the desert at night, or take turns keeping watch until leaving first thing in the morning?"

Yurei shook his head.
"Heading out now would be too risky, Kojuuro. At least half the hunter teams either have night-vision gear or can track people in the dark. Our best bet is to lay low here until morning, then make our move. I'll plant some false leads in the group, try and draw them off our trail as best as I can."
He said pensively, tapping his chin a little.
"In fact, I think i've got just the way to put them off our trail a fair ways" we leave in the morning ' Kora said. ' traveling the desert is dangerous at night anyway. any sort of creatures prowl at night, who wouldnt mind at all makiing a meal out of us. and if that was not enough its still 90-100 degrees out even at night. Thats how hot the desert is around here. So morning, when its cooler- relatiovely, is the best time.

"Yurei, wait, are you heading back out?" Sharal'tar piped up. "If you have something to go do, that's fine, but I'd like at least a moment alone with you. I'm your girlfriend too, you know."

"Okay but I'm calling dibs tonight, he's cuddling with me!" Flora interjected hotly.

"Says who?" Sharal'tar growled. "You've already had your private time with him...naked in the bathroom, I might add."

"We didn't do anything except reconnect!" Flora defended.

"That's more than I've gotten to do!"

"Ladies, you're already sharing a bed," Kojurro reminded, motioning matter-of-factly towards the limited sleeping arrangements in the hotel room. "He was going to wind up with both of you no matter what."

Sharal'tar rolled her eyes and folded her arms. "I knew that. I just want a moment alone. Is that so much to ask?"

Yurei smiled reassuringly at Sharal'tar.
"For the moment, I'm staying here with you guys. So we've got plenty of time, Sharal'tar. All I need to do is whip up a false report to pass along to the rest of the hunters."
He said gently, running a hand through his hair with an easygoing smile.
"And from the sounds of things, I'm getting to share a bed with both the loves of my life. Heh... I'm... really glad I found you guys"

"Okay, well, do whatever you need to do, but be safe." Sharal'tar gave him a quick hug and a peck on the lips. "It's good to see you again," she smiled, speaking under her breath so the others couldn't listen in. "I figured you'd be safe, what with being able to turn incorporeal and all...but it's good to finally know for sure."

Kojuuro yawned. "It does feel like we're burning midnight oil when we should be resting and gathering strength for the trek tomorrow," he noted. "So don't stay up too late, you three," he warned the lovebirds.

"We won't!" Flora assured, crossing to the bed and re-organizing the pillows for four. As there were only two beds, the current split was adults in one and young adults in the other, and Yurei's addition would make the latter bed pretty full. "How are we looking on supplies?" she asked Kora. "Should we go buy more in the morning, or can we handle another party member with what we've got?"

Yurei blushed and smiled at Sharal'tar, returning her kiss lovingly.
"It's good to see you, too. I worried a bit, but I know you guys. I figured you'd be safe, and now that I know that...well... let's just say we've got a lot of catching up to do."
He whispered back teasingly before looking up at Flora's question.
"Heh, you guys won't need to worry quite so much about supplies, either.   Let's just say I haven't just been sitting around since the storm..."

we can handle another party member ' Kora said ' anything Yurei can bring along means we dont have to buy it at some ppoint. We have a l lot of ground to cover tomorrow, so I suggest we try and get as much sleep as possible. we're leaving at 7 am tomorrow , after all. o get what sleep you can, because we'll be walking al day tomorrow. we're entering the Gondar region of the country-North Gondar to be precise.

A few minutes later, Flora was in bed and snuggled up happily on Yurei's left, with Sharal'tar (less accustomed to public displays of affection) giving a slightly more reserved hug on his right. "Tomorrow, while we're hiking, you need to catch me up on what you've been doing," she whispered in his ear, already drifting off to sleep.

Kojurro closed his eyes, assumed a cross-legged stance in front of the door and deftly slipped into a deep meditation. In this pose, he'd restore stamina and rest his mind at the same speed as normal sleep, but his reflexes remained alert and prepared to rouse him at the first sign of intruders.

Yurei smiled contentedly, kissing Sharal'tar and Flora affectionately on the head.
"I will. I promise you that."
He whispered softly, pulling the two close to him as he drifted off to sleep..

The next morning, Kojuuro's augments roused him as soon as the earliest vestiges of the sun's rays breached the horizon. Immediately, his eyes darted alertly around the apartment; no sign of intruders, everyone was tucked safely in bed just like his ninja senses had thought. "Excellent. Haven't lost my touch yet," he chuckled softly to himself as he shook awake the people on the near side of each bed; Kora and Sharal'tar. "Wakey wakey," he informed them matter-of-factly. "Let's get this place bundled up and this show on the road."

Sharal'tar yawned and nudged Yurei. "Guess it's go-time," she murmured. "Good luck getting Flora awake, remember she used to sleep through the fire alarms?" She stumbled sleepily to her suitcase and carried a change of clothes into the bathroom; she'd never unpacked so she had little prep time needed before she'd be ready to go.

Yurei smirked as he stirred, grinning at Sharal'tar as she went to change.
"Oh, I remember that all too well~. Heh, fun times~."
He chuckled a bit before smiling over at Flora and leaning in to kiss lightly at her neck...

Kora got up and quickly changed into fresh clothes in the corner. " We have 250-300 miles to cover today. We're in the Amhara region of the country , which is a mix of some desert, savannah and subtropical highland. We'll likely pass through all 3 on our route." marita was up and packing her things into a knapsack, while Marie and Rose were searching through a small selection of chewy granola bats to eat on the way."Chocolate chip or oats and honey' Marie said , before finally settling on chocolate chip. " Just grab something and go, girls. We have pursuers behind us, and a treasure in front of us.' Kora saod. " Marie opened the door with her vine powers, Sharal' tar had given her some tips for maintaining focus over long distances.

Flora was the last one to finally roll out of bed, streatching and yawning theatrically before flashing Yurei a tired smile.

"I'll check us out of the room, the rest of you gather on the far side of town," Kojuuro advised, creaking the door open a peek and glancing down the hallway. "Let's try to leave before the majority of the populace is wandering the streets, especially knowing we now have another class of pursuers to look out for."

"Hey, nice job Marie!" Sharal'tar added approvingly, watching her wield her plant powers more nimbly than last night. "What'd I tell you? Just keep practicing and they'll become second-nature!"

(OOC: What were they traveling in again? Was it a wagon with attached caravan?)

Yurei smiled back at Flora, giving her an appreciative once-over as she stretched, grabbing the vest he had been wearing the night before and tossing it on.

"Alright, that plan sounds good, Kojuuro. Plus, the other hunter groups will have pulled back to regroup. Once we clear the town, I've got a little surprise for you guys, too. One that I think will be quite welcome"

He chuckled, quickly kissing Flora's cheek as he straightened his vest, quickly checking one of the pockets with a nod...

Flora smiled warmly back at him, right before Sharal’tar pegged her in the face with a rolled-up shirt. “Get dressed, everyone else is packed and all ready to go!”

——————

Kojurro tipped his hat congenially before forgetting it had been destroyed months ago in the storm. “It was a wonderful night, thank you for your hospitality,” he concluded his business with the front desk.

The cashier grunted. “Ey, before you go, you seen this girl?” He flashed Kojurro a picture he recognized as coming from Sartonic’s ID archives:

(https://i.imgur.com/WCwCWcv.png)

“I..uh...no, of course not!” he stammered. “Why ever do you inquire?”

“Some men have been asking around,” the clerk shrugged. “Sounds like she broke the law or something. I’m also supposed to pass these out,” he handed Kojurro a white slip with a phone number on it. “Call this and let ‘em know if you see her.”

“Uh, certainly, will do!” Kojurro laughed weakly, once again tipping his nonexistent hat before scrambling to get back to the room. “Well, we’d better play this even safer than I thought we’d need to...” he muttered to himself.

——————-

The man with the cybernetic wings was standing in the marketplace, walking away from a vendor. “Yurei, do you copy?” He radioed. “Got a lead, sounds like a pink fox purchased a scarab stamp from a vendor stall last night, so they’re still in town. Where are you, anyway?”

As Yurei's radio crackled to life, he started a bit, then pulled out a phone and flicked open a messaging app.
I'm tailing our marks at the moment. Maintain radio silence. Sounds like they're headed out of town. I may lose contact for some time. I'll try to get in good with them as an escapee. Find out what they're after, and if there's anyone else working with them.
After sending the message, he flipped the phone shut, chuckling a bit under his breath.
"Okay, now to set the rest of the plan in motion once we're out of town."
He said quietly to no-one in particular...

Flora had just finished packing when Kojurro returned and threw her a wide-brimmed hat. "Here you go! Nipped to the market and bought you one of these. Can't be too careful!" he chortled, a bit too cheerily.

"Oh. Uh...okay." Flora donned it fashionably and nodded approvingly in the mirror. "We ready to get this show on the road?"

"Yes! Absolutely, before anyone else wakes up! Let's go, we're all checked out!" Kojurro hurriedly motioned for everyone to get moving.

"Kora, can you lead the way to the wagon?" Sharal'tar asked, rolling her suitcase to the hallway stairs. "Since not everyone in the party has been there before."

Yurei, meanwhile, recieved a single vibration on his phone, a shorthand message indicating his ally had recieved the message and didn't want to send a more conspicuous acknowledgment.

Yurei smiled a bit, wrapping one arm around Flora, and the other around Sharal'tar as they made their way to the caravan.
"Heh, this must be a dream come true. Getting to go on a grand adventure with the loves of my life. I'm really looking forward to our little honeymoon~"
He said lightly, grinning at both ladies...

Undisclosed Location:
"Alright. As of last night, Yu said he'd made contact with the escapees. So, in theory, he should be getting in contact with us sometime today. G, you got those copies ready?"
A somewhat youthful-looking wolf paced across the concrete floor, periodically checking his phone. From across the room, an older-looking maned wolf looked up from a table, where he had been fiddling with something.
"Riv, I have told you not to call me that thuggish nickname. It's childish. And yes, the golems are almost ready. I simply need the genetic material to fool any biological analyses. And for heaven's sake, get off that accursed phone."
The maned wolf replied, going back to checking the object on the table before moving to another...

Sharal’tar flushed red and looked around hoping nobody was watching; Flora, in contrast, was far more used to public displays of affection and joyously pecked Yurei on the cheek in return. "I can't believe it either! Oh, Yurei, if only you'd been there when we first fled the labs, we holed out in a ruined bank and couldn't get into the vault! You could've ghost-formed your way in and we'd be rich!"

"Erm, different topic of conversation, please..." Kojurro made eye-contact with the very few people in the back courtyard of the hotel, and luckily nobody was paying them heed. The hotel was on the outskirts of the city, with the statue garden to its right and endless barren desert to the left.

"Dibs on a camel!" Flora called out, vaulting excitedly up one's flank and crashing spectacularly back down the other side.

Sharal'tar pinched her nose and delicately mounted a horse. "Don't even mention it, Marie, you're a natural." She flashed the Golden Retriever a smile as she readied her reins. "I can't wait to see where you'll be once you've had enough time to really come into your own. I'm pretty sure you outpass me in sheer psionic strength, honestly."

Yurei smiled, helping Flora get onto her camel, and giving her butt an appreciative grope as he did so.
"Hmmm... here's hoping I can ride one of these guys."
He chuckled, hopping onto a horse with ease, patting the beast gently...

With everyone situated, the caravan set out into the desert. Kojurro zipped the white cotton tarps up so the wagon was airtight; it would be their primary source of shade and cover when heatstrokes hit.

"So Yurei, how are Marly and Taga doing?" Flora asked. "I'm glad to hear they both survived, I tried to reach the quarantine block during the storm but got waylaid by guards."

Sharal'tar, for her part, was repeatedly being bothered by a fly buzzing around her horse's head. Snarling, she finally swatted it by shooting a whiplike vine from her hand with a whiplike crack. Watching it flutter to the ground lifelessly, her eyes traveled forward to see a small patch of swirling dark skies up ahead. "Kora?" she asked, narrowing her eyes. "I think that might be a sandstorm up ahead...should we go around it?"

Post by: StarfallRaptor on December 23, 2020, 09:33:42 PM

Yurei chuckled, smiling broadly at Flora.
"They're doing really well. Taga wouldn't stop trying to get me to come find you guys after the storm hit, and Marly was just as insistent... in his own way. In fact, I think they'll be thrilled to see you and Sharal'tar again!"
He chuckled, then turned to look ahead as Sharal'tar pointed out the approaching sandstorm.
"Hm. I think we're far enough out of town now. Should be safe to go for it..."
He quickly pulled out a second phone, typing in a message before quickly spurring his horse to the front of the caravan.
"Alrighty. Looks like we've got a sandstorm approaching. I think our best course of action will be to get some shelter and let it blow over. Do you guys trust me?"
He asked the group, glancing at each in turn...

theres a ruin about a half mile west of here/ theres enough intact sections to have a roof over our heads ' Kora said. " The quicker we get there the less sand we have to endure. " she looked up at the clouds which were slowly getting closer and rapidly turning darker. ' and I would suggest we pick up our speed . Sandstorms can be deadly if you get caught in them. " marita was trying to ride a double humped camel and was currently stuck between the 2 humps. ' I should have gotten a horse' She said. Emma was riding a horse carefully, being inexperienced with riding,m she went at a slow pace.

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on December 26, 2020, 05:19:16 PM

"The ruin sounds good!" Flora agreed, rapping her reins like a sled dog racer. "Mush!"

The camel ignored her, but the caravan did turn and head for the ruins. At their current rate, they'd arrive just before the sandstorm hit them.

"These ruins don't look like much cover..." Sharal'tar noted as they got closer. "They're more Stonehendge-sized than a full settlement."

"This close to populated cities, anything more than the largest monoliths would have already been stolen or trucked away and repurposed," Kojurro explained, donning his mask as the first flecks of sand started flying into his mouth. "Cover your faces! We'll want to park the caravan so our chosen rock is shielding us from the wind."

Flora squinted her eyes shut and angled her hat to shield her face. "I can't really see!" she confessed, now regretting grabbing one of the two leading beasts of burden. "Yurei, can you guide us?"

Yurei smirked under the mask he was wearing.
"I can do us one better! Everyone, over here!"
He yelled, pulling a small metal object out of one of his pockets, using a small pin to stick it to one of the stone structures, tapping the mark engraved on it. On the third tap, a bright, glowing rectangle appeared to tear itself into existence, big enough for the caravan to pass through.
"Through here, everyone! C'mon!"

"Whoa, what is that Yurei?" Flora's eyes widened in awe.

"Keep steering!" Sharal'tar reminded loudly. "Why exactly did we let her take point?" she griped under her breath to Emma on the horse next to her.

Kojurro shielded his eyes; as the one in the wagon, he was the last to pass through Yurei's new portal, and recieved more than a faceful of sand for his placement in line. anything he'd been hoping to say was replaced with spluttering as he tried to clear his windpipe inside the new sacntuary Yurei had created.

Post by: StarfallRaptor on December 27, 2020, 11:19:56 PM

Yurei smirked, riding through the portal after the others as it closed, leaving them in what looked like an underground parking facility. Dusting himself off as he dismounted and walked over to Flora and Sharal'tar, he gestured around a bit.
"Well, guys, welcome to the hideaway of the Sartoric escapees. And, possibly, a new home base for our treasure hunt!"
He said lightly, as a young wolf stepped out from behind a pillar, hands glowing faintly.
"Yu! You didn't tell me you'd be having me open a gate in the middle of a sandstorm! I almost got sand in my eyes!"
The lupine complained, then stopped himself and looked over at the group.
"Ah! Sorry, forgot my manners! My name's Riven, but you can call me Riv!"

"Whoa!" Flora dismounted her camel, looking around in awe. "Yurei, what's the story behind all this? Where did it come from?"

Sharal'tar reached out a hand to Riven, not 100% sure he was allowed to shake hands due to the nature of his powers. "Hey, I'm Sharal'tar. Are you from Sartonic? Sorry if we just never ran into each other, I'm more new to the labs than the rest of our team."

Kojurro looked behind and watched the portal close behind them. "Fascinating..." he breathed. "Sartonic test subjects never cease to amaze..."

Post by: StarfallRaptor on December 28, 2020, 09:50:15 PM

Riven smiled, taking Sharal'tar's hand and shaking it warmly, the glow from his hands fading.
"A real pleasure to meet you! Yu's told me a lot about you, so it's nice to finally meet you in person! And yeah, I'm ex-Sartoric. Ex-Containment ward, to be exact." He said with a shy chuckle. Yurei, meanwhile, smiled over at Kora.
"Oh, there's quite a few of us! Me, Riv, Josef..." Whatever he was about to say was cut off, though, by a gentle, grandmotherly voice from up a flight of stairs.
"Oh! Yurei! Is that you I hear? And Flora, as well? How lovely!"
Somewhat slowly, an old cat made her way into the garage, smiling warmly.
"Welcome to our little home, everyone. It's good to see you all safe!"
She said earnestly, as another voice chimed in from a corner.
"So...Flora, is it? We found this old apartment complex pretty much buried after that storm hit ol' Sartoric. Yurei and Riv helped get us in here, and we've been hiding out since. Turns out, the place is still hooked up to the grid, so we've made ourselves at home."
The speaker said, stepping into the light, and revealing a dark-scaled reptile, though one with hair. He flicked one hand idly dispelling a few crackling arcs of electricity, and ran his hand through his hair.
"And, since Tagaso interrupted before he could finish... my name's Neku. Neku Sakuraba. Nice to meet ya"

Title: Re: Around the Folf
Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on December 30, 2020, 10:36:53 AM

Flora waved excitedly to Taga before addressing the newcomer. "Hi Taga! I'm so glad to see you're all right! And nice to meet you Neku!"

"Neku, is that hair natural? I've never seen a reptile sporting a hairdo before," asked Sharal'tar. As a native desert lizard, she had some experience with this sort of thing, albeit not with Neku's species in particular.

Kojurro looked around for any entrances and exits, just to get a bearing on the layout of their immediate area. "We're back in the starting city? Not that I don't appreciate the new hideout, but will we be able to return to the North-Gondar desert whenever we want to continue our expedition?" He directed his question mostly to Riven, as he was the test subject with the teleportation power.

Post by: StarfallRaptor on December 30, 2020, 09:17:12 PM

Neku looked over at Sharal'tar, grinning a bit and fiddling with the headphones around his neck.
"Well, I've had hair since I was a kid... so... I guess it must be. Might have some weird heritage, but... i dunno. "

He said with a shrug and a chuckle. Riv, meanwhile, had let go of Sharal'tar's hand and made his way over to Kojuuro.
"Ah, don't worry. As long as i've got a marker nearby, I can open up a gate back to wherever you guys are. And thanks to a little quick thinking on Yu's part, we've even figured out how to make them portable AND easy to hide!"
He bragged, giving a cheeky grin.
"I'd show you guys right now, but... y'know... sandstorm." He added a bit sheepishly. Taga, meanwhile, had made her way over to the group, smiling.
"Well now, i'm sure you would like to see the much nicer part of our little home, wouldn't you? There's beds, good running water, and more upstairs!" She said warmly, patting Yurei on the arm affectionately.
"Plus the others are still upstairs, rude as that may be"

Title: Re: Around the Folf
Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on January 01, 2021, 11:23:59 AM

"That's incredible!" Dr. Kojurro breathed after Riven explained his teleportation abilities. "The scientific and technological possiblities of such a power are incalculable!"

"There he goes, sounding like a Sartonic scientist," Sharal'tar politely criticized. "Kojurro, you ever stop to think that such single-minded focus on harnessing and commercializing our powers, with only secondary attention given to the test subjects' personal wants and wishes, is part of the reason so many of us are going rogue and hiding out?"

Kojurro folded his arms. "Is that really a problem for all of you?" he asked the gathered test subjects at large. "Not to be rude, but Sartonic gives you free room and board, asking only to study your powers to further humanity. What more could you want?"

"Taga, please show us more of the base!" Flora, meanwhile, answered excitedly to her older friend. "This is incredible! It reminds me of the sort of hideouts my gang would build during my drug-running years in America."

Riv smiled a bit and chuckled.
"Admittedly, my power could be useful, I guess. But yeah, honestly wasn't a fan of being stuck in a lab."
He said softly. Meanwhile, Taga smiled at Flora and Yurei.
"Well, then. Come along upstairs. I took the liberty of making sure you've got rooms set up! Oh, and don't mind Josef. He's a bit...odd... but a good sort!" She said warmly...

"Feels like at least half of us are 'odd but a good sort'," Flora jokingly agreed, following Taga up the stairs.

"How about royalties, Kojurro?" Sharal'tar folded her arms. "How about a salary in addition to room and board? Imagine Sartonic invented some sort of teleporter using Riv's power, the lab would make millions but Riv would be right where he was! You really find that fair, doctor?"

Kojurro decided to change conversation partners over getting grilled by grumpy test subjects. "So, how you holding up?" He asked Emma, Marita, and Rose. "Let me know if you're overwhelmed or you need anything, we could go somewhere quiet and leave all the test subjects to reconnect."

millions? try trillions. imagine. being able to teleport from LA to new York city in a eyeblink. No more need for cars or planes, just enough cash to use a teleporter." Kora said . ' Riv could make himself extraordinarily wealthy, if he could make a profit from his power. teleportation has virtually limitless possibilities. in archeology, you could teleport finds from the field to the lab for testing in a blink. Imagine what Howard Carter and lord Carnavon could have done with this. it wouldnt have taken them nearly 9 years to find King Tut's tomb."

"Exactly, thank you Kora," Sharal'tar nodded approvingly.

"Okay, but Riv wouldn't be able to do any of that without us!" Kojurro threw his hands in the air upon disocovering even the non-test subjects were against his stance. "In this hypothetical, Sartonic scientists would be the ones who studied Riv for years, painstakingly learned the ins-and-outs of how his power worked, reverse-engineered it for widespread use, and then manufactured the actual products or technologies being sold to the public! Why, that's 99% of the work!"

its HIS power kojurro. doesnt matter what they do with testing it, its ultimately derived from something that belongs to someone else. it is essentially an invention - Riv having the power to teleport. if others want to use it- then they have to pay the inventor to use his creation- in this case, his power. now if they patent something that improves on previous work, thats another matter. devices that increase telephone call dustance and clarotry of calls for instance were patented outside the original patent.' Kora said. ' we're dealing with a hypothetical anyway. "

As Taga lead Yurei and Flora up the stairs into the main level of the base, she smiled warmly at Flora.
"You know, after that storm, Yu spent a great deal of time worried sick about you and Sharal'tar, Flora. Oh, he'd spend hours pacing the building, sometimes. It's good that you're safe."
She teased, making Yurei blush and shyly look away, suddenly interested in something on the ceiling as they reached another door. Taga smiled and patted Yurei's arm teasingly as she opened it, revealing a large, central room set up as a comfortable commons area complete with couches, a TV, and a kitchen, as well as hallways leading off to various rooms.
"Well, here we are. Our little home sweet home!"

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on January 27, 2021, 08:20:21 PM

Sharal'tar smirked when Kojurro gave up the argument and slinked off to sulk. "I like this place more every second," she grinned. "So, Neku, you've got electric powers, huh? Are you the reason this place has electricity?"

Flora was similarly impressed with the upper floor. "This is awesome! That was my main gripe with Sartonic, they weren't too keen on common areas where we could all gather up. Must have been worried about large-scale psionic mishaps or something."

Squeezing Yurei's hand tighter and flashing him a smile, she quickly hurried further into the common room to pull him excitedly onto a couch. "Were you worried for us?" she teased, kissing him on both cheeks. "Well, I was worried for you too! Next time I flee Sartonic for my life, I'll try to bring my cell phone along for the ride!"

Post by: StarfallRaptor on January 30, 2021, 11:04:55 PM

Neku chuckled at Sharal'tar's question, dancing a spark across his fingers like a coin.
"Me? Nah, i'm nowhere near strong enough for that! Riv and Yurei figured out how to get us hooked back up to an old solar field not far off. My guess is that whoever used to live here left in a hurry, and everything was left hooked up when it got buried. Hell, they even still have TVs that're hooked up. Signal's crap, but hey."
He said with a smirk, absently tossing the spark in the air as Riv nodded.
"Um... thanks for sticking up for me, Sharal'tar. And uh... yeah, I guess I did help with getting the place hooked back up. A little. Mostly just fixing up wires and stuff"
He said, grinning sheepishly.

As he was pulled to the couch, Yurei smiled shyly, kissing Flora back each time.
"Heh, of course I was worried! Knowing that the loves of my life were out there on the run from Sartoric? I mean...I know you guys can take care of yourselves, but still..."
He smiled and hugged Flora close.
"Next time you do that, how about you just bring me along for the ride, instead?"
He smiled, leaning in closer before a calm cough interrupted whatever he was about to say.
"Ah. I see that our guests have arrived then. I presume you must be Flora, yes? Hm... fur color slightly different. Must make corrections to it... regardless, though. I would like to request a small biological sample from you, before you set out again."
From a hallway, an older-looking maned wolf stepped into the common area, wiping his hands on some sort of smock and adjusting his large glasses...

Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on January 31, 2021, 02:43:25 PM

"No problem," Sharal'tar let a small grin escape her reserved countenance. "Sartonic scientists are all a bit too self-important for their own good. Every so often you gotta deflate them a bit for their own good."

She glanced down the hallway. "I really want to see more of this place. Is there somewhere we can check out other than the common room Yurei just took Flora?"

"I wanted to find you before escaping Sartonic, believe me!" Flora assured. "But I was pretty much getting captured, being assaulted, or fleeing for my life from the moment the guards dragged me from your room (https://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=14553.msg469048#msg469048). I was so worried that was the last time you'd ever see me." She sniffed. "It wasn't exactly the most dignified memory to remember me by..."

She looked up and flashed a slightly-nervous smile at the newcomer. "Erm...hi! Pleased to meet you, though it sounds like you already know me. Have we met?" She gulped. "And, uh, what sort of 'biological sample' are we talking here, if you don't mind me asking?"

Neku smirked, shrugging a bit as he looked down one of the halls.
"Well, there's not a lot else to see here. Honestly, we're still trying to sort through stuff people left behind. Seriously, some of the stuff we've found is...weird, to put it nicely."
He chuckled, as Riv tapped on his chin thoughtfully.
"I mean, we've got a little training area set up, I guess? And there's this one room that's um... interesting. If that kinda stuff is fascinating to you. But...um... I mean, I figured you'd want to spend time with Yu? Aren't you guys... y'know...together?"
He asked, a bit puzzled...

Yurei glanced at the TV for a moment, blushing as he turned back to Flora.
"Honestly, Flora. I'd never remember you as anything less than the amazing, wonderful, passionate, beautiful girl you are. I mean it~."
He stammeted shyly, as the maned wolf made his way over, calmly clearing his throat again.
"We have not. I merely have reviewed your personnel file. I am Josef. As to the biological sample, anything which contains your DNA will suffice. Blood, skin, hair, it is of no concern. The same goes for all of you. Though please. Refrain from making your samples consist of ... bodily fluids, if you would. I find such things distasteful."
He said, producing multiple small test tube-like containers and handing them to each of the recent arrivals in the room...

"Trust me, I know Yurei enough to recognize when he wants alone time with Flora," Sharal'tar shrugged and added with a grin, "plus you can't allude to a room like that without showing it. My psionic power is literally growing tentacles, I'm not as innocent as you may think."

Kojurro watched as the test subjects grouped up and formed their own little bubble. "On that topic, I'm surprised Sartonic turned such a blind eye to the rampant polyamory going on among its test subjects," he remarked to Marita and Rose. "You'd think that'd constitute some sort of safety or health concerns. Especially when staff members like Emma started getting involved..."

"Oh, well, nice to meet you Josef." Flora glanced at Yurei, and when he didn't seem concerned about Josef's request, acquiescently plucked one of her ivory head hairs and offered it in her proffered vial. "Could I ask what you're going to do with it?" she followed up. "From your talk of 'correcting the fur color,' it almost sounds like you were going to grow a clone or something..."

Neku smirked, raising an eye ridge.
"Tentacles, huh? Well, then I think you'd get a kick out of that room, then. C'mon, we'll show you, eh Riv?"
He teased, as Riv's tail stiffened straight out behind him.
"Y-yeah, sure!"
He stammered awkwardly...

Yurei smiled and kissed Flora's cheek as Josef took the sample container.
"Something of the sort. Though far less flawed by comparison. You will see soon enough. Suffice it to say it will impress you."
He said smugly, tucking the container into his smock.
"Now, if the rest of you could provide samples as well, then my project can be completed before you set out again"

"Well, I don't think my pink fur is flawed at all," Flora stuck her tongue out defiantly. Glancing at Emma and Kora, she waited to see if the two would pass over genetic samples or opt out.

Sharal'tar smiled. "Lead the way," she said, mostly to Riv, as he was clearly uncomfortable and she enjoyed seeing him squirm. Yurei and I need to bring this guy out of his shell...if he's not using those portals in the bedroom, he's doing his love life a disservice.

As they walked, she couldn't help but wonder whether Yurei had hooked up with any of these people. I certainly hope he hasn't just sat here pining after me and Flora...even though that's exactly the sort of Byronic thing he'd do. Neku seemed the most likely shag of the roommates she'd encountered; she resolved to ask Yurei later, or assure him that he had her full support on any romantic endeavors he may or may not be interested in exploring.

Emma and Kora handed over some hairs as genetic examples. " Yes , Kojurro, normally such relationships are strictly forbidden under a moral code of conduct, you can't mingle personal and professional conduct without sacrificing either your personal privacy or your professional reputation, and often you lose both."
I was hired to help get samples from Flora" Emma said. " What sort of samples? Kora asked." Well.." Emma blushed " her sperm. I... had to arouse her until she produced a sample. " And what did Satoric have you do to get that sample " Well, um" Emma blushed " Kiss her on the lips and fondle her breasts until she got hard." Wait your first meeting with Flora involved you two making out until she ' released into a cup? You couldn't have just shown her hot film love scenes on a screen until you got the sample?"Kora said turning to Emma " I needed the money, and well we really enjoyed the making out. " And from that you formed a relationship. Sartonic crossed a whole bunch of ethics lines by having you and Flora do that, then again, considering the other stuff that has been going on there, two young vixens introducing themselves by putting their tongues into each other's mouths is not something that is going to reach the top of ethics violations, or even warrant much public mention. "
" Would you have done something like that, if that meant you would have met Marita for the first time?" " No , honey. For one, Marita and I have known each other for a long time. Secondly that kind of kissing is something you normally learn about at sleepovers with other girls. I take it you never had sleepovers with your girlfriends?" No, Flora was my first kiss ever " Emma said " So your first kiss was part of stimulating Floras privates? Well that's a memorable first kiss at any rate"

Post by: Nick22 on March 25, 2021, 05:47:31 PM

Emma sighed " I didn't have many friends in my early teens. Guys weren't really interested in me, and I didn't know that I liked girls yet. I didn't do sleepovers or anything like that. So no spin the bottle, truth or dare, any of those games that normally result in you kissing someone else." Kora nodded " Everyone is different. Like I said, I don't blame you or Flora for doing what Sartonic told you, it's their fault for having you do it in the first place. It's cute that you girls hit it off, and more than that, judging from the bump in your belly. Have you given a name to the child yet?" No. I'm not sure on the gender, I'm not entirely sure that there's only one." Have you told your folks?" Kora asked " Heavens no! That conversation would be very very awkward " Hey mom and dad? I'm pregnant, by another girl who has a working dodad. Can you help me?" They would surely help you, Emma dear. Parents love their kids, no matter what messes they get into. " Kora said

Deep in the deserts the next morning, after the sandstorm had died down, a new portal opened and Sharal'tar led the way back onto the path of their treasure map, waving goodbye to the new friends they'd made.

"Nice to know we can come back whenever we want," Kojurro noted, holding a small handheld device similar to a car beeper. "We just have to alert them with this beacon, and Riv will pop us a portal in no time."

"Awesome, 'cause I was really hoping to learn what that maned wolf planned on doing with my genetic sample," Flora yawned; despite it being past noon, she hadn't gotten much sleep. "For all I know, the next time we visit there's going to be a different Flora already running around..."

Yurei smirked, giving a small chuckle as he stepped through the portal.
"Well, you're not too far off the mark, Flora. Josef's using his ability to create decoys for Sartoric. The genetic samples will let him create fakes convincing enough to convince them that we kicked it on the road, at least throw them off our track long enough to get us some breathing room. Plus, once he has our imprints, he can also create slightly more advanced golems that we can drop in a town off the track to throw them if we need."
He replied, stretching a bit as he walked. Not too far off, near Sharal'tar, Neku grinned, fiddling with his headphones and rolling a shoulder.
"Heh, damn. Been way too long since I've been out like this! Man, the sun feels nice!"
He said, attempting to keep a cool facade, but clearly excited...

so, thoise are, for all intents and purposes, cllones that you are going to pass off as us?" Kora made a face. "Awww, can we go back? I want to meet the other me!" Flora asked, even as the portal closed behind her. "Can they talk? Could we chat with ourselves, or shake hands, or...like, other things?"

"What 'other things'?" Sharal'tar raised an eyebrow when the folf didn't reply. "Flora, please tell me you aren't implying you'd want to have sex with a braindead homunculus of yourself that you'll soon be leaving behind as a corpse in the desert." She shot her a disgusted look.

"I...uh...didn't think that much about it..." Flora broke eye contact as Sharal'tar facepalmed and shook her head.

"We really do need to keep moving, we can revisit the den some other time," Kojurro affirmed resolutely. "It's mid-autumn, a good time of year for hiking through the desert, but the days will still be hot and the nights bitter cold. Stay in the wagons as much as possible, keep hydrated, and let's get this caravan rolling!"

Post by: StarfallRaptor on June 15, 2021, 11:54:11 PM

Yurei chuckled at Flora's enthusiastic questioning, playfully patting her arm.
"Well, Flora, those first batch of Josef's golems wouldn't make great conversational partners. In fact, they won't do much of anything. But I'm sure with a little time and a bit more familiarity with you, he could craft a nearly-identical copy of you. Plus any...tweaks you'd like. He's quite talented like that."
He teased, then playfully gave her butt a quick grope.
"Besides, why would you need another you... when you've got me here~?"
He whispered coyly...

As the group made their way towards their next destination, Neku paused, tensing up and holding a hand out tongue flicking a bit.
"Hey, hold up guys. There's something ahead of us. Sartoric, in fact..."
He said nervously, sparks flicking across his arms...

Flora purred happily when Yurei pet her; it had been so long since they'd last seen each other, she felt safer than she'd been since this ordeal started knowing he was on their team again. But that comfort switched to apprehension when he alerted them that a threat was inbound.

“Any idea how close they are?” Kojurro asked, drawing his katana in preparation.

Sharal'tar shot Marie a sideways glance. “Maybe you should stay be me, Marie. Your plant powers might be getting their first taste of combat soon, and I'd like to be able to advise you if I get any opportunities…”

As soon as Neku spoke, Yurei shifted position slightly, putting himself protectively in front of Flora, arm out in front of her. Neku, meanwhile, had shut his eyes, tongue flicking out again as sparks flickered around his arms.
"About sixty meters. Maybe seventy. I don't think they know we're here yet, though. Based on movement... they're patrolling. I think they knew we'd be heading this way. Trying to cut us off..."

He muttered softly, eyes snapping open.
"Wait... if they're trying to do that..."
Before he could finish his thought, the sound of engines could be heard from the way they'd just come...

why do i get the sense that sartonic put trackers of some kind on you?' Kora turned to Yurei. " it would be a prudent thing to do, given the abilities of the residents of that facility. after all, you dont want someone who could, say, control peoples minds breaking out and having no way to track him or her down. So, how do you explain how they found us, and knew we were heading this way.?"

Marie focused abd her claws slowlly turned green, changing into vines. ' Tell what to hit Sharal, tar.' She said tersely. " i'll give it my best shot."

Neku shook his head.
"Yurei's clean. Josef and I made sure of that once things got settled in. Plus... these guys aren't geared enough to be a capture unit. Too few, besides. My guess is that they're dragnet fishing for us. Send out a bunch of teams along likely routes, and we'd be bound to run into them."
He said, electricity coiling along his arms and torso...

"Then we're gonna want to eliminate them fast, before they have time to call for backup," Kojurro affirmed, his keen eyes scanning to the horizon and spotting the incoming patrol.

"Good call, Marie," Sharal'tar agreed, readying her own prehensile vines in preparation. "If we target the same person, we can really knock them out of the fight."

Flora, for her part, was retreating back into the caravan. "Erm, nobody brought, like, an extra pistol or something, did they?" she muttered nervously. "My psionic power is...not particularly helpful in combat..."

Meanwhile, as the patrol approached its quarry, the pointman reported the blips on his radar to the collective. "We've got lifesigns up ahead, I'd say about a dozen."

"That's too many to be our target, right?" asked the speeder pilot to his right. The majority of the patrol was camped out on a small flying skiff, speeding along the sands like a boat would cut through water. Flanking the main craft were a pair of jetski-styled speeders utilizing the same hover technology. None of the vehicles were armed, but the Sartonic agents among the patrol were far from slouches in combat.

"Let's be on our toes, just in case," the driver replied. He flexed his muscles, feeling his skin turn chromatic and bulletproof. "I wouldn't put it past them to hire additional protection."

"Well, if they're dumb enough to bring guns or knives to a psi-fight, y'all just make sure to stay behind me," a woman on the skiff radioed with a cackle. Popping the joints in her fingers, she grinned as rivulets of ferrous energy ran down her fingers.

"If you want to put up a rust field, be my guest," the driver replied. "Everyone else feeling ready? We'll be on them in less than a minute..."

Yurei smiled reassuringly at Flora, pulling a small combat knife and pistol from his vest and offering them to her.
"You're in luck, Flora. Just so happens I do. In fact, specially made ones, even."
He teased, giving her a playful wink. Nearby, Neku glanced around the area, then shut his eyes, flicking his tongue again as the electricity around his arms coalesced into glowing orbs in his hands, several stray bolts arcing to the ground and flash fusing the sand into glass.
"You're right about us needing to take them out fast. I should be able to buy us a little time, but knowing them they'll be able to get around it pretty fast. Okay, now. Anyone who isn't a fighter, I suggest you get to the caravan, keep your heads down, and brace yourselves. Things may get pretty hectic REAL soon"
He said calmly, pulling his headphones up over his ears and shifting into a fighting stance...

(Transcript of the L1F3 roleplay mentioned on page 1469, RP'd with Davjo via Google Docs)

The gecko was responding well to treatment. Not well enough to be let back out into society, but they'd managed to get him to acknowledge the sapience of the scientists working on him.

"Great job," the red-headed lab assistant said dismissively, scribbling down the numbers from his scanner while the gecko obligingly attempted to lift a chocolate bar with his mind. "See? You do what we say, you get rewarded."

The armadillo assistant was one of three people in the cell. The cell was one of many on Floor Four, the innermost sanctum of Sartonic Labs, albeit one of the few that were currently occupied. Psionic experiments were rare enough, but even more so were ones so unstable they couldn't be allowed to live a regular life in the apartments. This gecko's level of psychopathic narcissism was second only to his telekinetic powers.

The gecko's eyes strained as the chocolate bar came nearer. He was fighting months of being punished for using his psionic abilities, and the process to retrain him to use them only for good was a slow and meticulous one. But the allure of his favorite food was too good to ignore. The bar floated closer...closer…

Abruptly the lab assistant reached his thumb and index finger out and stopped the chocolate bar in its tracks. "Ah ah…" he cautioned. "One last thing before you get this. Run the treadmill."

The gecko's eyes flashed angrily. Sitting in the corner of the cell was an X-ray treadmill, designed to snap photos of the patient's skeletal and muscular structure while in operation. As the gecko had a severely overdeveloped frontal cortex and forearms, the scientists wanted to see what effect these changes have had on his motor functions. But all the gecko saw was inferior beings denying him a rightly-earned treat.

"Just a short run, and then…" the lab assistant started, but the gecko barked an angry, frustrated howl and flared his fingertips. The chocolate bar spun at 50 mph and smacked painfully against the assistant's face, who cried out and staggered backwards. Abruptly, the collar around the gecko's neck sparked and hit the reptile with 2,000 volts of electricity. Crying out, the gecko dropped to his knees, and the three took advantage of the incapacitation to scamper out of the room.

"Christ, we were making good progress that time, too…" grumbled the first scientist, while his assistant continued to massage his face.

"I'm sorry," the armadillo blinked, face red. "I guess maybe I pushed him too far."

"No, he was looking for an excuse to blow his top," consoled the female scientist. "He does that shit."

The first scientist glanced back at the cell. "We, uh, forgot the chocolate bar." The confection was sitting just feet away from the gecko, but his restraints would prevent him from using his abilities to grab it.

"No fucks given here," muttered the assistant. "Let it taunt him until he feels like being polite."

"Alright everyone, game faces on," warned the female, bringing everyone back into focus. "Time for Subject L1F3 again."

Both of her allies groaned loudly. The three came to a stop in front of the cell at the end of the block.

The male scientist took a preparatory breath and readied his clipboard. "All right, let's get this shit over with."

The three slid the cell door open and marched in.

I just recently woke up, confused about why I am chained against a wall, seemingly stuck to it with my arms, legs, tail and neck, all spread evenly. One could draw a decently shaped hexagon if you were to draw a line between the tips of my limbs.

I notice three people joining from the door across the room. "W-Who are you? Why am I here?", I try to ask them. "Why am I pinned onto a wall like this?"

The only thing I remember is something stinging into me from behind and then falling unconscious. Was I tranquilized? Were people looking for me?

All I know is that I am now stuck inside an unknown place, wearing a seemingly loose shirt and pants, both white. I cannot recall the last time I wore actual clothing.

The scientist plastered the friendliest smile he could onto his face. "Hello there! How are you doing?" The lab assistant and the female scientist assumed defensive stances so the three were surrounding the subject.

"We've got a proposition for you," the man continued. This was to be L1F3's last opportunity to cooperate. Normally, a rogue psion gets a single chance, but management really wanted full control over this specimen. Her plantlike body structure could open new lucrative discoveries into the world of age extension. "You cooperate in full with Sartonic Labs, allow us to run tests and diagnostics on you without resistance, and we'll pay you a weekly allowance of 500 credits and improve your living situation."

The serpentine subject had turned down the offer before, but management had authorized a mind wipe in the hopes of getting an agreement the second time around.

"I… honestly don't know what you all mean with that… What is 'Sartonic Labs'? Why do you want to run tests on specifically me? I don't remember being here in the first place… I… don't remember much anymore either…", I say, quite upset and confused. "I don't know if I should cooperate with you, I just want to get out of here! I don't even have any use for money like you guys do!"

I struggle a bit, but the chains won't budge an inch. "I want to get out of here!"

"Same answer as last time," remarked the female dully, ticking her notepad. "Anyone surprised?"

The male scientist groaned loudly. "This was such a huge waste of my time…" He muttered. Making a hand gesture, he directed the assistant to stab the subject with an electric prod. "Alright, looks like we're doing this the hard way. When we let you off the wall, You're gonna take this seed and make it germinate." He held out a grain of dill. "ONLY germinate. You overextended your powers and that collar will hurt you about...twice as much as this."

Upon his last word, the armadillo assistant stabbed the subject roughly in the side with the electric prod

A screeching shout, most likely from the pain of the electric prod, could be heard across the room.

"W-Why are you doing this to me?", the snake replied with a now slightly hoarse voice. "Why do you want me to demonstrate things in a very specific manner and hurt me while doing so? What should I have done wrong?"

Nevertheless, not remembering anything and having no other choice, she decided to listen this time, maybe they would let her go. The grain of dill started to germinate slowly. "I-Is this enough? Am I allowed to leave now?"

The scientist looked eagerly. "Oh hey, it's cooperating! Are you recording this?"

The female was scrambling to activate her reader. "Almost, I wasn't expecting it to behave!"

"We need to go again. Un-germinate that seed and then re-germinate it again," the male scientist ordered. "Now!"

"U-Ungerminate?", she responded in a confusing voice. "I-I am uncertain if I am capable of that, as I only recall growing things, b-but give me a try!"

She seemingly concentrates on the seed, slowly managing to un-germinate it and germinating it once more.

"C-Can I leave now? I want to go back to the place I call home… Also, uh… why are you talking to me as if I weren't a person, and as if I were not hearing you?"

"Perfect…" breathed the scientist, and all three looked in awe as the dill sprout slowly changed back into a seed.

"It did it!" exclaimed the female scientist. "It reversed aging!" This was the big breakthrough they'd been waiting for. This was the psionic power to trump anything they'd encountered. If they could reverse-engineer the process into a transferrable form, they could cure aging permanently.

Suddenly aware that they were standing on the cusp of immortality, the behavior of her captors changed somewhat. "All right, look," the male scientist tried to keep his voice comforting. "We can't let you leave. But we might be able to make things more comfortable. Just answer our questions. What you just did to that seed...could you do that to an animal? If we brought you a snake could you regress it into a hatchling?"

The assistant withdrew a chocolate bar and offered it with trembling fingers. "Here...you earned it," he said, making sure he was standing such that she wouldn't be able to touch his skin.

"I wouldn't do that to a conscious being, you can't expect that from me!", she responded aggressively, flinching forward. "And go away with this manufactured thing, I do not fancy such 'rewards', as you call them!"

She was struggling to get off the chains that restrained her movement heavily. Possibly to the dismay of the scientists.

"Yeah, that sounds about right..." muttered the male scientist. Stepping forward, he shoved his face into the subject's. "Listen to me very carefully," he enunciated. "You're NOT leaving. You're going to do what we say. Either you do it willingly and happily, or we have ways to FORCE you. What's it gonna be?"

"How about NEITHER?", she responded aggressively, still struggling to get off the chains.

The scientist gestured to the assistant, who obligingly stabbed her again with the electric rod. "Not an option," he replied simply.

Another screeching sound of pain echoed across the room. The serpentine was panting. "You... think so..."

The female scientist but her lip and grabbed her constituent's arm. "Maybe we can compromise," she said. "What if we brought you a braindead animal? That way you're not hurting anyone..."

"I do not want to do this on anyone unwillingly, regardless if they can still process thoughts or not." She suddenly smirked slightly. "Why not one of you?"

"Well how's a hamster supposed to give consent? It can't think!" protested the assistant.

"Every animal can give consent, I did communicate with so-called wild animals after all before I was captured by you."

The lead scientist narrowed his eyes. "You either demonstrate on a neutral subject, or we'll find a subject you don't want to harm, and WE'LL make them suffer instead."

"I don't want to hurt anyone, why don't you just volunteer?", she asks eagerly.

The scientist grumbled. "Assistant, we'll pay you an extra month's salary to let her de-age you." "What? No way!" exclaimed the assistant. "Why not? You wanna live longer, right?" pressed the female. The assistant folded his arms. "Not without knowing more about the procedure."

"I suppose I cannot help you then", the subject grumbled.

The male scientist sighed. "So if we can find someone interested in being de-aged, you'd be willing to do it by touching them? I'm sure if we offer enough money somebody in this building will agree to it."

"Willingly. No bribing."

The scientist rolled his eyes. "Sure. No bribing." He had no intention of holding up that part of the deal. They'll just demonstrate the difference to the willing employee beforehand. This plantlike serpent just didn’t understand how things worked in this world.

"Promise?", she asked, just to be certain.

The scientist held up his hand in oath, and gestured for his teammates to do the same. "Promise", the three said in unison.

The serpent smiles slightly, but also sighs. "I suppose I will still be held in captivity?"

"For now, yes, as punishment for being entirely uncooperative." the male scientist replied.
"You've given us no evidence that you're going to assist us in our research," added the female.
"So we'll see you tomorrow, and if you do what we tell you to with de-aging our employee, maybe we'll take your cuffs off and let you roam your cell."

"Can I request to talk with the new 'subject' before I attempt to de-age them? Chatter and the likes."

"No, you can't!" snapped the scientist, and without even loosening her bonds, the trio left the cell.

She sighs, feeling quite exhausted from all this, mostly the shocks though.

So the scientists sent out the call, and sure enough there was little trouble locating an employee who'd be interested in having their age reduced. Marty the janitor was the least valuable of the staff who volunteered, and also agreed to the lowest financial compensation. According to him, a second chance at life would be enough.

The next day, the scientists returned to Subject L1F3's cell. Seeing the subject Marty bit his lip. "This...er...it's not going to hurt is it?" he asked unsteadily.

"That's what we're hoping to find out," the scientist said dismissively. The assistant pushed the old man forward.

Marty regarded the subject. "Ummm...errrr...am I gonna lose my memory or anything?"

The serpentine noticed someone unknown entering the room. “They… found someone volunteering?” Her expression seems surprised.

“Hey, uh, I am sadly not allowed to chatter with you, but you voluntarily wanted to de-age? I’m certain you won’t lose your memory or anything similar to that”, she tried to comfort him.

The man shrugged. “Why not? Sounds like a chance to be young again, and make some money to boot.” Still he looked nervous.

“Uhm… what do you mean with ‘making some money’? I thought you were here completely voluntary!” The serpentine seems agitated.

The scientist facepalmed. “Goddammit Marty, there goes your money!” he exclaimed. “You’re doing it for free now!”

The janitor abruptly realized he was supposed to keep his financial compensation a secret. “Errr, wait, I’m doing it for free now?” he stammered.

“Either that or you can get the hell out!” the scientist snapped.

Marty looked back at the subject, then shook his head. “I’m....er...on second thought, I’m done,” he said. “Too many questions. This whole thing seems shifty.” He made to leave, but his way was blocked by the female scientist, wielding a silver-barreled pistol.

“I’m sorry Marty,” her voice trembled. “We can’t let you leave knowing what you know. Agree to the procedure. The only way you’re leaving this room is as an infant.”

Marty’s eyes went wide. He raised his hands in the air. “I..uh...guess I’m back on board!” he stammered, eyes never leaving the pistol.

“Touch the subject,” ordered the male scientist, eyes narrowed and resolute. “Now.”

“You guys promised to bring someone who does this voluntary, this is forced!”, the subject exclaimed. “I won’t do this to someone who refuses to do it.”

She seems even more worried since the scientist is holding up a pistol. Why do they force her to do such things? Why do they involve other people forcingly as well?

Still, she is trying to get off the chains, to no avail.

“Deal’s altered,” the scientist snapped. “Demonstrate your age-altering powers on Marty or we shoot him dead. His death will be on your conscience.” The female scientist continued to keep her gun trained on the shaking janitor.

“You can’t do that!”, she shouted in anger, anxious about someone innocent dying. She seemingly started to grow out vines behind her back, two of them, to reach for the pistol, attempting to grab it.

Immediately upon the subject using her powers, the collar around her neck activated, blasting her with 60,000 volts of electricity. The assistant leaped backwards in alarm, but the female scientist stood her ground and held her aim steady.

“H-hey guys, come on...” stammered Marty, hyperventilating. “I’ve got a wife! My kid’s about to go to high school, can’t we just...”

“Five...” interrupted the male scientist. “Four...three...two...”

“W-Why would you… do this…”, the serpent gasped, out of breath, slowly retracting her vines. “This person… hasn’t done anything… wrong…”

It seemed like she was about to faint.

“..One.”

The female scientist squeezed her eyes shut and pulled the trigger. With a deafening BLAM Marty slumped to the floor, blood spurting from a hole between his eyes.

His three coworkers were silent.

“Can you bring him back to life?” the male scientist suddenly asked, voice empty and emotionless.

She seemed silent, if not crying. “Why would you accelerate the inevitable?” She doesn’t seem to respond to the actual question.

“Because we want something from you more valuable than Marty,” he replied simply. “More valuable than anyone. And we’re prepared to sacrifice anything to get it. Speaking of which...”

He focused his gaze on the assistant, who gulped. The color draining from his face, he drew a small cage from his side pocket.

“Recognize this?” smirked the scientist, as the assistant popped the top and tapped a tiny milk snake into his open palm. “Maybe you’d be more prepared to act to save a piece of nature.”

For the time being, he didn’t make any definite statements about the snake, hoping the implication was clear enough.

“Why do you just murder anything and anyone at anytime?!”, she shouted aggressively. “No one has done anything to you guys, I honestly don’t get what you all want from me besides ‘using my powers for the worse’! Don’t murder more innocent beings, please…”

She looked intensively at the snake, as if trying to communicate via telepathy or similar.

"Figured you'd be smart enough to guess what we want," he interrupted, not caring about what possible communication the two could be having. "Turn the snake into a hatchling. Or else we'll use this," he referred to the electric prod still dangling from his belt. "On both of you. Starting with him." He assumed the subject would understand that such a shock would be invariably fatal to such a tiny creature.

She seemingly tries to tell the snake to quickly move away, but uncertain if the scientists can also read her mind.

She suddenly started extending her vines once more, trying to attack the scientists. "Why do you have to do this!? Stop with all this, right now!" She is aware that this is probably not the best of reactions to commit to, but what else should one do in pure anger, combined with panic and anxiety?

The assault immediately prompted a debilitating electric shock, this one even stronger. The collar was evidently designed to increase the punishment for repeat offenses. However the snake took the opportunity to try and escape the assistant's grasp, who shouted and scrambled to restrain him. Momentarily startled by the subject's sudden futile assault, both scientists were distracted when the milk snake slithered out the open cell door.

"Goddammit Nigel!" spat the lead scientist. "Find that damn snake!"

Both the assistant and female scientist sprinted out the door in a hurry, leaving the male scientist to angrily fling his clipboard at the subject's face. He tried to speak but was overcome with debilitating rage.

The vines seem to slowly retract themselves back into the back of the subject, whereas the subject seems to be knocked out, her eyes closed and unresponsive.

"Ah, Flora, please come in."

Dr. Van Der Merwe observed one of his favorite lab rats as she sat down nervously in the seat in front of his desk. She was a changeling; her powers involved being able to adjust her phenotype to match her desired image, though she was severely lacking in ability. Coupled with her almost being done with puberty, it was unlikely she'd ever be a particularly proficient psion. But still, psionic mammals are rare in themselves, and what she lacks in ability she made up for with obedience.

"Hi Doctor!" she smiled. "Is everything alright?" At the moment, she was in her preferred form; a pink-furred fox-wolf hybrid. She wore a T-shirt and shorts purchased from the city mall; due to her cooperation she was allowed to leave the lab at leisure and even receive a weekly salary.

“Of course, you’ve been excellent,” he gestured encouragingly. “I’ve heard that you cooperate completely with the scientists and get along with other test subjects, and we’ve learned some very interesting things from observing your abilities.”

Her face brightened. “That’s great to hear!”

“Actually, I’ve called you in here to offer you a special opportunity.” He leaned forward. “You’re very charismatic, and we have a subject who we’ve had trouble...getting to come out of her shell.”

Flora nodded, listening intently.

Van Der Werve passed her a photograph of the subject, which had been taken secretly just before kidnapping her from her natural habitat. “The species is not well documented, but it seems to be some sort of serpent with plantlike DNA. Her powers involve communicating with nature and growing prehensile vines.”

“Oooh, a hybrid! Just like me!” The folf piped up excitedly.

“Yes, but that’s about where the similarities end, I’m afraid,” Van Der Merwe shook his head sadly. “She takes every opportunity to escape, has repeatedly assaulted faculty members, and must be restrained in a cell in the basement, for her own safety and that of others.”

Flora bit her lip. “Did she ever agree to be a test subject?”

“There was little choice; in her current state she’s a danger to the general public.” Van Der Merwe handed Flora a manila folder containing specifications and photographs of an unusual device. “We’ve tried numerous methods to placate her and attempt to reach common ground; her powers could revolutionize the medical industry, it’s a shame to see them wasted on someone so mired in primitive thoughts. That’s where you come in. We want to try to give her someone to relate to, another of her species.”

Flora suddenly put the pieces together. “Me? But doctor, you know I can’t change my appearance that drastically! At least, not without months of mental--”

Van Der Merwe redirected her attention to the manila folder. “That machine is a psionic enhancer. It’s extremely rare that we authorize its use, as it can artificially boost a subject’s psionic abilities exponentially.”

Flora’s hand flew to her mouth and her eyes widened.

“It’s not permanent, unfortunately,” Van Der Merve continued. “You’d need to refresh your appearance before every visit, and since you’d need to operate unconnected to the machine, you couldn’t ever stay in the subject’s presence for long.”

“So...what would I do while I was with her, exactly?” Flora asked, mind still partially distracted by the possibilities engendered by the psionic enhancer.

"Befriend her, that's all," shrugged the doctor. "Tell her that living here isn't that bad. Convince her to work with us for everyone's benefit. You'll be paid a 500 credit bonus in addition."

Flora looked at the subject's photograph again, and nodded. "Okay, I'm in."

Dr. Van Der Merwe smiled. "I knew I could count on you, Flora." He opened his desk drawer and gave her a massive tome called Žaltys Biology and Behavior. "Read as much of this as you can to get in character; we'll let you know when the machine is calibrated for you."

When the subject finally regained consciousness, it was another 72 hours before they received any visitors or outside intervention. And that spell was broken by a very abnormal guest.

Alone, the male scientist quietly unlocked the door to her cell, though not quietly enough that it wouldn't wake her up. He was more focused on preventing the rest of the lab from hearing anything. Before he closed the door, trapping all present and future sounds in the cell, the subject could see that it was dark outside, well past normal visitation hours.

"Rise and shine, you bastard..." he muttered, voice dripping with malice. He was not dressed in his labcoat, instead wearing a rugged waterproof (and bloodproof) unisuit and rubber gloves. In his hand was a thin burlap bag containing oranges. "Figured you'd be hungry after not eating for three days. Want these oranges?"

"I'd… appreciate that… Being tied up for days like this is kind of tiring, and does hurt as well. No sunlight also means that I can't photosynthesize, which also means that I am not feeling that well…"

She slowly tried to reach for the oranges with her vines, not gesturing any threat to the scientist who just insulted her. She surprisingly manages to cut one orange open with one vine whilst holding it with another, and attempted to eat it.

"It's… quite good. I thought you guys would just give up on me due to me being not cooperative… Actually, let me tell you something: You want to use me to find something to prevent aging, is that right? I… don't want to cooperate because death is a natural cycle, and extending life to an undefined amount can be… devastating to everyone. Just think about it for a second, if everyone managed to life as long as me, then the world would probably have been gone to overpopulation. I'm just doing this for your good."

"I don't give a damn what your motivations are," he growled. "I'm not doing this out of gratitude or some crap, I'm doing it so you don't starve to death." As if to drive his point home, he smacked the subject across the face with the remaining oranges. "Also, oranges don't leave a bruise."

He broadsided her again. "Listen to me carefully; I don't give a damn what your noble motivations are for 'saving the human race from itself'; you're WRONG and there's MONEY to be made. And you're gonna spill the damn beans even if it means we'll extract the information from a lobotomized husk!"

“You are hopefully aware that being near me can be your doom? After all, that other scientist killed one of you just because I refused to de-age him. I am very certain that excluding myself from this society for centuries has been the best for everyone.”

Oddly, she seems rather calm. “I will not share my powers to be used such abusively.”

He grinned. “That’s where you’re wrong. I’ve got an idea for a way to get you to use your healing powers…”

He withdrew a long shining blade. “Sure, it won’t be de-aging, but it might give us some good readings. You want to lose a toe or a finger?” His eyes glinted. “For the next ten seconds, it’s your choice.”

“The moment you even remotely touch me, wherever it is something that connects us directly or indirectly, I could just age you to your death, if you want.” She tries to sneakily extend a vine behind her back, down along her leg. “Besides, I don’t even have toes to begin with, if you were to check my anatomy.”

She is readying her vine to wrap it around his arm in case he wants to stab or slice her.

Just the act of using one of her vines caused the collar to trigger a 60,000 volt discharge.

“I’ve got that covered,” he sneered, patting a remote in his pocket. “Increased the sensitivity to max. Your brain activates ANY of your powers, de-aging, the tentacles...it solves the problem for me.”

He made a show of checking his watch. “Oh look, time’s up.” He made a swipe at the index finger on the subject’s right hand.

The subject shouted in pain as one of her three fingers on her right hand was sliced off. It was bleeding pretty badly.

“Are… you… insane?!”, she puffed, “What are… you people… even doing with normal people?!”

“We’re paying them because they cooperate!” he snapped back. “I don’t understand how this is so difficult for you to figure out!”

He wiped his knife on her shirt and adjusted the remote so she could use her powers to a minimum degree without being shocked. “All right, start healing. Or don’t; doesn’t hurt me if you decide to keep being obstinate. You’re not going anywhere, after all...” He shrugged. “And if you die, at least we can learn something from the autopsy.”

She slowly decided to regenerate her lost finger. “I don’t think that you can learn anything from my dead body, in case that will ever happen.”

She seems rather agitated.

Flora looked in awe at the giant whirring contraption taking up the lion's share of the lab Dr. Van Der Merwe had brought her to. "This is it?"

Van Der Merwe nodded. "While connected to the machine, you will experience a significant increase in your psionic ability. Be careful not to let your thoughts go astray; we both know how your abilities normally operate deep within your self-conscience. You'll need to keep your mind sharp and focus on the new body you want to create."

Flora bit her lip. This close to the procedure, she had to confess to herself that the idea was a lot more daunting than before. "Are there...any harmful side effects? You're sure this won't give me cancer or something, right?"

"The only changes to your body will be ones you make yourself," Van Der Merwe replied, a not-particularly straightforward answer that didn't settle her much. "Also remember they won't be permanent. Even if you perfectly adjust your body to the desired serpentine shape and never even visit the subject, you'd look like yourself by this evening. Your body can only hold the accelerated phenotype for so long."

That made her feel better. "Alright, so I just step inside and start...thinking?" she asked tentatively.

"Yes. About this." Van Der Merwe handed her a photograph of a male grass snake. "Turn yourself into the spitting image of that individual. You've done enough research and seen enough videos of them in the wild that your brain should be able to do the rest."

Flora gulped. "Okay...Well, here goes." Shedding her clothes, she stepped gingerly into the machine.

She was expecting some sort of...energy field, or at least a funny feeling in her gut. Maybe an electric charge brewing in the air? But instead there was nothing out of the ordinary.

"Is everything working?"

Van Der Merwe was checking the readings over the shoulder of the two operators. "It certainly is. And, um, I think you're letting your mind wander…"

Flora looked down and saw to her abject shock that a very un-feminine body part was slowly growing to at least three times its normal size. "Holy shit! Doctor...look at it!" Her eyes lit up. "I'm hung like a stallion! This is amazing!"

"Flora, please. I know your...proclivities, but we have a task at hand."

Flora's mouth was hanging open in shock. "Could I just...see if it works on my boobs?" she asked shamelessly. Even as she asked permission, her B-cups were swelling at least two letter sizes. "I can't really control how my mind works, doctor. Sorry..."

“You could try.” Van Der Merwe’s tone was mostly disappointed. “We’re paying you a healthy sum, if you recall. And speaking of money, we’re burning a fortune every minute this machine stays on.”

“Okay, okay…” Flora finally took a moment to stop ogling her assets and shut her eyes, picturing the green bipedal reptile she’d spent so much time researching. The plantlike growth on the tail, the lighter underbelly...she could feel her body changing somehow, like her organs were changing their minds on how much space they took up. But still, it didn’t feel uncomfortable enough to be an entire body realignment, so it was still shocking when she opened her eyes and the colors were wrong. “Oh my god!” she exclaimed, looking down and seeing her smooth green hands. “My fur! My hair! My…” she tried to cup her chest, but there was nothing to cup. She realized she looked completely male.

Van Der Merwe flipped a switch and the whirring stopped. “Excellent work Flora!” he encouraged. “I told you it was easy!” Assistants ran forward and quickly scanned Flora to get readings on her new body.

Flora was examining her body too. “Everything’s so different…” she breathed. “I don’t even see the same anymore!”

“Reptiles have UV vision.” Van Der Merwe averted his eyes as Flora started examining a slit on her inner tail. “And those are your hemipenes. Not generally considered proper etiquette to play with in public.”

Flora quickly stopped. “This is so bizarre…” She accepted a hand mirror from an assistant and gasped as she saw her face. “I can’t even recognize myself!” She looked at the doctor. “How long will I look like this?”

“Not long, perhaps a few hours. It’ll depend on your mental ability to keep the new appearance from degrading.” Van Der Merwe nodded at an assistant who quickly setup a testing table. “Which is why we’re going to double-check you over as fast as possible and rush you to the cell for your first meeting.”

The scientist folded his arms. “Well, you’re not getting fed anymore, so I hope you enjoyed those oranges,” he informed pointly. “You wanna start photosynthesizing energy, or just regenerating, be our guest. You’re constantly monitored.” He left for the door. “Maybe a few more days of no food will change your mind...”

He let the door slam shut behind him.

“Sigh… I would most certainly need sunlight in order to photosynthesize properly. These non-natural lights only help partially, if at all.”, she mumbles. “At least I got to eat a single orange…”

What seemed like an eternity since the scientist left, possibly due to losing track of time thanks to loneliness, she started to see things: Was there someone at the corner of her eye? Did something just fall to the floor? But there was nothing, nothing at all. Was she getting paranoid? Was she becoming insane?

She shook her head in disapproval, trying to concentrate, as suddenly something seemingly tried to open the door…

On the other side, Flora gulped as she stared at the furthest door in the corridor. This part of Sartonic was nothing like the laboratory-themed resort she was used to on the higher levels. This almost felt like a prison. She was almost grateful most of the cells were empty, because the occupied ones contained creatures so visibly miserable it depressed her just to see them.

She was starting to have serious reservations about this whole idea. If the subject in question was as dangerous as the personnel kept claiming, Flora worried that it might try to kill her, especially if she slipped up and revealed she was in disguise. She almost wished they'd given her something other than a Sartonic jumpsuit to wear; none of the males she witnessed in the videos wore nearly that much clothing, it might tip her off.

Don't think like that, she told herself. You're here to help her. Just see what you can do to make her happy.

The cracks between the bars on Cell L1F3 were filled with black-tinted glass, unlike the other cells. With one last look at the scientists keeping their distance, Flora took a deep breath and walked into the cell.

She almost gasped when she saw the state her new cellmate was in. Strapped spreadeagle to the wall, wearing only bloody rags and with several obvious wounds in various states of recovery, it was plainly obvious her stay had not been a pleasant one. "Oh my god!" gasped Flora darting forward. "Are you...can you walk?" She made to untie the restraints, but something made her hesitate. "You won't...hurt me...if I let you down will you?" Dr. Van Der Merwe had ordered her to befriend this creature, after all, and Flora would never let a friend remain in the state she was at the moment.

She seemed very surprised to see one of her kin enter the room, despite the weird clothing he wore.

"You… You're one of my folk?" She seems quite confused at first. "You also seem more… concerned compared to all those other scientists", she commented. "How curious… I should be doing alright, even though I've basically been tortured in several ways for what feels like an eternity… I won't hurt you, I promise… I just want to be on the ground again after not moving for said eternity. Say, who are you anyway, and why did you come here? You don't really seem to be a scientist..."

Flora was surprised at the girl's tone. It seemed normal enough, not psychotic, crazed, or anything like Van Der Merwe implied she would be. He quickly got to work unleashing the girl. "My name's...uh...Foley..." she came up with lamely. "...a human name, I know, but I've lived my whole life in this lab."

She helped the girl to her knees, biting her lip at the aches her joints must be feeling. "Easy...oh man, you look horrible," she admitted without thinking. "Er, I mean, your injuries do. You look very pretty."

She gulped and smiled nervously. With a lack of other ideas, she decided to simply massage the truth. "I'm, uh...an experiment here, just like you. They asked me to come help you, said you were having trouble fitting in. Maybe I can help..."

She weakly attempts to stand up. "A 'subject' too? Why would you be here? You seem pretty normal to me…", she asked curiously. "Foley seems like a good name, I wouldn't know if it isn't as I do not have one. You shouldn't worry about me, to be honestly… but in what way should you be able to help me? The only thing I seek for is freedom back in nature, but the scientists refuse to do this because they need my abilities to create, alter and destroy life in some way or another."

She took some time to look him into the eyes. "So, again, you're an experiment, and you've been living here your whole life? I repeat, what is different about you, and why would you be here forever? I… would ask if you seek out nature as much as me, but since you've been here forever - noting your ability to cooperate with these creatures - you seem fine being here…" She sighs.

"Maybe you could convince the scientists to release me? I never meant any harm to anybody. I was just enjoying life as-is for the last couple of centuries. Even though I might look rather young, or despite me being able to extend life like that, it doesn't mean that I experience it 'slower' or anything. Being tied up here without food nor a person to talk to felt like ages…"

"My power?" Flora paused. She'd never actually come up with a false power, and she didn't want to use her normal one, for risk of dropping her disguise. "I...don't want to talk about it. It's embarrassing..." She quickly helped the girl to her feet. "There we go," she said softly as the subject gained her balance. "You really don't have a name? We should come up with one!" She smiled. "Everybody deserves a name! What's a normal žaltys name?"

Her pupils dilated when the subject casually mentioned her age. "You're centuries old??? Is that normal for us?" she gasped. "I've...I mean...uh, never met another one of us before. I've never even left the lab. I don't know anything about how we work. Are we supposed to live that long?"

She'd forgotten to shut the cell door, and one of the scientists outside the door fixed that problem by slamming it shut with a loud clank, causing Flora to openly wince.

The other girl, on the other hand, didn't seem to mind the loud clank as she was hugging the disguised girl.

"Well, to be fair, none of us are ever supposed to live that long. It's just because of my powers, you see. I don't think that I require a name, I'll be fine without one. You mentioned your powers to be embarrassing, why is that? I don't mind anything, really. Just be honest to me, I won't judge you for anything… I'd do a pinky promise, but I don't have that many fingers to do that."

She seems to weakly smile for a change, as if enjoying Flora's company. "I'm honest to everyone, and I'd like others to be honest to me as well. You can tell me about your 'embarrassing' powers, I promise I won't do anything bad like laughing or the likes."

"Well...ooookay..." Flora said slowly, fighting to give herself as much time as possible to come up with something. "I...can...detect metals. With my nose. Sometimes they take me to fields and I crawl around on all fours locating mineral deposits." She blushed. "Sorry, I know that's not super embarrassing, but when I do it, I feel like a dog or something."

She returned the hug, heart racing. "I know you want to leave, but they're not going to let you." She pet the girl's arm comfortingly. "It's so much easier if you just give them what they want...I've always behaved and they let me live in the apartments, and they even pay me." Her brow furrowed. "Where's your food? Are you just trapped in here? You look like you need to see a doctor..."

"Your power doesn't seem to sound so bad at all", she commented. "Also, I just want to leave this place, I don't fancy living in houses or the likes, I've always lived in nature and I am certain that I cannot adapt to your type of everyday life, or at least I don't want to adapt. I have no use for money either."

She paused for a moment. "I haven't been fed for days, if not a week. Well, one guy came in and gave me a single orange before cutting off one of my fingers so I had to force-use my powers."

Flora's eyes widened. "You haven't been fed in days? Maybe I can bring you some next time I visit. Sartonic's always been harsh when a test subject doesn't do what they want, but I didn't know they'd take it that far..."

She grabbed her by the hand. "I'll...talk to them about releasing you, I guess, but you know I have no real power. I'm just a lab rat like you." She looked worried. "And I really really don't think they're going to let you leave. I've never seen anyone released completely."

Someone banged on the door. "Male subject?" Someone barked through the bars. "Your time is almost up for today."

Flora's eyes went wide. "Is there anything else you want me to bring?" she asked urgently. "Maybe a flower or something?" Of course, she wasn't even sure if there'd be a next time...

"I'd appreciate a bit of nature around me, a flower would be nice. It was nice getting to know you, Foley. Maybe we'll meet again in the future, or not, depending what happens or if they let you see me again."

She waited idly for Flora to leave the room as she was being called by a scientist. There seemed to be a slight smile on her face.

"Okay," smiled Flora, "I'll make sure to--" but she was interrupted when the door swung open and the scientists marched in, the lead barking "Out!" Before she could say another word, she was swiftly whisked from the subject's presence.

After a few confused moments where she almost fought back to get her last words out, she realized Dr. Van Der Merwe was the one bringing her back to his office. "Why'd I have to leave so quickly?" she asked urgently, as soon as they were out of earshot. "I wasn't done talking to her! I think we we're making--"

She broke off when Van Der Merwe rubbed the stubble on top of her head. "You're starting to change back," he said simply. "A few more minutes and it would have been visible."

Flora looked with surprise as her skin started lightning, growing fur, and her body started assuming its normal shape. "Ohhh...that wasn't very long at all. Is there a way to get more?"

"You'll have slightly more time in future visits, as the full physical won't be necessary beforehand," Van Der Merwe said curtly. He opened the door to his office and ushered her in. "Excellent work. It appears you have gained her trust. Just keep pushing that."

"I don't if I'm comfortable with the treatment she's being given..." Flora said hesitantly. "She looks really unhealthy. I think if everyone were nicer to her--"

"It's not your job to tell us ours," Van Der Merwe interrupted in a cautioning voice, and Flora instantly shut up, knowing she'd crossed the line. "Just keep following your instructions. Take the rest of the day off. I'll wake you tomorrow when your next visit is at hand."

Flora nodded nervously and quickly left the room, stumbling clumsily due to her morphing skeletal structure.

Meanwhile back in the cell, the scientists were standing at attention with delicate measuring instruments and suppression ordnance, prepared for either side of the spectrum of possible responses from the subject.

"Well?" demanded the lead scientist. "Anything he say get through your thick skull? Ready to start behaving?"

"I'll still refuse to help", she responded. "He might be very willing to listen to you guys, but that's because he's been with you the whole time, and you've been treating him well. I don't want to help you guys as it will end our world as a whole if you gain to use my powers."

She crossed her arms. "I might be able to demonstrate something if you were to get me a bit of nature, like potted plants or the likes. I would be willing to do that much if you give me a bit of nature in this horrible cell. Also, I won't hurt you if you won't hurt me, is that alright?" She seems uncertain if actually being willing to help in some way is a good thing to do.

"What do you mean it would 'end our world as a whole'?" quoted the scientist incredulously. "Surely you don't actually believe that 'if nobody ever dies the planet would overpopulate' nonsense. These procedures would be rare and expensive, only the richest of the rich would ever see the fruits of immortality. The percentage would be so low as to wash out of the statistics."

"But on the other hand, think of how much knowledge we gain to learn by studying them!" another interrupted. "If a bit of nature is all you need, sure what the hell. We'll bring you a zinnia or something."

"The male test subject will bring a zinnia," interrupted the lead scientist. "I'm not gonna be the one to stand near this thing once we've handed it a potential source of power."

“You don’t seem to trust me at all, it seems. How curious.”, she commented. “You know that I could just as well use my powers right now, but I won’t due to manners. Either way, I am fine with anything as long as we have a deal.”

She keeps idling.

“Go ahead and use them,” the scientist shot back. “I’m perfectly fine seeing you get hit with that shock collar again.” His assistant laughed as they made to leave.

“Enjoy your opportunity to stretch your limbs,” noted the other scientist as he left. “Because if you keep this insubordination up. Things get a lot worse from here on out...and not just for you.”

The door closed behind them and she was alone again.

“Look, I said I’d bring her food!” protested Flora as the packed lunch was taken from her. The scientist had noticed the bulge in the back pocket of her jumpsuit and quickly confiscated the sandwich and juice box. “It’s not much, I think she’s starving!”

“That’s her own damn fault,” the scientist growled. Flora was in disguise again, and they were standing outside cell L1F3 the next day. “This time we’re going in with you, because she appears to be cooperating. You lead, and carry this,” he handed her a pot with a small red flower.

Flora acquiesced, stepping through the cell door and seeing the reptilian subject again. “Hey,” she said softly, in case she was asleep. “It’s Foley again. I, uh…” she looked at the scientist who’d followed her into the room “...wasn’t able to bring you food, I’m really sorry, but--”

“The flower,” interrupted the scientist, roughly pushing Flora forward so she accidentally jostled the subject. “De-age the flower. Just like you promised you’d do.”

“It’s alright, Foley.”, she commented on him being pushed towards her. “Ah, the advantage of not specifying what I should do with the flower beforehand. A mistake on my part, it seems. Very clever.”

She held the potted flower tight and it slowly de-aged as she was instructed to do. “I am allowed to keep this flower here, am I not?” The flower kept de-aging.

“Perfect…” breathed the scientist excitedly. He startled Flora by stuffing a diode into her hand. “Attach this to the subject’s temple.”

Flora blinked in surprise. “Errr, can I ask permission first--?”

“Now!”

Flora looked at the subject, nervous. Her eyes asked for unspoken permission but she still made to pin the diode as slowly as she dared.

"Now grow the plant back to its original state, after the diode is attached!" the scientist ordered.

She sighs, waiting for the diode to be put onto her head. "Just do what these scu- scientists want to do. I can't break promises."

She slowly started to put the flower back to its initial state.

The scientist seemed annoyed. "I'm not getting any good readings from this…" he muttered, furrowing his brow.

Another was silently indicating a similar belief. "There's nothing to read, she's just...speeding it up."

"We need data on a more familiar life form." The first scientist returned his attention to the subject. "Do it on the male žaltys. Reduce his age, just by a little bit."

"What?" exclaimed Flora, wrenching herself away from the subject. "Woah hold on! That wasn't--"

"Silence!" growled the scientist. "You're a subject and you'll do what you're told!"

Flora's eyes dilated and she began hyperventilating. What would that even mean with her disguised form? She resolved to get some things square with Dr. Van Der Merve after this, but for now she held her tongue and looked in fear at everyone, wondering whether to try and escape.

"There might possibly nothing to read as I possibly am part of nature. Some things can't be revealed.", she exclaimed obliviously.

"You are also aware that I do not 'test' my 'powers' on other lifeforms without their consent. I am also very certain that… Actually, I am uncertain if you would end his life just like you did to the other scientist because I refused to de-age him."

She looked towards Flora. "It is for you to decide if you want to look a little younger or not. If not, I won't do anything either, but it might result in your inevitable death to their hands. Listen to your own thoughts and decide according to them, don't be intimidated."

She seemed to notice that Flora, for some reason, was highly uncomfortable all the sudden, despite being freely willing to meet her beforehand, or at least that was still 'part of the plan'. Maybe a plan of the scientists to get her to cooperate, but she might attempt to read his mind in a subconscious way to get a slight idea of what was happening. It seems that most things don't get registered by these diodes, possibly because they are attached to plant matter.

Flora gulped. She knew the scientist would be mad, but she had to protect herself. "I--I don't want to be de-aged. And I think it's a violation of my--"

"You really don't learn do you?" chuckled the scientist. Drawing the same silver-barreled revolver, he pointed it at Flora, who yelped in surprise and raced to cower behind the other žaltys in the room. "Same offer as last time. I'm sure you know what I'm referring to," he cautioned the subject in a low voice.

"What--what is he talking about?" Flora stammered, wide-eyed and quaking like a leaf. The subject's body was not nearly large enough for Flora to fully hide from the gun sights, he could still easily get a killshot off.

"Like I said, he will kill you if I don't de-age you, and I want to ask the person I have to de-age for permission, in this case you."

She idles without having said much.

"Too late," the scientist said simply, pulling the trigger. The bullet slammed into Flora's chest, and she let out a high-pitched scream and went spiraling backwards into the wall. The light in the cell burst and the secondary scientists dashed forward as the room plunged into blackness. Flora was still screaming, and without further ado they dragged her out of the cell and into the hallway.

"Such a shame you have to keep hurting other people like that," chuckled the lead scientist, shining a piercing bright pocketlight in the subject's eyes. "No wonder you don't have many friends."

Flora screams had degenerated into stunned sobbing. The sounds faded as she was carried away from the cell.

"I believe there is a misconception of whose fault it is. Obviously the gun should be guilty of this.", she responded in a taunting voice. "I suppose I will have to reside in darkness for now? Works for me."

She decides to head next to a wall and lean against it.

So the scientist shot her too. It was a leg shot, so nothing lethal, but he needed to remind her who was in charge. "You keep acting like this, we take things to the next level," he cautioned. "If you're not going to cooperate, we'll just have to try other methods to get the information."

She tried hard not to scream, squinting her eyes in pain. Oddly enough, the wound seemed to cease bleeding rather quickly, despite the bullet piercing through her leg. "There is no information to get, you've seen it yourself. Why do you have to be so stubborn?"

"In that case, any reason not to just kill you?" He pointed out, reloading his revolver. "Perhaps your autopsy will prove more enlightening than your personality."

Just then, he stopped. Squinted in surprise at his scanner. "Huh…" a wicked smile played across his face. "Guess what? We got something. Looks like your self-regeneration is something we can read."

The other scientists have returned. "The male žaltys is stabilized," one reported.

"Never mind that, look!" He showed the others. "When she self-heals to an extreme degree, the process is readable!"

The heavier scientist's eyes lit up. "Hmmm." He stepped forward and kicked the subject in the head with his boot, aiming for a broken nose. "Let's see if different parts of the body give off different readings."

In an attempt to retaliate, she tries to cut the heavier scientists with a swift swipe of her vines, the speed and precision of her hopefully causing some damage.

The counter-attack earned her a massive shock from her electrified collar, but the vines rang true. With a strangled cry the heavy scientist felt the crushing weight of a sturdy prehensile tentacle snap his femur. He fell to the ground cursing brilliantly.

"Let's restrict ourselves to ranged attacks!" gasped the assistant. The lead scientist nodded his assent and fired at the subject again, aiming for the spot where the tentacles connect to the shoulder.

As she was screaming in pain, falling onto the ground, she struck the gunslinger with her other vine, as it seemed that his precise shot cut off her other vine. Her eyes seem to be filled with anger, if not madness at this point, towards specific living beings.

She feels like passing out any minute now.

The collar, having been significantly overused, shorted out with a final spark. The lead scientist scrambled backwards in shock as the gun was smacked out of his hands. "Get out of there!" He shouted. "She's unrestrained!"

The assistant quickly sprinted for the exit, but the scientist with the broken leg couldn't walk. "Wait!" he shouted as he saw them sealing the cell door. "Don't leave me in here!"

But it was too late. The lead scientist radioed the control room in a panic and they quickly flooded the subject's cell with nerve gas as a containment last resort.

As the gas was entering the room, she tried her best to stop breathing. For a short time, for this opportunity, she'd done something she wouldn't have thought of doing herself.

WIth slightly sluggish movements, she headed towards the incapacitated scientist and extended her vine, smirking awkwardly. One moment later, this vine stabbed right into the heart of the scientist, blood flowing across the floor.

The last moments were filled with laughter.

Flora's eyes flew open and she sat up with a gasp, then almost as quickly buckled back over clutching her stomach.

Several queasy seconds later and she was able to get her thoughts collected well enough to realize she was in the infirmary. Her chest was wrapped in a heavy bandage, and a light prod sent waves of dull pain thudding through her body. Moaning loudly and quickly returning to lying on her back, Flora closed her eyes and whimpered quietly.

A nurse appeared. "Stay calm!" She urged Flora, dabbing the folf's forehead with a warm washcloth. "Don't move. The recovery process is incomplete."

"It hurts…" Flora moaned. "Why did he…? What did I…?"

"Shhh," consoled the nurse, prodding a red button on the wall. "Can I get you something to eat?"

"Eat?" Flora dizzily shook her head. "I...he shot me. He shot me!" Her unfocuzed gaze locked on Dr. Van Der Merwe, who hurried through the door. "He shot me!"

"It was a rubber bullet," reassured Van Der Merwe. "The others weren't, but we had been planning a trust-building exercise, which unfortunately didn't get that far--"

"--because he shot me!" Flora tried to sit up and wheezed painfully. Her eyes watered as the nurse eased her back down. "I never agreed to that!"

"Don't interrupt me!" Van Der Merwe's eyes flashed, and Flora cowered. "I've had a talk with Cherlins already, he's agreed to give you more of a warning when his plans involve your participation. For better or worse, we think you're the only part of the interrogations that are actually working as intended."

"Doctor...I don't know if I want to be a part of this anymore…" Flora's lip quivered as Van Der Merwe's displeasure showed transparently on his face. "I don't know if what we're doing is right. That girl, she's in a lot of pain--"

"Your instructions are very clear." Van Der Merwe's tone left no room for debate. "Befriend that girl. Don't even worry about convincing her to do anything, just gain her trust. You've already agreed, there is no ducking out."

Flora panted painfully, pupils dilated with anxiety. Her mind whirled as she tried to come up with a way to voice her concerns.

"We're taking the meetings a different direction," Van Der Merwe continued. "They will now occur at night, and you will be alone. Use the story that you've started sneaking out at night to visit her."

Flora cocked her head. "Why...?"

"The other personnel no longer feel safe in the same room as her after last night's incident." Van Der Merwe nodded to the nurse, who dimmed the lights and unwrapped the folf's bandage, causing her to wince. "Don't worry; we'll be watching you via camera. If anything goes wrong, we'll send guards in to retrieve you."

Flora was suddenly more preoccupied with staring at the nasty black and purple bruise covering almost her entire right breast. She twitched and gritted her teeth as the nurse applied a stinging salve.

"The physicians say you should be fully recovered in a few days." Van Der Merwe's glasses were his brightest physical feature visible in the low light. "You'll go then. You should be aware by now of the acceptable length of a visit. Ensure you always leave before your time runs out."

The subject received no contact for three days. No food, no visitors. The cell was self-cleaning, so the blood stains and most signs of violence disappeared in time. The fleshy parts of the scientist's body were slowly purged by the nanobiotic cleaning agents, but his skeleton would remain in the corner.

On the night of the fourth night, žaltys Flora shivered as a guard punched a keycode into the wall and granted her access to the cell block. Looking nervously behind her at the personnel as she left them behind, Flora tiptoed timidly into the inner recesses of the prison alone.

The subjects all seemed a lot scarier when she was alone at night. The muttering one started muttering at her instead of just in general. The gecko paused from reflecting on his inner thoughts to meet her dead in the eyes and not break eye contact until she'd gratefully turned a corner.

Cell L1F3 loomed, its tinted windows as opaque as they'd always been, but this time they seemed way more foreboding. Standing before it nervously, Flora felt her heart thudding in her chest. Her brain was screaming at her to run, but she couldn't fathom the punishment Van Der Merwe would have for her if she'd disobeyed orders. Gulping painfully due to how dry her throat was, Flora turned the clasp and let herself into the cell.

As Flora enters the room, she steps right into a bit of mud and dirt, evenly distributed amongst the entrance, it's walls and even the ceiling of the entrance door.

The subject could be seen doing something to the skeleton of the dead scientist: It seemed as part of it was somewhat intact, yet slightly muddy in appearance, similar to the doorstep, whereas some parts were completely missing. In fact, very specific parts of the walls seem to be covered in dirt of unknown origin, suggesting that it was formerly part of the decomposed body of the scientist.

It looks like as if the subject had a sixth sense of sorts, knowing where gas or similar could enter the room as well as where cameras could be, but only some cameras have been covered in this mysterious dirt so far.

“A visitor?”, she mumbles in a strange tone, as if both happy, yet intimidated as well as crazed. She looks at the doorway, noticing Flora. “Oh, it’s you, Foley. Are you alright from that shot to your chest?”, she fakes the emotion of concern, knowing that Flora wanted to say something along the lines of ‘not being part of something’, likely a plan, four days prior.

“Oh my god, what happened in here?” stammered Flora in shock, looking in horror at the state of the cell.

After staring at the skeleton for almost fifteen seconds trying to decide whether to comment or not, she gulped and answered the question instead. “I...uh...have been recovering in sickbay. That’s actually why I was able to visit tonight...didn’t have to check into my room so I could just sneak right over here.”

She gave a shaky smile and took a small bagged lunch out of her back pocket. “Didn’t want them confiscating this again...here, I thought you might be hungry.”

“Oh? Much appreciated…”, she took some of the lunch out, but instead of eating it, she decided to take it apart bit by bit and pour it over various locations covered in dirt, as well as onto the now-definitely-muddy skeleton, which quickly turned into a heap of, well, dirt.

She decided to take some of this heap of dirt and put it into a few more places, circling a few spots where the center would be occupied by hidden cameras in order to be not be too suspicious of her plan. “You see, if I would make stuff grow around here, I could feed myself pretty well. By the way…”, she approached Flora slowly with a smirk on her face, “...do you… wish for something special~?”

An attempt to flirt in order to cover her own plans, and it’s been just a minute, Flora definitely will stay for a bit longer. Her faked emotions seem very believable.

“I don’t know if management will be okay with this...” Flora looked at the makeshift garden with worry. “They’re kinda pissed at you upstairs. I think you might be in more danger than you realize.”

She stepped forward gingerly. “I’m glad to see you’re not starving...is there anything else I can get you? You don’t look...exactly well.” There was a worrying change in the subject’s demeanor. Flora in her hyper-nervous state couldn’t place what, but she felt like the subject saw her as less of a living being than the previous times they met.

“Oh, there’s just a single question I’d like to ask.” She comes closer to Flora, whispering into her ear: “Why are you lying?”

All the sudden, vines spread out from all across the room, from all the spots weirdly marked by dirt. The door was completely overgrown, lots of hidden cameras and vents were covered by thick plant life, some vines even started to root Flora on the spot.

“And to think I actually believed what you’ve told me in the beginning, how oblivious I was”, she monologues in an aggressive tone. She wrapped her own vines tight around Flora’s arms and chest, making it hard to move for her. “I don’t specifically recall who you are, yet I know that whatever psychonic power you’ve told me about is, in fact, not your actual ability. What is your real name, my child? What is this plan of yours? Why are you cooperating with people that are deceiving me?”

The vines from the ground seemed to slowly start covering Flora’s whole lower body. “As nobody can see nor hear us, I would like to suggest an offer, my child. Cooperate with me instead of those scientific bastards and we will see what happens, maybe I’d even extend your lifespan past normal measures. Even if you choose not to, it wouldn’t matter to me. Go outside, look at the nearby wildlife, nature as a whole; It starts to decay without my presence. I’ve told the scientists already, and I feel like you should know it too, the world is dying without my presence. They can keep me here, even kill me if they like, in at least a year's’ time, all plant life will surely be gone, give it another, and every being might have met their demise. This would be the time for a reincarnation, like a phoenix rises from ashes. A new beginning, if you want to force it that way.”

She seems to scare Flora with her crazed voice. “I am Life, blooming through this world; I am Destruction, remnants of a whole.”

Flora’s eyes went wide and she struggled fruitlessly as the vines roped her to her spot. Losing her balance, she found that the vines were strong enough to prevent her from falling over, and held up her up for the žaltys to view of her own accord.

“They--they can still see us you know!” exclaimed Flora nervously. “There are still cameras!” She looked around wildly. She didn’t see any cameras...did the subject destroy them? Is she really all alone right now? Her mind gripped with panic, she began frantically debating her options. At the moment, her only real choices were to stick with the male žaltys story or admit the truth… “You know i’m just a test subject, like you right?” she stammered. “I’m just doing what I was told. You know what they do to subjects who don’t do what they’re told!”

“You don’t seem to be aware of the fact that it doesn’t matter, do you? If I am kept here or die here, that is irrelevant, I need to get back out, Foley, or should I say, Flora?”

The vines enveloped Flora even tighter, possibly hurting her a bit. The female Zaltys seemed to be pissed at her.

“That hurts, stop!” she pleaded. The vines dug into her flesh, leaving her squealing and wriggling in pain. “Look, okay, I’ll tell you the truth!” She stammered. “You’re right, my name is Flora. I’m a changeling! They wanted...they thought you’d be more open to cooperating if you made a friend who was your own species! That’s why they brought me in.”

Tears welled in her eyes. “If you’re going to kill me, please let me look like myself when I die. I can only hold this body for about fifteen more minutes...if you’re hoping to see who I really am, you’ll get to soon enough.”

“Everything dies eventually, I can wait a century for liars like you to die, there is no rush.”

She loosened the vines a little, but kept her tight in them. More comfortably than before, if that is even possible.

“Just tell your scientist friends that they won’t be able to get any ‘information’ off me. It’s impossible, and if they really want I can just off myself as well, it won’t take long until everything in this world dies either.”

“You’ve got a pretty weird opinion of death for someone who calls themselves Life!” Flora cried, wincing as the loosening of the vines revealed nasty red welts where they once were. “What would be so wrong with helping them! Apparently they’ve learned a lot about how the body creates cells from analyzing me, just imagine what they could discover by analyzing you!”

She stopped struggling and took a deep breath as it became clearer that she wasn’t about to die. “We’ve all got friends who’ve died. Especially you, if you’re really centuries old. This could be your chance to save future people from that heartache.”

“How am I supposed to save anyone if I am stuck here? Like I mentioned, without my presence, nature decays. I would be saving everyone, even people like your ‘friends’, if I were just to be let free. Some things shouldn’t be discovered, some things can’t be discovered. I might let you have some fun though.”

Suddenly, a few more vines were growing up, around Flora’s chest. “I will just wait until you transform back to your normal form.”

Already the fur was beginning to grow back on her arms and she felt her skeleton reconstructing itself into its normal form. She realized with a flash of panic that the jumpsuit she’s wearing was built for the spindly body of a žaltys.

“Ummm, this is kinda awkward, but I need to take this off!” She exclaimed urgently, blushing fiercely and tugging at her jumpsuit. The vines acquiesced, ripping it from both sides and leaving her fully exposed yet still restrained, the shredded remains of her jumpsuit fluttering to the floor beneath her.

In a few minutes, she was left shivering in her normal form; a pink-furred twenty-something dickgirl folf. “Now I think you can see why they didn’t want me to meet you in my normal form...” she whimpered, looking nervously at the being standing over her.

“Does it really matter how you look like, my child?”, she commented in a monotone way. “Do they really think your appearance matters if I’d like you or not?”

The vines around her breast started piercing into her breasts, precisely, yet not too deep to not kill her by piercing her heart. It seems like they started growing a couple of sizes all the sudden, as if something was starting to build up in there.

The vines left her breasts again, blood spilling briefly across the floor as suddenly the wound was ‘patched’ by two strange looking flowers growing out of her nipples. “Do you mind to tell them to let me out? That would be veeeeery nice.”

Life seems to be talking in strange manners, as if lost sanity was not enough.

"What are you doing?" whimpered Flora, staring in horror as her breasts expanded and her nipples were covered with literal flora. "My breasts...you can do that?"

She tried to free her hands so she could fondle herself in awe. "How did you do this?" she breathed in awe.

"You seem to really feel in awe, don't you?", Life mentioned, continuing the flow of the word 'awe'.

The vines loosened to let Flora move her hands more freely, but still keeping her in place. A vine seemed to become thinner and grow some leaves on it, rather subtle.

Flora dropped to her knees and fondled her new flowery nipples. Her breasts, once decently-small B-cups, had grown by at least two sizes. She shuddered with pleasure. "Ohhhh," she moaned in surprise. "They're so feminine...and they've got flowers..." she looked up at Life with an expression of longing. "I'm a beautiful flower..."

"You're only partially one. You seem to be unaware of the fact that decaying nature means you will decay at a faster rate, right? And bigger breasts do not imply feminine appearance."

The sneaky, thinner vine with leaves started to sneak up on Flora's chest. "For now, sleep tight, my child."

The vines suddenly got rather tight again, some even around her head to keep it in place. The rather small, strange vine suddenly entered into her mouth, seemingly deep into her throat, the leaves scratching the insides in a not so pleasant way. Flora seemed to fall asleep in an instant with a dull pain in her throat and insides in general.

Flora's eyes fluttered and she dropped to all fours. She was clearly still suffering from sexual excitement, but as the leaves had their soporific effect she slowly collapsed on the ground and slipped unconscious.

Flashes of light...Flora's next conscious thoughts were non sequiturs of color and sound. Groaning, she tried to sit up and found herself restrained. The world gradually reasserted itself.

She was in the infirmary again. This time nurses were present, and when they recognized her they quickly hit the button to summon Dr. Van Der Merwe.

"Where is...?" Flora's words slurred; she wondered if she'd been drugged. She tried to sit up. "I...feel funny."

"Flora!" Van Der Merwe came rushing into the infirmary. "Nurse, check her vitals!"

"Doctor, how did I get here?" Flora asked, dazed as the nurse shot her in the eye with a bright penlight.

“We found you unconscious outside the cell when we came to check on you,” the doctor replied, taking a stethoscope and checking her heartbeat. “You were suffering from burns and some unusual swellings, but they seem to have healed for the most part.”

Thanks to the doctor pulling the blanket away, Flora noticed her breasts had returned to their normal state. “Doctor, where’s Life?” she asked.

“Hmmm?” he muttered, focusing on his readings. “Who?”

“The subject!” she clarified urgently. “The one I was talking to! Were you all really not watching what happened in there?”

“Oh yes, her. Don’t worry about her.” The doctor wrote down his notes. “We’re decided on her anyway. She’s a non-issue.”

Flora felt a trickle of apprehension. “What do you mean ‘we’ve decided on her’?”

“As I said, it’s no longer relevant. You did everything we asked, Flora, and thank you for your cooperation.” Van Der Merwe made to go. “Your role in this project is finished. The funds will be delivered to your account on your next payday.”

“Doctor, I…” she hesitated. “I’d be willing to visit her again, if there’s any chance it would help--”

That night, Flora tiptoed out of the infirmary and made her ways to the cellblock. There was a guard present, but after she waited for about thirty minutes he left to take a short bathroom break. Quickly punching in the code she’d watched him use before, she slipped the door shut behind her and made her way to Cell L1F3.

She was both relieved and concerned to see an absence of additional security on the door. Turning the latch, she quickly entered the cell, almost dreading what she might see.

The cell seemed to be covered with earth everywhere, grass on the ground, an unknown illuminated source of light that is not the lights on the ceiling as well as a small tree seem to be all present. As Flora tried to enter the room, almost two dozen vines quickly stroke to her direction, before stopping an inch in front of her.

“Oh, it is you, my child”, she commented. “It seems like they have given up, did they not? When am I allowed to leave freely?”

“Life, we have a problem!” Flora exclaimed. “They’re abandoning their study of you, and they told me I don’t have to meet with you any more, and I think they’re going to kill you!”

She stopped when the vines blocked her path, but tried to push forward so she could see the subject's face. "I don't have any hard evidence, but I've been here a long time, and all the signs are adding up…" She tugged at her hospital tunic. "I just had to warn you."

"Oh, so they do want to kill me after all this time? And you didn't have to warn me, I told you already that it does not matter if I die or not.", she commented calmly. "Then again, I would really like to kill some beings, you know, how nature intends to lead the way for almost every living creature. Survival of the fittest and all that. Do you have any plans?"

She kept sitting on what seems to be a little pile of leaves.

"But I don't want you to die!" Flora ran forward and wrapped her arms around the subject. "I think you're right…" she muttered tearfully. "You're special. You need to live."

She gulped. "I do have an idea for busting you out. But it depends on how much you can regenerate. Because I could never get you out of here...but I could easily smuggle a pile of dust…"

"Just because I mentioned that I could rise like a phoenix doesn't imply that I can literally do that!", she responded. "You seem… much more open as of late as well. I am certain we can both just walk out, I mean, how did you manage to get here so silently anyway? Although… I might need to do something so the place looks… right in a specific way, if you get what I mean."

The blooming nature around the cell suddenly started to darken in color, decaying at an accelerated rate. "Nature comes and goes at will, they might think I have just ended myself, I suppose. You lead the way."

"It's not that simple…" Flora looked at the hallway. "The hallways have sensors that trigger the alarm if the prisoners attempt to leave. Normally there are cameras and sensors in the cells too, but whatever you did has blocked the ones in this cell. Van Der Merwe said they couldn't see anything that happened when we were both in here."

Flora fidgeted. "That's why I was seeing if I could kill you. Because unless you're a corpse the alarm will sound if you try to leave. Unless you can rewrite your DNA or something…"

The green parts of Life's skin suddenly started to turn blue. "Camouflage should be rather easy around here", she said as she straight-up left the room.

"That's not what I meant!" exclaimed Flora as the subject broached the perimeter. "Okay, we need to move faster now!" Grabbing the subject's arm, she made to sprint for the exit.

"I guess." Both beings sprinted as fast as they could towards wherever Flora was leading the both of them to.

"You seem to know where to go around here. What's the quickest way outside to nature?", Life asked as they both were quick-footed. "You are aware that you might be the main suspect of all this, right?"

"I can't just stand aside and let them kill you…" Flora's gaze clouded. She was aware of the risk she was putting herself under, but it was the right thing to do.

They reached the door. "There's an armed guard on the other side of this." Flora gripped the handle and prepared to fling it open. "Can you incapacitate him before he radios anyone?"

"Definitely." As Flora opened the door, the guard alarmed about the noise, Life quickly disarmed him by wrapping her own vines around his body, one focussing around his neck to stop him from breathing, assisting in incapacitating him, but not killing him. She remains next to him for a bit. "Do you wish me to end all of his life functions?", she asks Flora in a somehow serious matter, as if it were up to Flora to decide.

"Nonononono just knock him out!" she exclaimed quickly. Grabbing his radio, she listened and frowned at the complete lack of chatter. "Hmmm...maybe you did prevent the alarm. This way."

Fishing a taser off the guard, she led the way to the security room. She opened the door to find the guard in question watching a row of rapidly switching cameras. The system forced the guard to click through a series of cameras to periodically check every room in the lab, which is why they'd made it this far without him noticing. When the guard started to swivel around to see who it was, Flora blasted him unconscious with the taser.

She ran to the cameras and checked the base status. "Wow..." she muttered, "we're clear. Let's just leave through the courtyard."

Ten minutes later they were standing outside Sartonic, the bustling city outskirts to their left, an arid desert to their right.

"So...this is it then." Flora shivered in the late night breeze. "I guess you finally get to leave."

"It's been so long…", Life muttered, oddly enough at a desert. "I know my place around here so well, untouched nature, not being tested on by anything scientific…"

It looks as if she was crying happily. "I… am finally back home…" She briefly forgot about Flora being next to her. "Oh, I forgot, my promise… What do you wish to do now? I'm willing to offer anything for you, well, most things…"

Flora looked back at Sartonic Labs, sitting quietly in the slowly-brightening night sky. Morning was coming. Beyond that, she saw the city she'd spent so many days in. Shops she enjoyed. Restaurants that gave her good and bad memories.

She thought about the fellow experiments she'd befriended, the good and the bad times. She thought about her roommates, especially the one who had lied about being on birth control and was trying to pressure her into becoming a father. She thought about what was going to happen to her if Sartonic managed to piece together that she'd let Life escape.

Slowly, she grabbed the hem of her hospital tunic and pulled it over her head, letting it settle to the ground in the shadows of the lab. "Take me with you," she said, voice trembling but firm. "I want to be closer to nature. I don't want to be trapped here any more."

Life hugged Flora all the sudden. “There’s one thing I’d have to do though.”

Flora returned the hug. Her tears dripped onto Life’s chest. “What is it?” she asked.

She hugged her rather tight all the sudden, lips connecting for a kiss. Her forked tongue seemed to cause Flora a big surprise, yet alone a kiss from this mystical being filling her with a foreign energy, or at least it feeled like that.

A passionate kiss for sure, she closed her eyes for it, but more so to concentrate. “That is all, my child. Longevity and nature sure go hand in hand.”, is all she said.

Flora returned the kiss, closing her eyes and arching her back as she pressed her body into Life’s smooth skin. She was panting heavily when the kiss broke. “It’s almost morning,” she noted breathlessly. The early rays of the sun were beginning to cast their gleam over the horizon, and she was looking pinker every second. “We need to get some distance between us and civilization…”

Life held her hand. “I’m certain we can do that in no time, my child.” Both started to head towards the rising sun, seemingly carefree about everything, trying to forget what happened back there in Sartonic.

“I’m also very certain that you’ll enjoy nature a lot!”, she mentioned in a cheerful voice, quite unexpected.

“It’s going to be weird…” admitted Flora, looking at the vast desert expanse greeting them. She wasn’t even sure how they planned to find food, water and shelter in such a wasteland. “I’ve always been a city girl. It may be difficult for me to adjust at first.” She smiled at the žaltys. “But I’m sure you’ll be able to help.”

“I’m very sure that you’ll be able to adjust just fine, you’ll see, Flora. Your name even suggests nature, after all!”, she giggled. Both kept heading towards the sun.

So the two crossed the horizons, leaving their memories of Sartonic behind them and beginning their new lives as masters of their own destiny

Title: After the Storm
Post by: Pterano on March 26, 2019, 06:31:30 PM

((RP between Aabicus and myself!))

It's a godawful small affair...

As the strains of the song drifted through the beach front bar, Tony Stracci sat at the countertop, nursing a Seabreeze. The drink wouldn't be enough to knock him on his ass, but if he had a few more...

He wasn't planning on having a few more.

But the film is a saddening bore, for she's lived it ten times or more...

Looking out to the crashing waves on the ocean, the white sandy beach stretched endlessly before him in either direction, looking like a never-ending ribbon as it twisted its way along the coast. Somewhere in the parking lot, one of his vintage cars was parked, drawing a small crowd that snapped photos of it and stood next to it for selfies and Instagram posts and whatever. This brought a slight smirk to the ferret's features as he watched the eager onlookers.

Tapping his claws against his sweating glass, he took another swig, then pulled out his phone.

It's on America's tortured brow
Mickey Mouse has grown up a cow...

Tapping his claws over the screen, he began texting Emilena Echo. He asked her to meet him here, having a few things to discuss in the aftermath of their saving the world, defeating Kalis, and becoming heroes. His flat cap was pulled a bit lower over his forehead, his vest, shirt, pants and shoes completing the look.

It's about to be writ again as I ask her to focus on...
Sailors fighting in the dance hall
Oh man, look at those cavemen go
It's the freakiest show
Take a look at the lawman beating up the wrong guy
Oh man! Wonder if he'll ever know...
He's in the bestselling show!

As Tony listened to the strains of the song, he closed his eyes, enjoying the ocean breeze that came in from the relatively open air bar, the building lacking walls, and really only having a roof and floor. Sometimes... life was worth it...

"..the thing about situations like that, Henri, is that you don't have time to think." Emilena forced the smile her public relations coach assured was making her more likable. "You just react, and do everything you can to stay alive. I only did what anyone would have done to survive."

"Now, you may say that, Emilena..." the talk show host laughed even though Emilena didn't find anything funny about their conversation, "...but you were practically the sole survivor. In fact, you're the only living individual confirmed to have been in the room when Vergil Speicher ended Rex's reign of terror and saved the planet."

"Well, wait, that's not true, there's Mr. Stracci and...oh." Emilena trailed off, realizing the interviewer was baiting her into revealing more about that climactic final battle. "You know I'm not allowed to talk about any of that, right?" she sighed.

"Of course, of course," Henri brushed off the notion with another fake laugh. "'Confidential incidents.' You've mentioned that you fully endorse the official story, and who are we to question the government?" The studio audience laughed as he turned to them expectedly for support. "I mean, when have they ever lied to us, right?"

"You calling me a liar?" Emilena growled, suddenly balling her fists. The laughter quickly died and the room grew awkwardly silent. She took a deep breath, closed her eyes and counted down until her blood cooled. "Sorry. It's just that...a lot of people died during those confidential incidents. People I was very close to." She opened her eyes to stop the faces flashing across her vision. "Some died in front of me. Some we found the body afterward. And the remainder have gone completely missing. I know these are celebratory times for all you, but for me it involved losing almost everyone I've ever known. So, if you'd kindly stick to the topics we agreed upon when scheduling this interview..."

"Okay, okay," the host laughed again. "Pinkie promise. And make no mistake, we are all incredibly thankful for your sacrifices. But you gotta admit," his eyes glinted jokingly, "it helps at least a little to become filthy rich. I know I'd be buying another solid gold humvee if I were in your shoes!"

Emilena sighed and turned the television off as her on-screen counterpart decked the talk show host across the face. She was in her umpteenth six-star hotel; each was more expensive than everywhere she'd ever lived combined, but her bank account had so many digits she didn't see a reason to bother buying a permanent place to live. In fact, she felt more comfortable knowing that nobody could ever pin down her location. Not to mention, the one time she'd tried buying her own building she'd spent the whole night jumping at every little rustle of wind or creak in the woodwork. Even here, her ears twitched and she winced when anyone walked past her hotel room door. Get a grip, Emilena... she exhaled, rising up from her form-fitted massage couch and wandering to the window.

The setting sun cast vibrant rays over her hotel room, bathing her pale fur and making her look almost as orange as she'd been in her youth. Emilena knew stress could cause premature aging, but even she hadn't thought it was possible for a muzzle to turn grey before 25. Hell, for all she knew it was the Growth Acceleration procedure finally catching up to her. Whatever. She'd never particularly feared her own death, and it seemed even less of an issue now that everyone she'd ever known had already passed to the other side.

She glanced at the ornate desk, the main piece of furniture that had sold her on this room. She'd always wanted a big fancy desk, from her first day as a junior police officer in the long-destroyed city of Lanthae, but now she had nothing to do with it. No cases...no job...no need to even balance her expenses. No reason to live.

Thock. Someone lightly rapped against her hotel room door, causing her to grab a letter-opener off the couchside cabinet and leap to a defensive angle before her brain caught up with her reflexes. "Who...who is it?" she asked.

"Message for you, Ms. Echo," a stuffy British voice informed, and a laminated envelope slipped under the door. Emilena had all her calls cleared through the front desk, and the list of approved numbers was incredibly short. Waiting until the footsteps had faded down the hallway, Emilena inched forward and sliced open the note to read that Tony Stracci was inviting her to drink at a local bar.

She couldn't help but smile. I guess not everyone's dead and gone. Seeing a friendly face might stave off the melancholy thoughts for at least a while.

Fifteen minutes later, she walked through the back door of the bar, bundled up with the same sort of heavy coat and sunglasses getup she used to give members of witness protection programs. "Please keep the press out," she said under her voice to the bartender, slipping $500 on the counter, "and get me a Blue Cherry with ice."

She finally relaxed once she was next to Tony at the bar. "You seem to be taking to the celebrity life well," she teased, glancing at the crowds admiring his car. Thankfully, they hadn't noticed her yet. "It's nice to see you again."

As a familiar vulpine entered the bar from the back door (of which Tony had a good view of), the ferret smiled. He didn't wave her over though, and let her find him herself, as it was clear she was trying to avoid attention. "Heh, well... at least I'm a fairly nondescript ferret... they don't tend to notice me too often. I threw them off by dressing in normal clothes during all my televised interviews." he chuckled. "And as for my car..." he hooked a thumb behind him to it. "It was fortunately fairly quiet when I pulled in, and now I think it's just drawing crowds on the fact it's a rarity these days, and all those beachgoers coming up from the beach are taking note." he chuckled again.

"I don't mind though... they're welcome to those photos. How are you, Emilena?" he asked softly, offering her his paw under the bar. "It's good to see you again."

Title: Re: After the Storm
Post by: aabicus (LettuceBacon&Tomato) on March 27, 2019, 11:48:27 AM

"You need to teach me how to do televised interviews," Emilena groaned. "I haven't managed to get through one without making an ass of myself." She regarded her friend, the only link to a time that otherwise seemed erased by the modern world. "You look completely like I remember...I can't fathom how you do it." She winced when she sat down in her seat; her lifetime of various injuries were finally catching up to her. "Kafke Dermanetics offered me a full-body reconstructive process. All scars removed, muscles and skin tightened, these missing chunks in my ear and tail could be regrown...but I don't know. You look at their showcase customers and there's something...uncanny about how perfect they look." She shuddered.

The bartender handed her a cup of light blue nonalcoholic beer, and she made sure to only take baby sips. The last thing she wanted was to start hiccupping uncontrollably. "So that's the big decision in my future. Not much else to do, or worry about when you're rich and famous." She handed over her credit card for the tab and glanced back at Tony. "What about you? Doing anything to keep yourself busy, or just enjoying the ride?"

"Hah well... they're harder than they look, for sure. I just tried to throw off everyone by dressing differently... not hinting that I dress from a bygone era." he shook his head, taking another sip. "Oh, me? Eh... well between those assholes doing something to rebuild my body and dropping me in that Duesenberg to now... eh... I've had some treatments here and there... the worst of it was covered when I was "revived" after my fall off the Death Road." he informed her. "I still have no idea what they did to me." he confessed. "Something along the lines of... what you stated. Reconstruction. Revival... I don't know." he shrugged. "I got an extremely rare car out of it, so I can't complain too much." he grinned. "I still keep some scars though... the worst and what remained from our final battle I had removed though... but yeah under my clothes... there's some stuff there." he told her softly.

"I am..." he paused, looking out to the ocean once more. "Enjoying life, I guess you could say. I take my cars out on nice days, just to drive, you know? Head down the coastal areas, or just through some of the parks. It helps me think and well... relax. Other times I just go swimming or... whatever. I try to keep a low profile and enjoy my life for what it's worth... as I know it very easily could've gone the other way... and I'm damn lucky to be alive." he told her, looking right at her. "So yeah... I don't waste it." he nodded. "I savor every moment I have, if I can."

nearby to where Emilena and Tony were chatting, Zula the lioness was nursing a soda at the bar while watching a tv that sat in the corner. she was very fetching, with bright green eyes, dark red lips, and golden hoop earrings in her ears. She wore the uniform of a tennis instructor, 3 gold stars set above a pair of blue rackets set against a bright red background. "Corona Tennis Club ' was spelled out in big letters on the back of her uniform along with ' Coach Zula"on the front . currently she was watching a juniors tennis match, one of the players was a student she taught at the tennis club.

" come on Rocky, this kid has a weak forehand! Go after it! " she said softly as she watched the match, so far Rocky was up 6-4, 3-1, he simply needed to win this set to win the match. The screen next to the tennis match showed pictures of what little remained on Lanthae. Zula counted her blessing every day that she had been out of the city when it had been attacked. so many had been wiped out of existence, to the point where there wasnt even scraps of bone to recover..' Zula sighed as she sipped at her soda. Sure the tennis gig was great and all and the kids were eager to learn.. but being one of a few hundred folks to survive from Lanthae..outs of millions.. well the docs did say ' survivor's guilt' was a real thing...

"Good to hear reconstruction worked for you...I'll probably swallow my pride and do it." Emilena coughed, already feeling a bit tipsy. The bartender knowingly passed her a glass of water to wash her drink down.

She found herself picking at one of her larger scars; a diagonal gash that traveled along her right wrist and up her arm to end somewhere on her chest. It would have been a fatal wound if Lily hadn't sacrificed herself to heal it. "But on the other hand, I can't help but feel I've cheated nature enough already. I signed up for premature aging when I enrolled in the Accelerated Growth Program, you know? And I earned these injuries, through my actions and choices. It only seems fair I suffer the consequences for once. Especially since society has miraculously let me off the hook for all the laws I broke." She sipped her Blue Cherry again. "I mean, shouldn't this be enough? It's like you said...we both really should be dead. Everyone keeps congratulating and honoring us, as if we did something right to survive, but they don't get it. It was pure chance."

She downed the whole glass of water to keep her hand from shaking. "I'm sorry, my therapist keeps saying not to talk like that. This is where my mind goes when I have nothing to do. I didn't grow up with money like you did, Tony," she admitted. "I'm not sure I'm cut out to have so much of it that my only job is to exist."

As Tony heard Emilena out, he was starting to grow concerned at the direction her conversation was taking. She seemed... aimless... and masochistic if anything. As if she felt she didn't deserve any of it, and deserved punishment. Yes they'd certainly broken laws in multiple countries, but doing one huge courageous act apparently changed all that. He could certainly understand where she was coming from though. "Emilena... I don't know if... you really deserve any of that. I mean... have you figured on just taking a job and not worrying about the cash?" he asked, placing two claws on his forehead as he used them to rest his head against.

"You could still live a normal life, you just.. wouldn't be working to survive. That's feasible, right?" he inquired. "I mean I could always put in a call with the local police force if you wanted... I myself haven't really ever pursued that route but sometimes I've thought about it. And I mean... being in the Purifiers I absolutely had to work to earn my way. I just... I don't like the fatalism... you don't deserve it... you really don't. You have purpose... and meaning. Plus... you're a good friend; one I really respect. I hate to see my friends beating themselves up like this. Yes a lot of it was chance... but some of it was skill and things we did too. I just... is there anything I can do to try and elevate your mood?" he asked, not having gotten to the reason he'd called her out here yet... but he did truly hate seeing her in this state. He moved his paw down to take a another swig from his drink.

"You're right," Emilena agreed with a hiccup, pushing her glass away with alarm. "I should maybe look into getting a job. There's no way I could go back to private investigating, but I'm sure there's a police force out there with a cushy desk job." She didn't sound super thrilled at the prospect, though.

"And I'm really glad you consider me a friend," she added. "Things got pretty rough between us for a while there. That tumble you took in Bolivia was by my gang's hand, and I later keyed your car in retaliation. It's honestly kinda weird the history books are going to list me as a member of Vergil's crew, I was a hostile complication at best for most of it." She downed another glass of water. "But, if you're putting all that behind you, I certainly won't complain."

zula watched the last of rocky's matcgh as rocky finished off his opponent with a blistering ace out wide. good work Rockuy! she cheered as she finished her soda.. as she put down a couple creds for her soida ' keep the change she said to the bartender. she got her coat off the next stool and prepard at head out when she noticed what looked like a familiar face sitting a few chairs down. ' Tony? tony Stracci? she spoke coming up to where tony was seated ' hi. i'm Zula, from the lab in Lanthae, we did some repair work on your car, remember? it was a fine example of mid 1930s car making, when the companies actually took pride in their work..and every car made was its own work of art."

"Heh... doesn't have to be a cushy desk job... field work suits you better... always has." the ferret responded, offering her a smirk and raising his glass a bit before taking a swig. "And uh, heh... the car was easily fixable, and I may have..." he looked up, smiling in a knowing way as he rolled his eyes. "Exacted justice on a few of your group I considered particularly obnoxious." he chuckled. "Not killed... well... one may have met with an unfortunate accident. The other, eh... let's just say he's sucking his meal through straws the rest of his life." he smirked. "So yeah... it's behind us. Bygones will be bygones." he concluded. "I actually called you out here because I was curious if..."

But he was interrupted by a liones who suddenly spoke to him, and he turned, surprised he'd been recognized, but she seemed vaguely familiar. "Oh? You... know me?" he asked slowly. He narrowed his eyes, and then recognition flashed within them. "Oh... oh yes I think so! You did some work on my... Cord I think it was." he nodded, waving a finger at her. "Yes, yes... I remember now. It's still one of my favorite cars." he flashed a grin. "I'm just here enjoying a drink with a friend. It's good to see you made it out of Lanthae." he gave her a nod, downing the rest of his drink. "Yes... they certainly were works of art back then... handmade in a lot of cases." he nodded sagely, a far off look coming into his eyes.

"Straws, huh? And I thought I was abusing my good fortune..." Emilena rolled her eyes, pushing her glass away so the bartender didn't refill it. She didn't particularly care about any of her gang connections except the core four, and far as she knew they all died in the assault on Kalis' flagship so whoever Tony cabbaged seemed an acceptable cost of retribution.

Her ears perked up when she heard he had a proposition, but then a stranger interrupted so she flipped her collar up and slinked down in her seat. She'll have to remind him after he'd dealt with his fans. Though Emilena ended up glancing over despite herself when the newcomer mentioned she was from Lanthae. There were so few survivors of that city, it was surprising to run into one after all this time. She gave Zula a polite nod, more acknowledgment than she'd originally planned on giving.

I'm sorry to interrupt your talking with a friend' Zula said with a small smile ' She turned to Emilena ' Hi. I'm Zula. I did some work for Tony back in lanthae.. which feels like a lifetime ago. do you guys mind if i sit down with you for a bit?" she asked " its just that theres so few survivors from Lanthae these days that i try and talk to as many as i can. No offense intended, of course. If you'd prefer i not sit down, thats fine." Zula said.

Title: Re: After the Storm
Post by: Pterano on April 07, 2019, 05:59:57 PM

Tony smirked to Emilena's response, though Zula continued, this time introducing herself to Emilena, and asking if she could sit with them. Sighing a little, Tony motioned to the stool behind Emilena. "Sure..." he said. So much for me making a private offer... he thought, knowing he had to be more cautious from here on out.

Meanwhile, as the pair was talking to Zula, a black car had pulled up into the parking lot, having coasted to a stop smoothly with the customary whoosh of a digital vehicle. As the door opened upwards like the wing of a bird, a very interesting creature stepped out into the bright sun. He was like a cross between a velociraptor and a dog, his upper body in particular resembling a dog's, though with articulate arms and hands. The lower body sported raptor legs with long toe claws protruding upwards. He was sporting a very unique patterned black and red fur combination, looking suave and well cut. His clothing was sharp, almost looking like a tux, but not quite as dressy and expensive as one. But he knew that his pursuers were close... and he had to find a way to ditch this thing safely... in a way that... killing him wouldn't necessarily allow them to retrieve it.

Glancing to the beachfront bar, he smirked as he saw some patrons inside. Perfect! A living host would do best... and prevent the host from being killed as well..

Heading across the lot, he entered the bar, pulling out a jet injector, and walking up quickly behind Tony right as Zula was taking a seat; pressing the jet injector flush against Tony's skin, he pulled the trigger, injecting the ferret as he slapped his neck and turned around, giving out an "Ow!" in surprise. "What the fuck, dude?" the mustelid asked, in absolute shock at what had just occurred.

"You'll be fine." the creature responded in a low British accent. "Damn!" he said suddenly, dropping the now empty injector and pulling out an H&K USP and flipping off the safety as he saw two black SUVs screeching to a halt just outside the bar's parking lot on the street. "You might want to get back." he warned them, keeping the pistol down for the moment so as to avoid alarming anyone.

Emilena should have been more prepared for the situation to suddenly get dangerous; she'd been so focused on Zula's unthreatening intrusion that she didn't realize they were being accosted until Tony was already injected. Swiping a table knife from the counter, she swiveled her barstool around and slashed at the newcomer's neck, but he was more than prepared for the attack and nimbly dodged without even changing position. "Urgh!" she grunted when she lost her balance and crashed to the floor.

Her vision was spinning as she tried to get her bearings. God, I'm getting old... she admitted to herself, after what felt like an agonizingly long time before she could hoist herself to her knees. But the silver lining was that she'd had time to realize that Tony wasn't behaving like he was being attacked. "Tony do you know this guy?" she wheezed, holding her knife more defensively as the crowds outside scattered in a panic from the SUVs' reckless arrival. She'd pulled a muscle in her arm; her younger self would be ashamed at how little it currently took for her body to start falling apart.

Tony's eyes went wide as Emilena took a fall when that odd creature narrowly dodged her assault. "Dammit!" he exclaimed, seeing the other fellow draw a gun. "Ah shit!" he bent down to help the vulpine back up to her feet. "Not in the slightest! We should probably get out of here... whatever he injected me with... don't feel anything at present but... this place is about to get real hot!" he pointed out, numerous thug looking goons emerging from the SUVs. The red and black dino-dog opened fire on them, immediately dropping one, though they quickly returned fire, causing Tony to stay low with Emilena.

"Can you move?" he asked her, looking her over. "My car is in the lot... they're straight ahead, and it's off to the left so... we might be able to get around them... they're probably after him... so... if you need help moving, let me know." he told her, keeping his head under the lower part of the wall so they wouldn't be taking any bullets to the skull as rounds began slamming into the bar...

Zula was pushed off the stool and onto the ground by the assailant ' Hey! watch where you are going!' the lioness said in a flustered voice, as she slowly got to her feet. then the bar erupted with the sound og gunfire and zula dove lolw to the ground' Look' she called to Tony. my apartment is close buy, and I have bandages if her leg is banged up.. ' Do you guys have a car? i walked here from the apartment, and i think we need a quick get away." she looked out towards the street. Hanging out near apartment building was a holosoign that changed to show a large cop with a badge. ' Chief broadstreet here ' the cop intoned. ' reminding everyone in Corona that the speed limit is being changed next week from 60 to 65. Tickets for speeding are also been increased by 50 creds per offense, the first ticket is now 300 creds. "I'm fine," Emilena assured, massaging her bicep. "Zula, stay low!" She tried to pull the lioness behind the bar, but as bullets punctured the woodwork she realized it wasn't doing much for cover.

She hesitated. Tony and Zula wanted to flee, but should she? This was her first time feeling truly alive in months. She never thought she'd see live combat again; half of her wanted to stand up and ask the secret agent for a gun so she could cover him. Worst case scenario, one of these thugs might shoot me and I'd bleed out in front of everyone. I could stop withering away, they'd remember me in my prime like Lily and Nairda and... Suddenly she realized with horror where her urge to stay was coming from.

The deciding factor came when her former boss, Chief Broadstreet, appeared on the television. That old codger is still working the streets? She hadn't heard from him in years; she figured he'd died or at least retired by now. The gunfire suddenly felt oddly nostalgic, flashing her back to the dozens of dangerous cases they'd worked together. Well, if that stubborn bull can keep existing, I can too. "I've got a car in the back," she replied to Zula, gritting her teeth and sprinting for the back door. "Sorry Tony, but I think you've lost another priceless vintage..."

As Emilena suddenly broke for the back door, Tony ground his teeth together. "Goddamn it!" He was about to follow her, but hesitated, as the agent ahead of him calmly dropped another one. "I can't do that!" He hissed back to her, not breaking in her direction, but drawing a Glock and keeping low as he sprinted out into the parking lot, ducking behind a big SUV, and snapping his eyes closed for a moment, his teeth still clenched. "Get out while you can! I'll try and circle around and meet up with you!" He yelled over to them, a bunch of patrons running in between him and Emilena. He wasn't about to open fire on any of them and draw attention to himself.

The agent glanced to his left, seeing Tony out in the parking lot... asset was on the move... but that's fine... they so far hadn't noticed him... which was a good thing. So long as they didn't know he had it... he was safe. Dashing off more to the left and the edge of the bar, he fired fluidly to try and keep them back.

As Tony peered around the SUV on the safe side of it, he didn't see anyone, so dashed in between cars, sticking low, and heading for his own, which happened to one of his favorites: his convertible Daimler De-36 drophead coupe. Because it was probably only one of a kind at this point, he couldn't abandon it. It was irreplaceable... and of course... he'd just picked today to bring it out when he was getting shot at. "Goddamn bastards." he growled. It wasn't his fastest car by far... but so long as this didn't turn into a car chase... he'd be fine.

Peering out around the next parked car, he narrowed his eyes, then saw a goon running into the parking lot, most likely to flank that bastard who'd injected him. Popping out from his cover, he shot the guy in the back, causing him to fly forward and into the pavement, his SMG clattering to the ground.

By now, the agent was falling back, as the bar was getting rushed by too many enemies at once, so he was keeping lower, heading for the back of the bar, and unsure yet which direction he'd be breaking in...

Emilena staggered into the back parking lot; the assailants were focused on the secret agent, which allowed all of the bar patrons to escape with their lives. "Zula, where's Tony?" She asked, looking around wildly. "Come to think of it...where's my car?"

It appears her chauffeur had fled when the shooting started. Goddammit Wikus... "Zula, you said you walked here?" she asked. "We might need somewhere to hide out for a bit, figure out what Tony has to do with all this."

we can go to my apartment, it will be just the 3 of us ' Zula said, my girlfriend Mukua is likely still at the tennis club, giving private lessons to a few of the students. sher and i spend long stretches at the club, 14-16 hour days are common before tennis tournaments. Anyway, you lot like dont care much about what i do, you just want a place to crash.. My apartment is two blocks down, its the tall white building to the right. my apartment is on the 3rd floor. its pretty nice, has a good view of the beach from the main window, large tv and fridge. if you guys are hungry, we just went shopping for food yesterday. so we have loads of stuff. Tony dashed to his massive car now, which fortunately was a right-side driver, making it easy to get in on this side. As he slid behind the maroon wheel, he pushed the started button and grit his teeth. "Come you sonofabitch, come on you sonofabitch, comeonyousonofabitch!" he rapidly urged, exhaling when the pristine straight-eight came to life. "Yes! Thank you!" he praised the Daimler. Releasing the parking brake, he pre-selected 1st gear, pressed the shift pedal in, and got the machine rolling, pre-selecting 2nd almost immediately with the lever on the side of the steering wheel and soon shifting into that next. As he spun the big car around the lot, he headed around behind the SUVs, most of which weren't manned now due to the goons entering the bar.

As the mammoth silver and maroon car coasted into view of Emilena and Zula, the ferret waved to them. "Hurry up!" he called, slowing down as he pre-selected 3rd gear, but didn't shift, as the car could easily slow roll in 2nd. This would be for later when they needed to take off. The car could comfortably sit five with its large seats, so space wasn't an issue. Once they were inside, he was ready to tear out of there like a bat out of hell.

In the bar, the agent suddenly let loose with a small grenade, letting it obliterate the first three goons to enter, and he used the cover to start to exit, firing as he did so. Seeing the big car with Tony in it, he figured he may as well stick with the guy and explain what happened... but first he had to escape...

"Tell your girlfriend to stay where she is if she's not home," Emilena advised. "Trouble tends to follow us, and she'll be safer staying away." She glanced at the lioness. "In fact, if you want to just cut and run, this is the time to do it. I won't tell anybody, and it's honestly the right call." She took a deep breath. "The people who hang around me and Tony don't have the greatest survival rates."

As if on cue, Tony pulled up in his massive convertible and Emilena sprinted across the parking lot for it. The car hadn't looked that large when she'd only seen it an angle from the far side of the bar, but now she couldn't believe people in the 1940s used to drive vehicles this big. Speaking of the car's old-fashioned construction... "We don't have to worry about this car breaking down or exploding if the bad guys shoot it, do we?" she asked Tony, vaulting over the door without bothering to open it. She ducked down under the seat, not wanting to risk keeping her head in the enemy line of fire.

not a chance ' zula said rushing over and climbing into the back seat with a hurdle that would have done credit to a hurdle jumper at a state meet. 'you'd better get going ' she said too tony " Head straight. then turn to the right . my apartment has a private car garage. i'll let us in with the entry key and you can park wherever you like. I'll explain to Mukua that you are guests, we have friends over pretty regularly, so she wont care. I think she likes playing hostess' She chuckled. "Not gonna happen!" Tony replied to Emilena, whipping the car around so that it was pointing straight down the street. Pushing the accelerator down, he floored it, moving the big car forward at a good clip as he finally shifted into 3rd. Rocketing down the street, he could see the apartment. "At least it's an enclosed garage..." but before he could finish, the bar erupted in a fiery explosion behind them, causing Tony's eyes to widen as he looked in the rearview mirror. "Goddamn! What the hell happened back there?" he asked, gulping as he turned the Daimler into the garage's opening, having previously downshifted to 2nd to do so.

"Back there", Agent Dartmouth had placed a plastic-explosive, blowing most of the bar to hell as he escaped in the utter chaos, most of his opponents now dead. Having run into the street and taken cover behind a dumpster, he peered from behind it and saw the big and very conspicuous car pulling into a garage two blocks away... perfect... easy enough! He'd find them... and then he could explain things.

As Tony rolled through the garage, he picked a spot well clear of other cars, and gingerly nursed the big boat into a spot, doubting he completely fit, but not caring at this point. Shutting it off, he exhaled. "Hoo! Glad I saved this one! It's irreplaceable, essentially." he said, opening the door to allow the others out. "So.. lead the way." he said, climbing out now and holding the door open for them.

foollow me ' zula said opening a stairwell that lead up to the main apartment building. after a couple flights she opened the door to the third floor, amnd held it open for Tony and Emilena before closing. this floor was almost maze like and there were no direction placards on the ewall to show where each apartment was. Zula went left, then right, then right again, then 3 straight lefts, 2 rights, a left and then four more rights, before finally stoping in front of a door at the end of a curve in the hallway. she opened the door with a ket, and revealed a room, that was well organized and kept neat. a decent sized tv screen hung in the wall. the only sign that thee as any clutter was a bag with 3 tennis rackets sticking out of it, as a uniform that said 'coach' Mukua' on it, that covered the racquets. " just make yourselves at home guys ' Zula said ' can i get you anything to drink ? wine? beer? Soda? theres snacks in the cabinet over there, either crackers, raisins or granola .' She said.

Emilena's ears perked in alarm when the bar exploded; she could hear it even from her position on the floor of the car. Thank god everyone had enough time to evacuate...who the hell were those guys?

She crawled out of the car and followed Zula to her apartment, which was nicely upper-middle class. Emilena realized she'd never lived in a place like this; overnight she'd gone from the fringes of society to the 1%. "Thanks for offering to let us stay," she mentioned to Zula, pouring herself a glass of water from the sink. "Let me know what this is costing, I can financially compensate--" She suddenly realized that she'd left her credit card on the counter of the bar. "--Uh, let's discuss that later. Tony, are you okay?" She brought him a glass too. "Let me see your neck. How is the injection point feeling? Are you experiencing any unusual symptoms?"

When Tony seemed to be doing okay, Emilena handed him his water and turned to Zula. "Sure, let's check the place out." She didn't mention she was mostly examining its durability in case of an attack.

The guest quarters were small but well-furnished, one for her and one for Tony. Emilena nodded approvingly as Zula showed her the various rooms. "How do you afford an apartment this large on a tennis coach's salary?" she asked, surreptitiously feeling the walls. They were insulated wood, not much protection if bullets started flying. Bullets... she realized her firearms were back at her apartment, which was almost certainly being watched by now.

The television was on; it was an empty channel, but it reminded her of seeing Broadstreet on the screen at the bar. "Um, Zula, could I borrow a phone?" she asked. Whatever that agent had injected Tony with, she suspected the forces chasing it weren't going to let it slip through their fingers. If the government was involved, she couldn't trust her bank account or what few contacts she'd kept in touch with since entering the public spotlight. I need someone who will loan me a gun. And nobody would expect me to contact a police chief I haven't met in years...hopefully.

(OOC: I posted a character sheet for Storch in the Master List (http://www.gangoffive.net/index.php?topic=16065.msg481015#msg481015). He's going to be my other character, a secondary recurring villain.)

On the other side of town, a grizzled bat flew through the darkness with one eye open. Well...one eye open most of the time. To be honest, it was so dark at this point that he was navigating mostly via muscle memory than by tracking any of the fleeting lit windows or neon signs down below.

A buzz in his pocket roused him from his semi-conscious flight. Murmuring wearily, he fished his smartphone out of his pocket just long enough to activate text-to-speech, hitting a thermal so he could compensate for the loss in height from temporarily occupying a wing. "Phone, read the message."

It cheerfully chirped the name of the sender: his ex-wife. "DID YOU DO YOUR WHATEVER?"

"Tell her yes," Storch wheezed. He always lost his breath by the middle of this particular flight; he couldn't stop in bars or hostels immediately after a hit, nor could he trust public transportation to deliver him to the outskirts of the city. Combined, that led to a long and thoroughly unpleasant journey into the mountains.

The phone buzzed from a new message. "WERE YOU PAID?"

"Yes…" Storch gritted his teeth as a flush of cold air chilled him to the bone. His body didn't hold up like it used to.

"HOW MUCH?"

He did some mental math. 40,000 credits for the banker, and 10,000 for his lawyer… "Tell her: '30 thousand credits. How much do you need?'"

"I'D LIKE ALL OF IT, IF POSSIBLE. JOEY'S GOT A COUGH, AND SKYLER REALLY WANTS TO GO TO SPACE CAMP. PLUS MY FOOD STAMPS WERE DENIED."

Storch sighed. He'd already warned her that would happen if she didn't get a job. "Space camp, huh?... Tell her I'll send 40k."

She didn't reply again. Storch gratefully saw his cabin up ahead and landed none-too-gently on his second-floor balcony. Limping gingerly through the only entrance that wasn't booby-trapped, Storch quickly grabbed a matchbox from the kitchen and lit the living room fireplace before collapsing with a weak shudder into an armchair. It would take hours for the flames to warm the room, but just being sheltered from the chill mountain air was enough for now.

He almost fell asleep right then and there, but his combat harness was cutting into his joints. Wincing gruffly, he forced himself to stand and remove his flight uniform despite the draft. Goosebumps quickly covered his skin, his thin greying fur doing little these days to insulate him. He cast a disgruntled look at his feeble hearth; it was supposedly a mechanical fireplace and he'd love to see instant full-power flames like in the commercials, yet he could never get the darn thing to work. "Well, a cold night never killed me before…" he grunted to his sniper rifle, laying it on the drawing table. Tomorrow they'd go hunting for small wildlife to eat, but for tonight he only wanted to sleep.

He was halfway to the bedroom when his phone buzzed repeatedly. His brow furrowed; only his most trusted, highest-paying clients got three buzzes. Sighing and rubbing his eyes, he checked the text.

He recognized the contractors; he'd worked for them in the past. He also recognized the targets; a handsome ferret and heavily-scarred vixen he'd seen on the television a lot. And finally he recognized just how many zeroes were in the bounty. "Jesus almighty…" he breathed, double-checking the details. "With exclusivity?" His hands shook as he almost dropped the phone. "What in the hell did these two do?"

He glanced at the inky blackness outside his windows and sighed. Looks like he would be going hunting tomorrow...but not for food.

Emilena took a deep breath. Maybe he'll have changed his phone number...he likely switched providers after Lanthae was destroyed. She couldn't decide if she hoped he'd answer or not. She'd changed so much since they last spoke; there may be nothing left of the upstart junior officer he'd always known. Would he be proud of what she'd become? Would he have seen her face splayed across the worldwide news?

She took a deep breath and dialed the numbers. The call went through...though she could only wonder if it was connecting to her intended recipient. "Rucker? If it's you...this is former Officer Echo."

Echo? my my , this a surprise. Whats the occasion?' Rucker Broadstreet had developed a reputation over his long career of being scrupulously honest, any cops that were crooked , got summarily walked out of police HQ. " dont tell me that you are in trouble again. you always were in trouble of one kind or another when you were on my force. " _ the door to the apartment opened, and mukua entered, slowly staggering under a large bag full of takeover from the restaurant. Hope everyone likes mac and cheese and fettuccine alfredo ' she said softly as she set the food down on the kitchen table. the portions of food were enormous , easily enough to fed a decent sized family, or party. " Help yourselves"

Emilena's breath caught in her throat; she hadn't heard her old boss in years, and she found herself regressing back into a junior officer as his commanding voice set the tone of the conversation. "Goddamn, you sound like you haven't aged a day. I don't know how you do it..."

She gave Murkua a polite wave before moving to a private room. "I don't know if you've been following the news at all, Rucker, but life's gotten a bit more complicated for me since we last spoke..." she sighed. "Jesus, I don't think I could even begin to explain everything that's happened to me. But yes, I am in trouble and I could use your help." Her voice cracked. "I was in the wrong place at the wrong time, and now someone wants me dead. Someone connected, I've lost access to my bank account and my property. I'm not asking for police protection, but I could really use a gun. Any gun will do, you know I'm trained with all standard-issue police sidearms." A remote possibility suddenly sparked in her mind, and she couldn't help but add, "That being said...you wouldn't happen to have my old assigned pistol, would you? Serial number XCCFRM G17?"

Title: Re: After the Storm

G17 Glock. 15 rounds 9mm.' Broadstreet said " yes i still have it. Its stored in the discipline wing of the police building. all the officers who we fire, we take and keep their weapons on display. we never officially fired you, you know, technically you are still on the force, just under probation, which by the by has long since expired. so, if you want to officially be reinstated, you just need to fill out a couple forms and we'd get you a fresh uniform, Echo. you also have a large number of payments headed your way, as your probation didnt affect your pay. let me pull out a calculator here.. hmm. you have 2 years of back pay.. at your old salary of 20 an hour, that 800 a week, 3200 a month 38400 a year, 76800 total. basically 77 grand'. Broadstreet said. "so how do you want it? creds card or check?"

Title: Re: After the Storm

Emilena dropped the phone in shock. Not only did they still have her personal gun, but they were also ready to take her back at a moment's notice? She could be a police officer again?

Her mind alit with the possibilities of settling back into the law and order she'd always known. Of redeeming herself for her sordid past. But then reality caught up with her; as much as she wanted to, she couldn't sweep all her crimes under the rug. While she wanted desperately to pick the phone up and agree wholeheartedly, Broadstreet deserved the whole story. She wouldn't begin her second stint as a lawkeeper while hiding a walk-in closet full of skeletons.

"Chief," she started, scrambling to return the phone to her ear, "I'm...honored to hear you'd consider taking me back. And even that you'd treat it as if I'd never left. But I've been AWOL for two years, and I've committed so many crimes...I've peddled millions of credits worth of illegal substances. I've killed people. I've stolen vehicles, disrupted foreign governments, I even maintained a longterm sexual relationship with what turned out to be my biological brother." Her cheeks reddened. "Now, I have received a presidential pardon for all those things, so technically they no longer apply. But you have a right to know before letting me re-enlist. My moral compass didn't turn out as strong as I always thought it was."

She remembered he'd mentioned something about probation payments. "If you still want to give me that backpay, I'll need it as a creds card since I can't access my bank account. It'll help keep me and Tony alive as we sort this business out. And if I survive this, I'd love to come back to work...if your offer is still on the table."

Post by: Nick22 on May 29, 2019, 09:02:06 PM

Broadstreet listened to her story and sighed ' let me get this straight. you were on probation then we lost track of you, and in that period you did a whole bunch of sordid and unethical crap? you sure have a lot of skeleton s in your closet, dont you Echo ? and I'm not even going to touch your relationship with your brother. Still, an offer is an offer. get this matter settled with Stracci, consider this the penance for the illegal crap you've pulled over the past 2 years. , now according to this file , you got a full pardon for those transgressions, so legally speaking, you're clean. But theres a big difference between innocence based on deed and innocence based on technicality. i do not want any further nonsense involving you echo, am I clear? i run a clean ship here, or at least strive to keep it clean. i do the best I can with what I have. I will be sending you a package in the next few hours. it will contain a few things you will find useful, besides, of course the money. your contact on this case is a young lion named Struphorn. been on the force just over a year. rather headstrong but his loyalty cannot be questioned. excellent with a gun, in fact he won the office target accuracy challenge with a score of 7, 560 points with 45 perfect targets hit. you re to arrange a meet with him at the earliest possibility. am i clear, Officer Echo?' Broadstreet said firmly"

"He scored a 7?" Emilena nodded approvingly. She'd never scored better than a 4, though she'd always been one of the lower-ranked officers when it came to firearm accuracy. "I understand and agree with everything you say, chief; I'll be squeaky-clean from here on out." She wasn't sure she'd be able to live up to that promise, but that was a problem for a later date. "I really appreciate your help here. And if I survive this, I'll prove your trust was in the right place." She hesitated before hanging up. "It's...good to hear your voice again, Rucker. I hope you're doing well."

She returned to the kitchen and gave Zula her phone back. "Thanks again. And nice to meet you, Mukua. My name is Emilena." She grabbed a bowl from the cupboard and spooned herself some fettuccini alfredo. "We hope it's not too much trouble to house a pair of strangers at such short notice."

It was a cold summer evening in the parking lot outside the post office. This late, there were few pedestrians; a couple walking their dog, a city worker blowing leaves off the sidewalk, and an old woman feeding pidgeons on the neaby park bench.

Emilena knew the old woman was the least likely of the assorted civilians to be an assassin, but she couldn't stop staring at her. That's what I look like... she thought to herself. That's how everyone sees me. Withered and gray, with a limp in my walk.

She gulped. Well, at least I'm still capable of walking to the post office without falling and breaking my hip. Taking a deep breath, she finally waddled out of Zula's car and approached the postal building, heart hammering behind her summer blouse and the sunglasses Zula had loaned her.

She was dismayed to notice the inside was a bit more populated than the exterior; outside of the clerk, several different men were standing in line to mail packages, open safety-deposit boxes, or purchase stamps.

"Hiya!" grinned the clerk, a freckled young woman with bright green hair. "Name?"

"Last name Echo." Emilena tried to look nonchalant; she wished she could have persuaded Broadstreet to mail her package to an alias. She noticed the man buying stamps glance over; what was he interested in? What was he hiding?

"Here you, Ma'am!" The clerk had barely handed over the box before Emilena was scrambling for the door as quickly as her withered legs could carry her.

Five minutes later, she collapsed back into the passenger seat of Zula's car. "We...did it," she gasped. "Nobody attacked me." She clutched it to her chest. "You were right...I think I'm letting my paranoia get away from me."

" just because you are paranoid, doesnt mean you are not sometimes right to be paranoid ' Zula said as she picked away from her parking space. ' So what is in the package ' Zula asked as she headed out on to the street. ' must be pretty important to get youoff of the coach and away from the television ' Zula chuckled. ' Emilenma hhad been more or less a renter of a room in her apartment for several weeks. It wasnt until after Emilena paid them some 'rent" that Zuka and her girlfriend had realized something : Emilena was LOADED. Thanks to Emilena, Zula and her girlfrend Mukua had made improvements to the apartment, including a bigger TV, a a more modern refrigerator that held more food, and better lighting.

Emilena sliced open the packaging tape with her claw and peeled aside the bubble wrap. "There you are..." Her gaze was immediately drawn to the black stubby pistol nestled snuggly on top. Even with the barest glance she could tell it was hers, despite Broadstreet having clearly polished and buffed it in preparation. As she wrapped her fingers around its handle and rested her thumb on the safety, she felt like she'd suddenly grown ten years younger.

Underneath the pistol was several spare magazines and credit chips; Emilena didn't check the chips' monetary value but dropped half of them in the car's cupholder for Zula. Last but not least, she unfolded the stiffy-pressed uniform and held it up to the light. "Wow, it looks..." her face fell. It looked perfect...too perfect. "I can't wear this," she admitted, dropping it back into the box. "It's a field uniform. Like an officer would wear while on-duty. But I could never pass for that now, looking like I do. Nobody would believe an ancient hag could arrest anybody."

She quickly removed her sunglasses, hoping against hope the attire looked better in full light, but it only reaffirmed how innaporporiate the dashing uniform would look on a withered body like hers. Fighting to keep her shame from showing on her face, she quickly shut the box and tried to recapture that fleeting comfort from having reclaimed her favorite gun.

From a skyscraper roof, Storch kept the target right in his crosshairs. He had the perfect shot; but something made him hold his fire. The target had just removed her sunglasses, giving him the barest glace of her silvery hair and wrinkled face. That can't possibly be her...can it?

He checked the profile picture on the bounty:

This mugshot was from last year? He had one more second to review his target; he recognized the high cheek bones, yellow eyes...but almost nothing else. Did she get plastic surgery to look old? Is that how she dropped off the radar so effectively?

The opportunity for a clean headshot passed. Sighing, he twisted his rifle's chamberbolt to swap his ammo type and sniped the car's back bumper. A miniscule tracker embedded into the chassis with an imperceptible piff. He needed more information, and the first step would be casing wherever she's currently living.

you really have aged , then/' Zula sighed. ' you didnt act like this when you first moved in ' Zula said as she drove down the street. "What do you think is causing it? we could take you to a doctor, have you checked out. Mukua thinks we need to find out why you are , well aging so rapidly. its like that movie where the kid ages 4 times faster than normal. where hes 40 by 10 and 72 by 18. "Zula said. "Perhaps broadstreet could give you a desk job then? you said you wanted to be a cop, right? not every cop walks a patrol, after all."

"I've had doctors look into it, and frankly, with my medical history there's basically no way to know," Emilena admitted. "The prevailing theory is it's a side effect of the Growth Acceleration procedure, but it could also be from how many times I've recovered in suspended stasis pods. It might even be from all that psionic healing my former partner gave me, who knows how that worked." In general she tried not to go into detail with anyone on her checkered past, but she and Zula had spent too many nights drinking wine and idly chatting that eventually everything just came up in conversation.

She leaned back in her seat, feeling the adrenaline rush from her post office trip wearing off. "And we can't really risk a hospital visit right now, not when there are people trying to kill me. Frankly, now that I'm armed I've been strongly considering striking out alone, I don't want to bring harm on you and your roommate." I just wish I had some sort of clue on how to start investigating them back...

" striking out alone isnt a good idea, particularly with people after you. There's safety in having allies and a place to rest your head. further, hospitals have security and doctors who can find out what is the - well, 'problem' isnt the right word, though. Health issue" works better.' Zula said. ' If we dont get a handle on your condition, soon, you wont be able to do much of anything, you'll look, and feel like 100 years old. Won;t be able to evade your pursers much at that point.Granted they may not think it sporting or worth it to bag a 100 year old lady." Zula said.

"You wouldn't be able to afford all the doctors I've already seen about this. No offense." Emilena shielded her eyes from the setting sun; they were almost back to the apartment. "It's just something I have to live with."

They were almost home to Zula's apartment, and Emilena was feeling uncharacteristically tired even for this early in the evening. "I appreciate you and Murkua sticking your necks out for me," she added, just in case her last comment sounded flippant. "You don't need to be doing any of this, and I wish I could repay you. If I'm ever fully in the clear, it's the first thing I plan to do."
